Around the Town

With the Editor

Well, this is more like it. After the last couple of weeks of being shut down, we can get at least a running start into 1957.

Milt Ritenour did his best to get us going again last week when he welded the broken linotype part. But I guess old age much have crept up on the part. It seemed to crystalize as I was re-installing it and it broke again. So there was a little wait until Mergenthaler at Chicago sent a rush part order.

How time does fly. Here it is, the begining of another new year and time to start over again with "Number 1" at the top right of the page.

Some subscribers have probably wondered about their receiving credit for renewals in the past four or five weeks. If you paid in that period and didn't notice a change in your expiration date next to your name on the address of your paper, look again this week. I think I've got them all caught up.

Marjorie Ramsey called up this week to give notice to local telephone patrons that the telephone office in St. Joe will be closed Monday and Friday until 1 p.m. until further notice. So, if you're planning to pay the telephone bill before they cut the wires, remember those half days at the telephone office. They will give Marjorie a chance to receive medical treatments from her doctor.

One thing the editor has to watch out for when those weeks occur when the Sunday school lesson doesn't appear in the News is Charlie Krise — or his Mrs. They regularly use the lesson in their teaching of a Sunday school class, and if they don't have their paper by Saturday morning, over to St. Joe they come for a copy of the paper with the lesson. A lot of folks use the lesson—if they get it on time!

Which brings up the matter of New Year's resolutions. This ought to be a good time for the editor to resolve to have the paper in the mail on time every week—say Wednesday night. A good trick? It sure would be. But it's possible.

So, let's see what happens beginning with next week. This one didn't count what with a holiday thrown in right practically in the middle.

—And don't you go calling in on Wednesday afternoon or Thursday morning to ask if it's too late to get an item in. It's always supposed to have been Tuesday noon, the deadline, but what with one thing and another the deadline gets lost in the shuffle.

Gertrude Borthwick sent in an appropriate composition of hers inspired by the holiday happenings which we'll just have to save for next week.

Don't go 'way—it's worth waitin' for.

I strolled through fabulous temples with minarets in the sky;
I marveled at the Taj Mahal, the "Hanging Gardens", too,
The mighty sphinx and pyramids, and Jordan's sacred view.
I rode elephants and camels and in some rickshas quaint;
I saw many ocean sunsets which I wished that I could paint.
Around the world I went by plane - many, many thousand miles,
Covering four continents and numerous obscure isles...

FOUR GOSPELS

Lesson for January 6, 1957

The story of the Wise Men who came to see the baby Jesus is so familiar that this column will deal this week with a question in the background of all study of the Gospels. Matthew is to be the book studied in the churches during the next three months. The existence of four gospels raises a very ancient question: Why more than one? The early Christian church was somewhat embarrassed by that question. More attempts than one were made to discard all but one, or else to combine them all into one harmonized story. If the four gospels are alike, why repeat? And if they are different, which is right? Most of the problems involved cannot even be raised here. But there is room to set down a few notes on that one question: what is the point of having four gospels?

Gospels and Gospel

The conclusion to which the early church came, and for which we may well be grateful, is that there is only one Gospel, but four gospels. Adopted at a very early date were the heading we still read: The Gospel: according to Matthew, according to Mark—and so on. The gospels tell different stories, but the story is still the same. They all bear witness to the same Christ. Just as in a courtroom trial it it important if possible to have more than one eye-witness report of an accident, it is valuable to have more than one report of the life, character and teaching of Jesus. But just as in court, it would raise suspicion if all the eye-witnesses agreed on all details, so it would raise suspicion and be of no help if all our gospels agreed in details. The essentials of the four gospels are all the same; and the variations add to our knowledge. It is plain that the early church must have thought that each gospel had something indispensable, or else they would never have kept it. It should be remembered that our four gospels were not the only ones in existence. The early church did a good job of sifting, as any one can see who will take the trouble to read some of the fantastic or dull productions the church rejected. (See "The Apocryphal New Testament" in any large library.)

Portraits

Not one of the gospels is what in modern times would be called a "definitive biography" of Jesus— a story so complete that no one would ever bother to investigate further. They are not biographies at all. They are not photographs, they are more like portraits. A commercial photograph is a neutral sort of thing. A portrait is an interpretation. Mark interprets Jesus as the mighty Son of God with power. Very little teaching is reported by Mark—it is all action, and rapid action, too. Luke's portrait is of the broad humanity of Jesus, his sympathy with all men, with women and children, too. He gives us Jesus, the ideal human being. John's portrait interprets Jesus as the divine Son of God, in constant touch and harmony with the Father on high, doing the works of God and teaching the truth of God. In other gospels Jesus' teaching is, so to speak, in his own name. In John the reader is never allowed to forget that it is all the teaching of God. Matthew combines the wonder-worker and the teacher in one portrait; Jesus appears as the One with Authority. From the very beginning, where Jesus is presented as the scion of kings, to the end where he is given "all outhority in heaven and earth", he moves with majesty and power.

Viewpoints

Not only are the portraits different, but the viewpoints of the four gospels are varied. Two features of Matthew's point of view will be evident all the way along. One is that he tries to interest Jewish readers. He quotes the Old Testament more often than any other gospel; he traces Jesus' family tree back to Abraham through the Hebrew kings (quite a contrast to the family tree given by Luke). To this day it remains one of the best gospels for interesting Jews in the life of Jesus. The other feature is that while Matthew begins, as it were, on the small stage of the Jewish people, he does not remain there. The Christ who comes first only as heir to the throne of David is at last seen to have the very authority of God himself. Already in the gifts of the wise men Matthew hints his truth: Christ is Lord of all men everywhere.

We aim to give one kind of service to everyone ... the best that's possible. That means supplying our customers with what they want when they want it. It means being courteous at all times and maintaining attractive easy-to-do-business-with offices. It means doing everything we can to keep complaints from arising, and it means prompt and fair handling of those that do.

We are a citizen of each community we serve and take an active part in its affairs. Like any other citizen, we want our neighbors to think well of us. Besides, it makes good business-sense. We can only prosper as the community prospers so we help it thrive in every way we can.

Such is our job as we see it. We are trying to do it well and to do it better all the time.

HAPPY NEW YEAR

Since the end of fifty-six is drawing near,
I'll wish you all "A Happy New Year."
A year of peace and hope and love,
All in accord with Christ above.
May we be, with one and another,
Just like a sister and a brother.
I hope, before this year is ended,
Our troubles in the East will all be mended.
May it a year of prosperity be,
With lots of improvements for you and me.

The St. Joe News

VOLUME LXXII — ST. JOE, (DeKalb Co.), IND. — Thursday, January 10, 1957 — NUMBER 2

Indiana State Library

Around the Town

With the Editor

Ronald Dwyer dropped a few lines last week noting that he's on the way home.

"Hi Ted,

Just a few lines to let you know that I have appreciated your sending the St. Joe News to me while I am in the service.

It really helps a guy keep up with the home town happenings so far from home.

I should be home in a very short time. So you can stop sending the News, as I won't be able to receive it.

I want to thank you again for sending the News, and I know that all the other service men from that area enjoy receiving it as much as I have.

As ever,
Ronald Dwyer

P.S. I hope that it isn't too cold back there. After this climate in Hawaii for 3 1-4 years I would hate to freeze.

The temp today is a nice 85 degrees."

I'd hate to see him freeze, too, but back here there's a possibility.

What with all the Zimmermans at Spencerville, including the Rays and Roys, I had the wrong ones getting the News for the last couple of weeks. I guess it's all straigtened out now.

It's kinda fun to keep watch on the basketball scores from year to year, especially the underclassmen, and see the same names popping up from time to time, the same as apeared in box scores during past years for the local schools. Those games reported this week - take a look. Here comes another Hollabaugh, another Butler, another Wallace, another Depew, another Dowden.

—I can't wait till the Haberkorns start popping up - again - and again - and again - and - - O.K. Mom, I'll stop.

Sometimes you just don't know what to say about something. But the fact is that another new face has entered into the barbershop picture. For one reason or another the gentleman operating the barbershop in St. Joe for the past few weeks "took off". Mose Yeiser immediately got on the ball and contacted Jerry Leeson of Garrett who had indicated an interest in the shop just after the aforementioned gentleman had opened it.

Jerry came right over here Monday evening and, with some elbow grease offered by his parents, cleaned up the shop for business. He is open evenings from 6 p.m. to 9:30 p. m. except Thursday when he will have the shop open from 9 a.m. until 6 p.m. If things work out right, Jerry will open the shop full time here. He is currently clipping at Garrett, taking his day off, Thursday, to come here and keep the shop open all day.

Scouts Run Klondike Derby Saturday

This community will again be the scene of the Boy Scout "Klondike Derby" to be held this year this coming Saturday, January 12, at the same location as was used last year. The comments on the St. Joe location were so favorable last year that the return engagement was arranged.

The derby will cover a course running from Kees' gravel pit to the B&O railroad and the St. Joe River, then to the John Engle farm. This is the reverse of last year's derby which began at the Engle farm.

Scout troops from the North District will participate, including those from DeKalb, Steuben and Noble counties. Near 100 Scouts are expected to take part in the event which will test their skills at stations located along the course. Included will be tests in knot tying, first aid and ice rescue, compass, fire building and cooking and Morse code signaling.

Five Scouts make up each patrol covering the course. They furnish a sled of the arctic type, built by the Scouts. The sled is large enough to carry one of the Scouts and all of their equipment.

Roger Chase of Albion, camping and activities director for the North District, is in charge of the derby. It will start at 9 a.m. and continue until the last patrol has completed the course. The local Lions Club has again offered to serve refreshments to the Scouts and their leaders. These will be served at Sechler's pickle factory.

Parents of the Scouts and the general public are invited to attend the derby and observe the Scouts in action at various points along the route.

Services For Minnie Gee Thursday

Mrs. Minnie V. Gee, 87, widow of Laney Gee who resided in St. Joe, died at 9:00 a. m. Monday in the Rose Haven Rest Home in Hicksville. She had resided at the home since December 5. In failing health for several years due to her advanced age and a complication of diseases, Mrs. Gee died of a cerebral hemorrhage.

The deceased was born July 23, 1869, in Wilmington Township, DeKalb County, the daughter of George W. and Elizabeth Hollopeter Swartz who were pioneer residents of the community. Her early life was spent in that vicinity and when a young girl she learned the dressmaking trade which vocation she engaged in for several years. On December 1, 1897, she was united in marriage with Laney Gee of Concord Township. Their early married life was lived south of Butler. In 1905 they moved to the farm home northeast of Coburntown. Later they moved to Blytheville, Arkansas, and after about nine years, they returned to the farm in Concord Township. In 1929 they moved to St. Joe where Mr. Gee passed away on February 7, 1943. Mrs. Gee continued to live in St. Joe until a year and a half ago when her failing health caused her to go to the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mildred Jarrett of east of St. Joe.

Mrs. Gee was a member of the Coburntown Church of Christ where she took an active part in all church afafirs as long as her health permitted. She was also a member of the Rural Housewives Club.

Survivors include the daughter; a foster brother, A. R. Zimmerman, of Bailey, Mich.; five grandchildren, Harold Curie of St. Joe, Mrs. Robert Evans of Hicksville, Carlton Curie of Cuzco, Indiana, and Janet and Robert Jarrett of St. Joe; two great-grandchildren, Charles Curie and Johnnie Evans; and several nieces and nephews.

The body was taken to the Perkins & Reeb Funeral Home in Hicksville until Wednesday morning when it was taken to the home of the daughter.

Services will be conducted at 2:00 p.m. Thursday in the Coburntown Church of Christ. J. W. Mellick, pastor of the church, will officiate. Burial will be in the K of P Cemetery at St. Joe.

Service Station Opens This Week In St. Joe

The Mobilgas service station located at the west end of St. Joe opened for business on Monday of this week. Roger Laub, owner of the station, has announced that Gene "Casey" Casebere of Butler is the manager of the new service station. Mr. Casebere has had past experience in service work, having been employed at a station in Butler for the past two years offering the same line of petroleum products.

The new station includes two pumps for gasoline sales, a line of automobile accessories and service work on automobiles and trucks. The service department includes a two-stall installation for service work and car washing.

The new station was built during the summer of 1956, completed around August 1.

AN OPEN LETTER

Dear Governor:

Last week we heard news reports concerning your attitude toward the tax problems of the state of Indiana, in particular that of the collecting of the Indiana State Gross Income Tax. Other news reports in the past few weeks have indicated that there are many Hoosiers who are failing to report their earnings and thus are avoiding the payment of the tax, at least in part.

The news report of your attitude revealed that you made a statement somewhat along this line: "I do not approve of withholding the gross income tax from the employee's paycheck, forcing some citizens to become tax collectors for the government; it's a matter of principle. However, if the state legislature does approve such a measure and a bill is passed providing for the withholding of the gross income tax, I would sign the bill."

Mr. Governor, we appreciate the responsibilities that are placed upon the shoulders of leaders of our government, elected by the people to serve their best interests. Within those last few words comes the reason for this letter - "elected by the people to serve their best interests." It has been our opinion in the past, at such time as we are subject to the campaign oratory of the many candidates for public office, that, in particular, those seeking election to our Indiana State Legislature place too much emphasis upon the idea of representing the people in their district by seeking legislation that will benefit those people, not as citizens of a state (of a whole unit) but as citizens in a particular part of the state (only a part of the whole). In other words, selfish interest is interjected as a means of gaining the support of the public. In place of a campaign on the idea of representing a part effecting the welfare of the whole unit, we are approached as a part, period.

What has this to do with you, Governor? To us, you represent the people in the State of Indiana as a part of a whole. What we do statewise has a direct bearing upon the welfare of the entire nation. The greatness of our country is due to principle, at least in our opinion. What has been gained for each one of us individually and collectively has come, we believe, because of some strongly principled individuals in history who have made a decision which has been unpopular with the masses. But they did not forget the principle which brought the moment when they must choose one way or another and were guided by their belief in principle. To us, Americans are so God-blessed today with their many material possessions and their freedom because in the past men have made principle their guiding light. True, they may not have always been so farsighted in their decisions. But there have been enough times and enough significant times at which they did stick to the principle involved that their failings have been overcome and overshadowed.

We, too, do not believe in the withholding tax; it's a matter of principle. How can we, the people, realize how much we are taxing ourselves unless we, the people, make our tax contributions through our own efforts and by our handling of the actual cash dollars involved? We have the withholding tax firmly entrenched in our national tax program these days; it is wrong. It is a matter of principle. Government is supported through the taxes which the people must pay. They do not know today how many dollars are paid by themselves because they do not ever touch most of those tax dollars. Therefore, how can the people provide for the diligent use of their tax dollars when they have not had the experience of paying out those tax dollars?

There can be no argument with the statement that withholding taxes is a surer way of collecting taxes. The matter of principle comes in with the question: does the sure way mean the way that is in the public interest? To us a way which shuts off people from their individual responsibilities in a representative government is not in the public interest. Such a way is an opiate, numbing the senses. Such a way is the withholding tax system.

We earnestly and respectfully call upon you, Governor, to consider seriously the importance of principle in this day of conflict with governmental concepts which consider first the state. We live in a nation which has grown on principle. Here we must consider first the individual or the freedom we must constantly strive to retain will be lost. We call upon you, Governor, to be not swayed by numbers, by those who reason that the withholding tax is desirable because it will bring in more tax dollars. Stick to your disbelief in the principle of the withholding tax. Oppose actively and finally the installation of the withholding system in our state. You have support.

Genuine respect is not gained by means of the dollar; poor men equal rich in number in the register of great Americans.

It's a matter of principle.

Sincerely,

The St. Joe News

713 KILLED

Another holiday has passed -
And many souls have breathed their last
Just celebratin'.
And over on the other shore
They'll speed and toot their horns no more
But on a harp they'll play a score,
Just syncopatin'!

Saint Peter at the golden gate
Has all the angels stand in wait,
Just could be prayin'.
For down on Earth the human race
Is tuning up to hit the pace
And hurry to some far-off place,
Just holidayin'.

The man ahead "drove far too slow",
He cut in close, he had to show
Sophistication.
Too late, he couldn't make it round,
A scream, a crash, a fearful sound,
His rush was over, he had found
His destination.

And so they say, "the guy is dead"
At last he has a place ahead -
An ambulance.
But saddest of this whole affair,
He left behind a load of care,
And broken hearts full of despair.
Just took a chance!

He left a home without a mother,
He made a cripple of another,
And much travail!
He took the innocent along,
The child who never did a wrong,
He stilled a baby's laugh and song,
Along death's trail.

And when the tragic shadow clears,
When sorrow's washed the earth with tears,
We stand defeated.
Because the fun and joy we've had
Is overbalanced by the sad,
Next holiday will be as bad,
Just be repeated!

No use to warn, no use to preach,
No use to fine, no use to teach,
They won't be readin',
The ones to blame, their voices stilled
Will never read the papers filled
With "Seven hundred thirteen killed"
By reckless speedin'.

—Gertrude Borthwick

23rd PSALM

The blessed Lord, my Shepherd is he,
He furnishes everything for me.
He maketh me in green pastures to lie,
With water to drink from a pond close by.
For his namesake he restoreth my soul,
And leadeth me to a higher goal.
Though I go through the valley of death, no evil will I fear.
For no matter what happens, Thou are always near.
In the presence of mine enemies a table you have spread,
My cup runneth over, and Thou annointed my head.
Surely goodness and mercy with me will always be,
I'll be in the Lord's house forever, and Jesus I will see.

FIVE NEW FORD glamour wagons long, low and loaded with Go!

Leave it to the station wagon leader to make the big news for '57! And what news! Wagons so big, so full of fine-car prestige that you'll wonder how it can be done at low Ford prices.

If your choice is the Country Squire, you'll be proud to pull up at the finest places in this new glamour wagon with its wood-like trim.

If your needs call for a 6-passenger wagon with four doors, you'll love the new Country Sedan. It has almost nine feet of loadspace—nearly a foot more than ever before.

There's still another 4-door Country Sedan. It has the extra third seat for 9-passenger room. And, as in all Ford wagons for '57, you have the new single-control handle which opens both the wrap-around liftgate and tailgate with one motion. And they can't be opened from inside!

There's good news, too, about Ford's popular Ranch Wagon. This 6-passenger, 2-door model features Ford's new subdued tones, and smart interiors which defy muddy little shoes and drippy chocolate cones.

In the wonderful way that Ford can take a fine thing and make it even finer, the Del Rio Ranch Wagon goes beyond the Ranch Wagon in style, fabrics and trim.

Better take a Ford wagon for a spin. You'll agree that for styling it's a sweetheart . . . for work and power, it's an obedient slave!

New '57 Fords have toughest shakedown cruise in history!

The '57 Ford broke 468 national and international records from 1 kilometer to 50,000 miles at Bonneville, Utah. For 50,000 miles, two '57 Fords averaged over 107 and 108 mph respectively. This time included all pit stops . . . the greatest endurance feat of all time!

News Has New Feature

A new feature is offered to readers of The News beginning with this week's issue. A crossword puzzle appears elsewhere in these pages for the entertainment and enjoyment of News subscribers.

Crossword puzzles have become somewhat of an American institution and comments by readers have prompted this new offering. However, the puzzle is not a completely new presentation, there having been a similar feature in this paper until a few years ago when it was discontinued.

The News welcomes comments from its readers - "the puzzle's too hard", "the puzzle's too easy", etc. From there perhaps further improvements can be made if necessary.

Background Scripture: Matthew 3—4.

Devotional Reading: Hebrews 3:1-14.

TEMPTED WE ARE

Lesson for January 13, 1957

Everybody is a sinner, yet not everybody is tempted to the same sins. But being tempted is not a sign of sin. The church believes that the same Jesus who "in every respect has been tempted as we are" (Hebrews 4:15) nevertheless was tempted without sinning.

It would be a mistake to suppose that in order to be tempted as we are, Jesus would have to have been tempted to all the sins there are. What this means is simply that the way he was tempted is the way we are tempted.

At Highest Moments

One thing we can learn from Christ's temptations is that it is not possible in this life to be guaranteed freedom from temptation. In the first place, it can be said that only serious-minded high-principled people know what real temptation is. Weak,flabby, frivolous persons feel no pull or push; they drop into sin like a stone into water. You can't FEEL temptation without resisting. Low-minded people do what they feel like without thinking. They aren't even aware they have sinned. They are like dirty little boys who can't see the sense in washing—they feel clean enough! It is the cleanly person who is conscious of dirt on his hands or clothes. So only the person with real convictions and ideals can feel the tug of temptation. It is only people with consciences who can be tempted to go against their conscience. Now high-minded people, people who really want to please God, often wish they could reach a stage in life where they wouldn't have to struggle to be good and to do right. But the story of Jesus shows that this is a false hope. Jesus had just been baptized when his great temptations came. If ever there was a consecrated, holy person, conscious of God's approval, it was Jesus at that time. If ever there was a person filled with the Holy Spirit, it was he. Yet Matthew tells us that Jesus was led by the Spirit to be tempted! In life's highest and holiest moments one is tempted to say, Now I am safe. But that may be the very moment the great struggle begins.

Tempted To Do Good

Again, the story of Jesus shows that sin may not always be something evil in itself. The three temptations of Jesus illustrate three levels of temptation, three levels of sin. Falling down and worshiping Satan is obviously the sin of sins. Jumping off a temple roof isn't so much wicked as it is foolish; but playing the fool is still sin. (If the President of the United States rolled his Secretary of State down Pennsylvania Avenue in a wheelbarrel, it might not be wicked but for him it would be very wrong indeed.) But turning stones into bread —? That would be a helpful thing in a country full of poor people. Nothing was said about Jesus using the bread for himself alone. And if he could turn stones into bread he could turn them into medicine, into meat, mansions . . . Not wicked, not foolish. But still wrong; because Jesus was commissioned to do something more profound, more radical than supplying people with bread. He came to change men from the inside, to feed their souls. So we, like the Master, are sometimes tempted to do what is good, when what is better is possible. "To choose a lesser good," said Prof. W. M. Urban, "in the presence of a greater, is the essence of wrong."

Sword of the Spirit

Another way in which the Christian can learn from Christ's temptations is by observing how he met them. He did not play around with them. He did not say, "Well, there is something in what you say." He did not debate what for him was not debatable. And he met each temptation with a word from God's Word. Each of the quotations he makes, ("It is written") came from the same book of the Old Testament, Deuteronomy. If Jesus could find help in time of temptation, in his Bible, surely the Christian of today is cutting himself off from a major source of strength if when temptation comes the best he can think of is, "I am sure there is a verse in the Bible about this somewhere, but I can't think what it is." The best way to have the Bible ready for daily help is not to have it on a shelf, but to have it as a treasure in the mind.

Come on friends and neighbors! Let's all rally around our St. Joe News and do what we can to keep it coming into our homes each week.

Oh yes, I know that the News isn't so newsy sometimes: but, that is largely our fault if we don't take or send the news items into the Printing Office, then it is our fault when the News comes out with nothing much of interest to read about.

Friends and neigbors, let us do our part in making the St. Joe News a lot more newsy in the future; how about it

VOLUME LXXII — ST. JOE, (DeKalb Co.), IND. — Thursday, January 17, 1957 — NUMBER 3

Indiana State Library

Around the Town
With the Editor

A note from Mrs. Elwood Hart says, "Ted, we like the Bible School lesson you print each week and also are glad for the new feature last week, the crossword puzzle."

Thank you.

Mrs. Borthwick telephoned her item this week and ended the conversation with, "You can say what you want to about the weather, but don't make it too strong."

Well, I won't say anything about this c-c-cold weather, but will mention that there sure was a good snow fall around here last Thursday. It affected people in different ways, though. Bob Clauser and yours truly and some others were busy shoveling the stuff off the sidewalks. But there was Herb at the harware at about 8:30 a.m. building a great big five-foot snowman in the doorway of the hardware.

—Or no, he was tearing it down. Somebody else had done the building the night before.

The News Office shoveling job ended up looking like it was inspired by Marilyn Monroe.

The Boy Scouts have a lot of fun and gain good experience in their activities, and the men who give of their time to lead the many Scout activities deserve recognition for their services. But sometimes things happen to make you wonder if we remember in these "moral" builders that we have to be a little hard-nosed sometimes or the basic purposes of such things as Boy Scouts are lost.

Last week as the last sled began its tour of the Klondike Derby course, a disappointing thing happened, disappointing because it involved the boys in a Scout patrol. One of the virtues that people generally recognize as being indicative of good character is the ability to express one's feelings without the use of profane language. And I think that virtue is one that the Boy Scout organization believes in. So, it was a disappointment to hear one of the Scouts on that last sled patrol use profane language when he dropped one of his gloves and one of his buddies didn't pick it up for him.

That doesn't mean that most Boy Scouts use such language. But you know what a bad apple can do to a bushel. And this young man didn't stop with one cussin'. He did it a second time moments later.

It's a tough thing to do, to get hard-nosed with young people, but once in a while it's necessary. An adult is inclined to give in too much on occasion; this can be as bad as not using enough understanding and patience.

The ball teams have had a bit of difficulty here lately, too, not particularly with the kind of language used, but still with the same general idea behind it.

Some of the boys have quit because they don't like the way things are going. From comments from other team members, the quitters think they should play ball just because they have gone out for the team. Think of the situation this puts the coach in. Hoosier high school students and adults, yes, the adults are in on this, too, hollering for a winning team and ready to get rid of the coach if he doesn't run the team right" or if the team doesn't win enough ball games. And the players (some of whose parents are the ones pressuring for a winning team or freely offering their criticism of the coach's efforts) putting forth the attitude "if I can't play as much as I want to, I ain't gonna play."

A pat on the back to the boys who, because their ability is less they play less, yet stick with the team because they love the game.

—People have more trouble than anybody, don't we?

Vice president: Fara Lee Baidinger.

Secretary: Mary Lou Brookfield.

Assistant secretary: Ruth White.

Delores Davis Awarded Girls' State Honor

Miss Delores Davis won the Hoosier Girls' State nomination in the theme contest on the subject, "Why I Want To Attend Hoosier Girls' State," it was announced last week. Miss Reta Gerig won the alternate award. Both girls are in the Junior Class at Riverdale High School.

The 16th annual citizenship school for Junior Girls from Hoosier high schools will be held at Smithwood Hall on the Indiana University campus at Bloomington from June 22 to 30. The 8-day session of practical application of fundamentals of government and good citizenship is sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary as an Americanism project. Although the fee for housing and transportation is often paid by a civic organization such as the Lions Club, the girls must be sponsored by the Auxiliary.

The Auxiliary Unit 409 of Leo has sponsored a girl from Leo each year since organizing in 1947. In 1956 the unit added Riverdale and Harlan high schools to their list, because auxiliaries in these towns had disbanded and members transferred to Leo.

Miss Roberta Norr and Miss Sharon Sumney represent Leo and Miss Sally Case and Miss Carol Perkins have been selected from Harlan High School.

Mrs. Willis Bennett, Girls' State chairman, stated that girls are chosen for the following qualifications: leadership, character, courage, honesty, scholarship, cooperativeness, physical fitness and interest in government.

Miss Davis is currently president of the Beta Club and varsity cheerleader. She has the distinction of being the first sophomore to be elected president of Beta, student honor organization.

Miss Gerig is also a member of the Beta Club and was elected "B" team cheerleader this year. As alternate, she will be in line to attend Girls' State if Miss Davis is unable to attend Girls' State.

Brass Tacks - 3rd In A Series

Today we are witnessing two conditions which, possibly, have not been witnessed before to such a great degree. One is the emphasis on possession of material wealth, the other is the actual possession of that material wealth by a great number of people. There is always within the hearts of men a desire to obtain better things; that is a natural trait. And even now with all of the possessions which the average American family contains, there is the desire for "more". This is reflected in the great amount of credit buying that is a part of today's American economy. And that prevalent desire is in spite of the great material wealth which the average American family possesses

As we travel through the country, we can see evidences of material things in great quantity, things which only a few years ago were luxuries, but which we now look upon as necessities. Television is commonplace as the radio now, but was quite the thing when it first was introduced. Possession of a TV set only a few years ago meant a few more dollars of wealth in that family than in others nearby. Not too many years ago the radio was looked upon in the same light, a luxury - which then became a necessity. There are also many families which are becoming two-car families. Not too many years ago two cars in one family meant, for sure, a little more money.

These things are not bad. As long as we have the money to do with, and we do with wisely, we haven't done wrong. But at the same time, there are families which are not able to make ends meet, even with the great amount of money in circulation. While we have the condition existing in which more "average" families have more material possessions and more money, we also have some families, too many, within the same general group which find it difficult to make income cover expenses. And this brings on a result which many people overlook in describing the era of "prosperity" we now supposedly live in. That result is - the father in the family must find another source of income to augment his regular income or the mother must find employment.

There will be exception taken to any comment about two jobs or two working parents in a family. But any criticism made here of that condition is not of the people involved but of the conditions that bring on that result. If there is one thing that these Christian United States base their moral strength on, one thing that they consider the backbone of a moral society, it is "the home". If there is one thing that destroys "the home' 'influence on the character of youth in its growing years, it is the lack of parental presence in the home. We all want to provide the best for our families. We want to give our children the best that they can have. And in this day of emphasis on material things, we have come to consider "the best" in terms of how much money, how many clothes, how many spending dollars, and the like. While we want to be dedicated to the spiritual qualities that we recognize in our Christian background, we turn away from them when it comes to actual practice; we forget that such a background includes the simple thing of having Mom at home when Brother or Sis need her guidance or comfort.

There isn't any arguing with someone who has a five dollar bill to pay a six dollar debt. They've got to have more, either because they undertook too great an obligation and can't meet it or because there just isn't enough to go around in the first place. Right now it seems strange that, with the number of jobs in this country and with the high hourly rates and high salaries and high fees being received, there should be any necessity for two jobs in one family. Yet that is the case in many instances. And while we can not pick out a certain number of particular homes where two jobs are worked in the family and find any instances of "juvenile delinquency" or family troubles right there, this two-job situation does lead to a break down in respect for the home as an important part of the American life. It is enough of an over-all influence that no exaggeration is made to say that the moral fiber of America has been broken down because we must have two jobs within the family.

When enough people begin to complain to their representatives in government about the part that government spending is taking in destroying the American home by continued high government expenditures resulting in high general taxation, the first step will have been taken to restore solid footing for the American family to stand on. Too many dollars, needed at home, are going out of our pocketbooks for government.

Mr. Keeler, Citizen

Ordinarily you wouldn't think there was much to say about a town dump. And you would hardly expect to find anything attractive about a dump; the word itself sounds not too appealing.

But if you have been down to the town dump lately, within the past several months, and if you are at all observant, you must have noticed that our dump looks pretty orderly. It isn't by accident that the trash and other objects taken there are burned or destroyed or that everything gets tossed over the side if it can't be utilized or burned. In the past, experience has shown that we, the people, get rather careless in disposing of our trash and oftentimes merely let it lie just any place at the top of the hill to pile up and bring the added expense to the town of bulldozing occasionally to clear the area.

The town at present is fortunate to have Mr. Bill Keeler taking care of many of the odd jobs that come up in the upkeep of the town properties, and he has taken upon himself the job of puting the dump in the excellent condition which it now enjoys. This isn't part of his job, actually. But he is one of those priceless people who give a little more than is expected and thus make this a better world - and community - in which to live.

The state of Indiana needs a two or three cent raise in its gasoline tax, we are told. Is this to pay for the new signs that now mark the narrow bridges on the state highways?

Take a look. Road signs in the past have been erected on a single wood or steel support. We have not noted any excessive deterioration inthese sign posts in the past; they seem to have been satisfactory. Yet just within the last few weeks, state highway employees have been erecting new signs for the narrow bridges that dot the countryside. But they are not merely replacements of worn signs. These are new signs - take a look - and have TWO steel supports five to six feet above the ground level with two crossarms upon which is fastened the "narrow bridge" warning.

For safety's sake, we need road markers. And we need road markers that can be seen. But also we need careful use of tax money. This latest highway improvement does not, on the surface, seem necessary.

There are several of the new signs in the St. Joe and Spencerville area. Readers need not go far to investigate. Take a look.

Indiana needs a two or three cent increase in the gasoline tax?

We doubt it.

DeLong-Steininger

The Grabill Missionary Church was the scene of the marriage of Miss Marilyn Sue Steininger and Loren L. DeLong on Saturday afternoon, January 12. The Rev. Vernon Petersen, assisted by the Rev. LeRoy DeLong of Russiaville, brother of the bridegroom, performed the ceremony at 2:30 o'clock before an altar graced with candelabra, palms and vases of orange gladioli and white mums.

Nuptial selections were presented by Mrs. Kent Von Gunten of Fort Wayne, organist, and Miss Arzetta Neuenschwander of Grabill, vocalist.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Dee Steininger of Grabill and Mr. and Mrs. Lester DeLong of near Auburn.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a waltz length gown of nylon lace over satin. A peter pan collar and long tapered sleeves detailed the bodice and the bouffant skirt was fashioned with alternating layers of lace and nylon tulle ruffles. Her veil of silk illusion was caught to a jeweled tiara, and she carried a Bible topped with a white orchid streamered with pompons. Her only jewelry was a strand of pearls, a gift from the groom.

Miss Carmen Steininger, her sister's only attendant, wore a waltz length gown of shrimp-colored chiffon over net and taffeta, with matching headband. Her bouquet was of white carnations and orange gladioli.

Wendel Getrost of Antwerp, Ohio, served as best man, and ushers were Ross Sonday, brother-in-law of the groom, and Kent Von Gunten, both of Fort Wayne.

Mrs. Steininger chose a navy crepe dress with white accessories for her daughter's wedding, and wore a corsage of red roses. The groom's mother wore navy with white, and her corsage was of pink roses.

Serving at a reception following the ceremony in the church lower auditorium were Mrs. Ermel Drerup, aunt of the bride; the Misses Rita Steininger, the bride's sister, Judy Steininger and Mary and Anne Drerup, all of Auburn, her cousins; and Mrs. Ross Sonday, the groom's sister. Miss Marcia VanZile of Grabill was in charge of the guest book.

For a wedding trip south, the bride wore a turquoise ensemble with black accessories.

The couple will reside near Fort Wayne.

INCOME TAX STEW

Along about this time of year
When income tax time is drawing near;
I get out my pencil and paper, and record book, too,
And stir up a batch of income tax stew.
You put in your dairy, your grain and the cows,
And all the pigs you sold, from those old sows.
And if you have some money, that brings "interest" to you.
Put that in with all the rest of the stew.
Put this on a slow fire till it thoroughly heats,
And then go hunt up all of your old receipts.
Now this is a secret between me and you.
Deducts get the best part of the stew.
Deducts go for machine hire, supplies and feed.
Labor, repairs, taxes and seed.
They pay for electricity, gas and oil,
And for fertilizer you put on the soil.
If you have been in the hospital, and taking pills,
You can take some out, for your Dr. bills.
By this time the stew is getting low,
And there is not much left in the pot, you know.
Then what is left, you divide with your Uncle Sam.
But he is your best uncle, you bet he am.

RIGHTEOUSNESS

Lesson for January 20, 1957

Righteousness is an old-fashioned word. You almost never see it outside the Bible. But the thing itself is not old-fashioned, you can see it outside the Bible, nearly everybody wants it himself and everybody wants it for his neighbors. Even criminals count on it—in other people. The word originally came (in the Bible) from the Hebrew word meaning "straight". To this day everybody knows what the difference is between a straight man and a crooked one. We mean the same thing sometimes when we use only the first part of the word, "right". We like to be right, we like to have the right people around us. "He's just not right" is one of the worst things that can be said about a man. A righteous person is one that is all that he should be. He comes up to standard, there is nothing shoddy or make believe about him. To be sure, some people don't care about this; but then some people don't care whether they are healthy or clean.

Better Than the Best

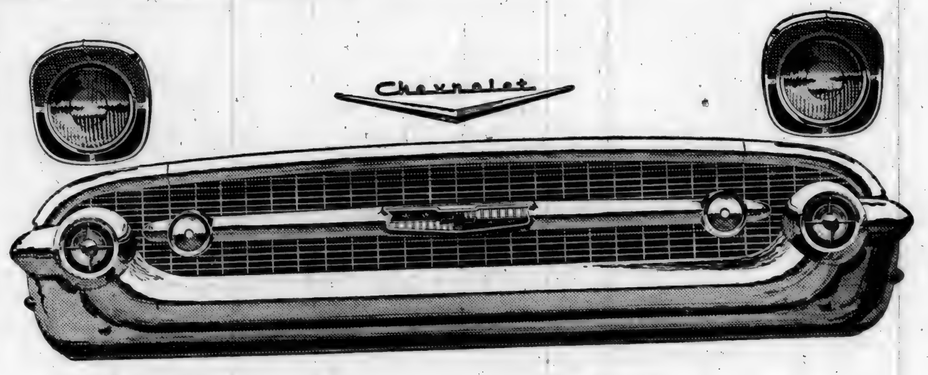
One of the things Jesus said that must have sounded surprising at the time he said it, was that the righteousness of those who followed him must "exceed that of the Pharisees". Now the Pharisees made a specialty of righteousness. They were super-good, or aimed to be. They had money, and leisure, and they spent their time thinking up ways to be better than anybody. They were, so to speak, the athletes of morality. They held all the records for high jumps and pole vaults to the top levels of righteousness. Nobody else even tried to be as good as they were. So it must have astonished everybody, not to mention shocking the Pharisees, when Jesus as good as said they were not up to the standards of the kingdom of heaven. If we look into what Jesus said by way of explaining this astonishing remark, however, we can see three ways in which the Pharisees' idea of what it is to be right—right in the sight of God, that is—comes short of the true ideal. First of all, the Pharisees were interested in action only. Now acts are very important. But as Jesus explained it, actions come from inner attitudes, and where the attitude is wrong, acts are likely to be wrong, too. True righteousness, or rightness, begins and has its roots in "the heart", the inner life, where thoughts begin. The truly right person will not be content with making a good showing, he wants to BE right even if it never shows.

No Fences For Love

So the rightness Jesus demands goes deeper than what satisfied the Pharisees, ancient or modern. But he pointed out another difference. Jesus' ideal (which is God's ideal) of rightness is also broader than the Pharisees' brand. They loved their friends, they would do a great deal for those who did a lot for them. Jesus pointed out that anybody not a complete fool will do as much. "You scratch my back and I'll scratch yours" is a philosophy almost anybody can understand. Loving people who love you—and no others—is like exchanging presents at Christmas time. Some people "give" a great many presents, at least they wrap them up and distribute them; but they don't give a thing unless they expect to get a present in return. The Pharisees, ancient and modern, know what love is; but they put a fence around it. They do not "waste" love on those who do not in some way pay them for it. Jesus went all the way—so far that to this day few of us dare to follow him. Love your enemies, he said. Love is good; the Pharisees were on the right track. But love must have no horizons.

Why Be Good?

The kind of rightness God wants has another sure mark; it has the right motive. The Parisees wanted to be right so as to be admired by other men. But true rightness has just one motive, to be like our Father in heaven. To wish to be God, to "play God", is wicked; but it is not wicked it is the very heart of the truly good life to love God so much, and know him so well (and never so well as in Christ) that one can think of nothing better than to be like him. All other motives fail, some time; but this one motive carries the secret of the power of God's true saints.



Chevrolet shows you some important differences in low-priced cars just by the look on its face!

Wouldn't you say that most of the '57 cars look good from 50 feet away, but what about from 50 inches away?

What does a close-up of the grille tell you, for example? Is it solidly made like the new Chevrolet grille? Or, in comparison does it look less rich in design—feel less strong and solid? Compare the quality and construction of the bumpers and headlights, the fit of the chrome trim.

The more closely you look all around the car, the more clearly you'll see that Chevrolet has the edge in the way it's put together. You'll find, for instance, that Chevrolet is the only car in its field with a lacquer finish . . . that only Chevrolet Bel Air models give you foam rubber cushions in front and rear seats as standard equipment. These are just a few of the advantages of Body by Fisher. And Chevrolet, you know, is the only low-priced car that has a Fisher Body.

We'll be glad to give you a close-up, comparative look at this new Chevy any time you care to come in. This week, maybe?

Lincoln's Gettysburg address contains 266 words; The Ten Commandments contain 297 words; The Declaration of Independence 300 and a recent government order cutting cabbage prices contained 29,911 words. All of this goes to prove something or other but we have forgotten just what it is.

One thing that we cannot and will not forget is that we are here to serve you! When you are in need of any special merchandise of attention, we'd be glad to have you call on us.

Here's an example of the difference between the way we and other merchants operate on unusual items. Monday evening we were asked if we had a combination thermometer and humidiguide. We advised that we had several styles. The customer said that he had one ordered at another store and if it wasn't in yet he'd come in and get one.

"So your son had to leave college on account of his eyesight."

"Yep, he mistook the dean of women for a coed."

Indiana Taxes Coming & Going

Indiana legislators who convened last week for the 90th biennial General Assembly are facing a dwindling state treasury and spiraling budget demands of state and local governments.

It will be a year of big decision for the Indiana Legislature, Jack E. Reich, executive vice-president of the Indiana State Chamber of Commerce, commented last week.

Budget demands have been met more easily during recent years because of rising revenues and a healthy free balance in the state treasury. But increased spending and increased state aid to schools and local governments are diminishing that balance.

During the last fiscal year, 1955-1956, state government net receipts shown on the chart totaled $372,325,695 and net disbursements totaled $377,347,623. Translating these fiscal figures into an Indiana State Government Dollar, researchers of the State Chamber found:

Out of each dollar disbursed by the state, 41.8 cents (or $156,943,427 of the total) was distributed to local government units. Of this amount, 21.3 cents (or $80,513,145) was for state support to local schools. Additional shares to local governments were 11 cents (or $41,511,279) for roads and streets; 7.3 cents (or $27,691,705) for public welfare, and 2.2 cents (or $7,227,298) for miscellaneous local government functions.

The portion of the dollar spent directly by state government included 16.8 cents (or $63,235,795) for state highways; 10.3 cents (or 38,720,120) for state universities and colleges; 9.7 cents (or $37,691,211) for benevolent and correctional institutions; and 8.6 cents (or $32,521,432) for unemployment compensation benefits and administration.

A total of 12.8 cents of the expenditure dollar financed all other functions of state government such as state police, national guard, recreation and natural resources, public health, state payments to public employee retirement funds and operation of all executive departments of the state.

Greatest contributor to the government dollar received by the state was the gross income tax which produced 31.6 cents (or $117,718,740). Following up that revenue was the state gasoline tax and motor vehicle licenses and fees, producing 25.5 cents (or $94,656,256), used exclusively for highway and street prposes and partial support of the state police. Other receipts making up the income dollar included 12.4 cents (or $46,237,213) in Federal tax funds, mostly for highways and public welfare; 8.6 cents (or $33,072,707) from employment security taxes; 4.8 cents (or $17,789,995) from alcoholic beverage taxes and fees; 3.7 cents (or $13,902,508) from state cigarette tax; 3 cents (or $11,152,969) from property and poll taxes; 4.1 cents (or 15,384,224) in non-tax receipts; and 6.3 cents (or $23,411,083) in miscellaneous taxes and fees.

The miscellaneous classification includes various professional and business license fees, oil inspection fees, severance taxes and other levies.

The Indiana State Government Dollar chart, the Chamber said, excludes non-tax receipts and disbursements of state universities and colleges; receipts and disbursements of State Fair Board, from institutional rotary funds, and from funds held in trust by the state; veteran's loans and repayments of loans; receipts from conversion of securities of retirement funds and disbursements representing investments of these funds; and assessments for state annuity pension funds and pension payments from them.

The state fiscal year covered was from July 1, 1955, to June 30, 1956.

Historians tell us Benjamin Franklin was a great saver. He'd keep his money in his boot until he found true value. A lot of us would do well to take a tip from Franklin. (Though, if you'll pardon the observation, we don't guess he was much for tipping). Frugality, added to his ability to bargain soundly, were two of his prominent characteristics. So, it's only natural that we think of Ben while thinking of thrift

A lot of people have come to think of Chas. Ort and Co. in this regard, too; especially when they get to thinking about things for the home. We have te finest selection of furniture and appliances we have seen in many a day. These are the rare kind of bargains that present day thrifty Ben Franklins are always looking for. And, as always at Ort's, no one is going to hurry you into taking your loot out of your boot until you are satisfied you are getting more than your money's worth.

Jan. 17 is Ben Franklin's birthday. If he were living today, he'd be 250. We're only 45, but we have a lot of satisfied customers behind us.

VOLUME LXXII | ST. JOE, (DeKalb Co.), IND. | Thursday, January 24, 1957 | NUMBER 4

Indiana State Library

Around the Town

With the Editor

It's been my contention for the last several years that we just don't have the winters — and summers—like we used to. But as always, when you say something about something, something eventually happens. —Which is about as general a statement about nothing that I can make.

But last week's below zero weather and those cold days hovering around the zero mark made it seem like the good old days, ain't so, old timer?

A playful airline pilot found himself suspended for thirty days after a number of alarmed passengers complained to the company about him.

They said he walked up and down in front of the passenger ticket line a few minutes before take-off time reading a book bearing a large title: "How To Fly In Ten Easy Lessons."

I was glancing through the bound volume of St. Joe News's for the year 1955 and found maybe a reason why the farmer complains about the high cost of production. A seed add for January of 1955 has a price five to six dollars lower for alfalfa than the price of the seed today.

—And here I thought you had to go back to the thirties to compare prices and say, "Look what we used to pay for so-and-so item, and now it's sky high."

—Why I can remember when you could buy roast beef for thirty-nine cents a pound.

Calling all bachelors: here's some advice from the Maine Trucking News on cocktail-party behavior: "Always stand in front of the biggest mirror in the room. Every woman in the place will see you before she leaves."

It sure gets rough on Mom sometimes when you have a nice big family and they all get sick, one by one. With all the little Bishops, Pamela, Bruce, Tommy and Danny, getting the chicken pox off and on, and what-all else putting them under the weather, it gets so you don't even remember what Mom looks like.

Let's see, Barbara is seven feet tall, isn't she . . .or was it wide??? Oh well, I guess I better forget about it for now. Maybe she'll get out in the spring.

Important Farm Ins'ance Meeting Saturday

The annual meeting of the Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company of DeKalb County will be held starting at 1 p.m. Saturday, January 26, in the assembly room of the court house in Auburn. This is a very important meeting and policyholders are urged to attend the meeting.

Business includes reaching a decision on whether or not the company will write its own wind insurance. If this proposal is adopted, there should be a good attendance to change the by-laws in order to take on this additional coverage, according to Lester Boger, secretary.

Bill Staman of near St. Joe, a member of the board of directors of the company, has added his approval to the request for a good turn-out Saturday. He emphasized the importance of this meeting to the farmers in the county.

Fire losses during the company's fiscal year which ended October 1, 1956, require an assessment of 15 cents per hundred in the rodded class and 30 cents per hundred in the unrodded class.

SPENCER TWP. HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB

The January meeting of the Spencer Township Home Demonstration Club was held at the home of Arminta Steward with Valda Brown as co-hostess.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Marilyn Laub. All repeated the club creed. Marie Ward gave the devotions. Valda Brown read the history of the song of the month, "We Are the Hoosiers of Hoosierland," and then led the group in singing the song.

The installation of officers for 1957 followed in a candle light service. After the business meeting, presided over by Alice Kagey, Nellie Allen gave a report of the county council meeting.

The club plans a guest night in May with the Fairfield Twp. Club. The regular collection was sent for Pennies For Friendship.

On January 3, the four chairmen, Alice Kagey, Nellie Allen, Jennie Walter and Marilyn Laub met and planned the program for the coming year.

During the social and visiting hour each member filled in her own program book.

The committee served delicious refreshments.

Frank Monroe Elected Chief Of Fire Dept.

The St. Joe Volunteer Fire Department met Monday evening for its January meeting. Nine members were present.

Election of officers was held with the following results:

Chief—Frank Monroe.

Assistant Chief—Roy Bowser.

Secretary-treasurer — Joe Robinson.

Discussion was held concerning the work yet to be done on the new fire house. Interior work includes applying plywood to the ceiling and installing insulating material.

Joe Walter was appointed a committee of one to investigate procurement of insulation. Four members were appointed by Chief Bowser to attend the county fire meeting Wednesday of this week at Waterloo.

The problem of collection of run fees and proper billing for same was discussed, to accomplish improved procedure for handling finances between the department and the town board.

Ashley Defeats Comets, 64-54

The Riverdale Comets furnished healthy opposition for Ashley Friday night for one-half of their game played at Waterloo. But the Aces clicked during the second half and held a steady 10-point lead to post a 64-54 win.

The Comets trailed at the quarter, 14-13, then ran up a 23-16 lead before Ashley countered to take a 26-25 lead at the half.

Riverdale slowly dropped back as the third quarter progressed and Ashley maintained a substantial lead throughout the remainder of the game.

Play became somewhat rough in the third quarter fostered mainly by disagreement with the calls of the officals. But tempers cooled and no harm was done.

The prelim was won by the Comet seconds, 41-33.

Mrs. Inez Hadsell Suffers Fractured Pelvic Bone

Mrs. Inez Hadsell of St. Joe fell victim to misfortune last Wednesday at the animal hospital in Fort Wayne operated by her grandson, Dr. William Hough, Jr. She suffered a fractured pelvic bone in a fall at the hospital. This is the third broken bone suffered by Mrs. Hadsell in the past two years.

Mrs. Hadsell and her daughter, Mrs. William Hough, Sr., of South Bend, were visiting in Fort Wayne last week and as they were proceeding out to see the collection of puppies at the hospital, the accident occurred. X-rays were taken at the Lutheran Hospital and then Mrs. Hadsell was taken to her daughter's home in South Bend to recuperate. Marjorie Ramsey, who passed the story on to The News reports that Mrs. Hadsell will be flat on her back for the next six weeks in order that the fracture may heal properly.

Mrs. Mary K. Markle received the following poem from her son which we think you will enjoy:

Mother

I lay here in my bunk
My thoughts are at home with you
And because I know, my Mother,
I know you are thinking about me, too.

When things go wrong
As they often do
I think of my Mom at home
She always helps me through.

When the going gets rough
And I need the extra shove
I think of my Mother at home
And I know I have her love.

Things sometimes get rough
Then they're suddenly better,
When you come back in the evening
And find your Mother's cheerful letter.

There are those with other ideas,
But I never listen to the rest
No one will ever convince me
That my Mother isn't the best.

As time goes on and I find a loved one
I'll then go live with another
But no matter how long the time may be
I'll never forget my Mother.

Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Hollabaugh were dinner guests of the Robert Morgans of Detroit at the Hotel Van Orman Wednesday night.

Saturday evening supper guests of Jack and Connie Hollabaugh were the Jim Dwyers of Harlan.

A Boy Scout directors' meeting was held in the Spencerville Fire Hall Monday night immediately following the regular Boy Scout meeting, with Joe Baidinger, president; Lynn Fisher; Paul Fish; M. H. Hollabaugh; Forrest Brattain; and Jack Hollabaugh, scoutmaster, present.

Donnie Baker, who is stationed in Washington, D. C. took part in the inaugural parade Monday afternoon.

The Spencerville Community Club met in the fire hall on Saturday night. Plans were discussed for the park sometime in the near future. A committee composed of Glenn Moore, G. J. Brendel, Paul Fish and Max Markle was appointed to investigate land for the proposed park The club plans a February party on Saturday night, the 9th. Refreshments of coffee and donuts were served.

On Wednesday night Mrs. Harold Krafft entertained the former Bunco Club members in her home with a dinner party.

Mrs. Lynn Fisher was hostess to her bridge club Thursday evening with prizes going to Mrs. M. D. Furnish, Mrs. Bert Fisher and Mrs. Ray Overmyer.

CHILDHOOD MEMORIES

How well do I remember,
When I was a little lad;
We went to church together.
We children and mom and dad.
We rode in the surrey,
With the fringe around the top;
And the horses trotted all the way,
To the church, where we did stop.
At the old hitching rail,
The horses were tied;
While the people in the church
All sang, "Lord with us abide."
I remember the elders,
And the prayers that were said,
Just before Communion
And the breaking of the bread.
We loved that old preacher,
And his smiling face I see,
As he preached the junior sermon,
To other youngsters and me.
Time has made a lot of changes,
In the lives that people live,
But if we get to heaven,
Our hearts, to Christ, we still must give.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday-School Lessons

BY DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

Background Scripture: Matthew 8:1—9:34.

Devotional Reading: James 5:13-20.

HEALTH and SIN

Lesson for January 27, 1957

It takes a long time for some ideas to sink in. Sometimes it happens that a father or mother will give a child serious talk about something important, but all the child remembers is that there was a talk about it. Years later, as a grown man, the former child will suddenly exclaim, "So THAT'S what Father was trying to tell me!" Much of Jesus' teaching was like that. He was always giving hints, or saying things straight out, which a few faithful minds remembered, but did not understand. For years the saying of Jesus would be read in the Bible, and scholars would puzzle over it . . . . and then hundreds of years after Christ, people would discover what Jesus meant. He was long ahead of his time.

Why People Are In Hospitals

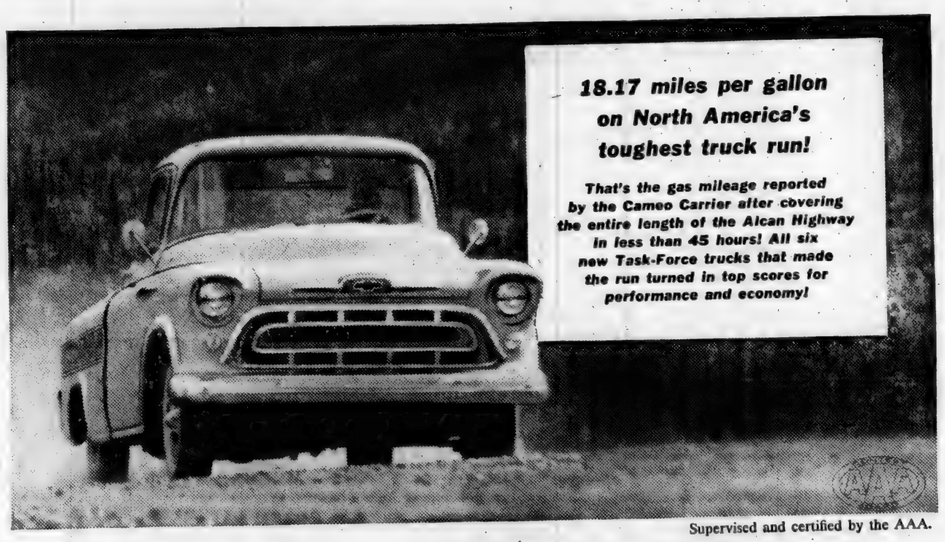
One of these ahead-of-time hints was about the relation between health and sin. In the famous story of the man who was paralyzed, brought in by four of his friends for Jesus to heal, it long seemed a puzzling thing that the first thing Jesus said to him did not appear to have anything to do with his case. "Your sins are forgiven," Jesus said. Perhaps the four friends found it odd. They did not bring the man there to have his soul looked into; they came to get him back on his feet again. It was his muscles, not his morals, that seemed to need help. But Jesus saw with certain eye that the root of the man's trouble was not in his body it was in his soul. He saw there was no use sending the man back into activity, with an active body but a crippled soul. Jesus that day was probably the only living person who could see that. Today the truth has dawned on a great many persons. Dr. Russell Dicks of Duke University says it has been learned that the majority of patients in hospitals would not be there if they were rid of what is eating into their minds.

Sins Against the Body

Psyciatrists, who are M.D.'s first, and who work hand in hand with surgeons, internal-medicine specialists and so on, are trained to probe for these non-physical causes of disease. The causes may be mental or spiritual—if indeed they can be distinguished. A major cause they look for is the "guilt complex". One who hides within himself, perhaps at a deeper level than conscious memory, a sense of guilt, is a person who falls easy victim to disease, even to accidents. Case records are numerous in which it appears that the patient began to get well as soon as he began to "get right" in his attitude to God or man, or both. (Don't jump to extremes here! If you catch cold, it's not necessarily because you've been stealing.) One of the most common sins, however, that many commit without being aware of it, is the whole class of sins against one's body, one's health — against oneself. Eating and drinking unwisely, undersleeping, overstrain or undernourishment—in ways too many to be counted, men and women sin against themselves. If it is a sin to commit suicide, it is equally a sin to do anything or to form any habit which shortens life.

Can Jesus Help?

Jesus brought the paralyzed man back to health of soul and body. Can Jesus help today? Yes, in several strong ways. (1) As a living Spirit, he can bring assurance of God's forgiveness. With that assurance, the inner life can begin again, healed and strong. (2) As the unseen but constant Companion, Christ can be so real that in his presence temptation loses its power, and the desire to live as in his presence becomes a high motive of life. (3) Christ has so inspired many a man and woman that they have been his personal representatives: he has lived in them and worked through them. Today there are persons, in Alcoholics Anonymous, for example, who have been so touched by the Master that they no longer live for their own appetites, but literally are on call day and night wherever they may help others who are struggling with the same habit which once had dragged them down. Whatever a Christian does for another in the name of Christ is not only done for Him—He does it. So Christ today, through those who bear his name, helps by cure, but better, by prevention.



18.17 miles per gallon on North America's toughest truck run!

Supervised and certified by the AAA.

New Task-Force 57 Chevrolet Trucks

Six heavily loaded Chevy trucks ran all the way up the rugged Alcan Highway in less than 45 hours! That's cutting more than a full day off the normal running time! They ran right around the clock, stopping only to refuel.

But the important fact about this run was that it proved new Chevy trucks through and through. The Alcan Highway is a supreme test of every truck component. Engines had to prove their power up high-climbing grades and through washouts. Frames and suspensions flexed their muscles over axle-deep ruts and miles of pounding gravel. "And not a single truck turned back or dropped out due to mechanical failure," states the official AAA report of the test. Every model proved its over-all economy by its ironclad ability to stay on the job! Stop by; we'll talk about it.

"You make me tired." How often have you heard such a comment or could we even suggest that you may have used it yourself?

Here is our version of the expression. We thank you very much for coming to our stores in such unprecedented numbers. Because of all of you coming, and it was a continuous stream of folk, continuing right up until closing time on Christmas eve, we did get very tired. However, it was a happy, tired feeling, if you know what we mean. With Carl out on the last day, busy at the funeral home, Bob and Vince were eating aspirin to keep going, but the rest of us were in fine condition, needing only a little coffee to keep us going at top speed.

As we said before, we want to repeat, "Thanks again for making us very very tired."

Let's see the decisive factors in the '57 Inner Ford

They show you why the new kind of Ford is worth more when you buy it, worth more when you sell it!

The secret of Ford's nationwide success is this: it's a new kind of Ford . . . new from the wheels up . . . more than a last year's model with a few "face lift" changes. In a Ford the chassis, engine and body are individually engineered into one spacious rock-solid unit.

If you're a careful car-buyer with whom features count, count the new features of the '57 Ford. Then drive it! There's only one conclusion: the liveliest car in the low-price field is the completely new Ford. For the decisive facts see your Ford Dealer.

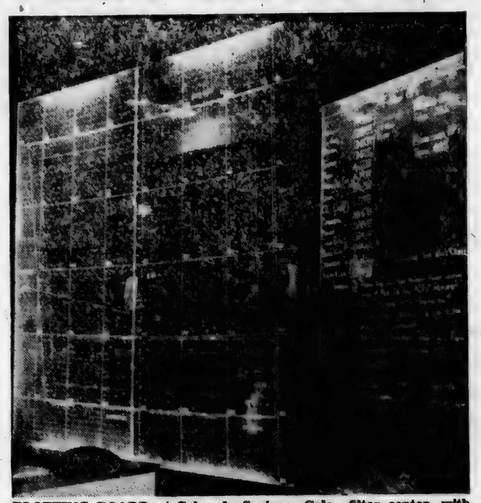
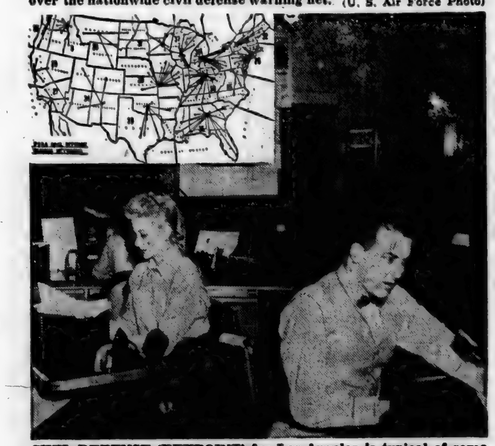
WILDERNESS RADAR station in the Canadian north is typical of the far-flung outposts which are the "eyes" of the North American warning net. At the other end of the "line," civil defense volunteers would alert the public to danger through sirens, loudspeakers and Conelrad radio, so people could evacuate or take cover depending on amount of warning time. (U. S. Air Force Photo)

Paul Reveres Today



PLOTTING BOARD at Colorado Springs, Colo., filter center, with each dot representing one Ground Observer Corps post. The Air Force filter centers depend on telephoned reports from GOC posts to track air traffic over the United States. They are the lowest level in a chain of control centers through which spotter reports are channeled in determining whether an alarm should be issued over the nationwide civil defense warning net. (U. S. Air Force Photo)



CIVIL DEFENSE 'KEYPOINT' for Los Angeles is typical of some 200 such communication centers throughout the nation maintained by local civil defense. In less populous areas, "keypoints" are often police or fire stations, where someone is always on duty. They depend on the Federal Civil Defense Administration's 14,180-mile warning net (inset) to link them to Air Force air defense division control centers. Keypoints notify, in turn some 3,500 "sub-keypoints" which set off sirens and call out civil defense personnel.

Attack Warning Net's New 'First Line'

Twentieth Century Paul Reveres may some day play a vital part in saving your life and that of the nation just as the original Revere's timely warning helped preserve the life of the American Colonies.

In this age of nuclear weapons, intercontinental bombers and some day, perhaps, long-range guided missiles, hours and even minutes of attack warning time can be of vital importance.

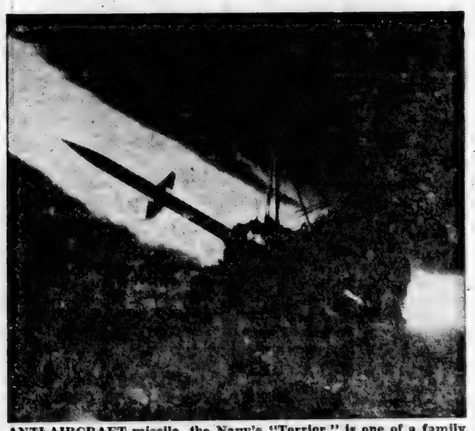
AN ARMY of professionals and volunteers man the radars, scan the skies and operate the military and civil defense circuits to pass along word of danger. They range from scattered outposts in northern Canada and radar picket ships far at sea to the man who sounds your home town air alarm.

This network is tested constantly, both in the Air Force phase of initial warning, and the civil defense phase of spreading the warning from air defense division control centers to the general public.

In a very real and personal sense, this warning system is the first line of defense for every American as he goes about his daily life under the threat of ever-possible attack.

GROUND OBSERVER Corps posts range from Manhattan building tops (above) to remote desert and forest country. Seventeen thousand posts and 400,000 skywatchers provide U. S. Air Force and civil defense personnel with the vital visual identification of low-flying planes needed to supplement radar warning data. (N.Y. Daily News Photo)



ANTI-AIRCRAFT missile, the Navy's "Terrier," is one of a family of defensive missiles, including the Army's "Nike," which could be put into action if the nation's warning system indicated the approach of attacking planes. Primary purpose of these missiles at such a time would be to protect the nation's 92 critical civil defense targets from as many attackers as possible. The "Terrier" is shown silhouetted against the booster blast of another missile during firing practice aboard the USS Mississippi. (U. S. Navy Photo)

THE CLOSE RELATIONSHIP of civil defense and Ground Observer Corps is illustrated by this historic land office at Wintersville, Ohio, which serves today as Jefferson County Civil Defense headquarters and as a site for skywatchers in the Canton, Ohio, filter center area. Civil defense and the GOC cooperate very closely, and data supplied by the more than 17,000 GOC posts in the nation is used in alerting civil defense local and national units to action. (U. S. Air Force Photo)

Around the Town

With the Editor

While listening to Fred Smith broadcast the Piston game from St. Louis Tuesday night, we heard him say, "We've got some fans here from Fort Wayne who motored to St. Louis and pulled in today —Johnny Haverstock and his wife and Bill and Ethel - - -"

That was a good game to motor to, too, because the Pistons won. They haven't been doing that much on the road this year.

The little woman got her ear bent but good last week because of a typographical error in this here little ol' paper in reporting the box score of the Riverdale-Ashley game.

The players' field goal, free throw and point totals didn't jibe with the team totals and I didn't catch the error. But somebody else did and lit into Esther.

—'S'funny, my ears didn't burn a bit.

Just for the record, here is the correct score of that game:

A. Warstler	4	1	9
Carpenter	1	0	2
Fisher	3	1	7
Coplin	8	6	22
C. Warstler	1	1	3
Lothamer	4	3	11
Totals	21	12	54

Well, I see Dave McCann is getting out and around again after a session with hepatitis. And I hear there are couple or so more cases, this time in the high school.

With all the excitement concerning the break-ins, there have been more comments about our needing a town marshall.

It seems to me that having a town marshall wouldn't gain anything as far as curtailing these thefts. The remainder of the county has been having the same difficulty. In fact, the police at Butler had checked the store broken into there at 4 o'clock in the morning. So having somebody "watching" didn't do any good in that case.

When the cat's away, the mice will play.

Icy Road Brings Death To Mother Of Seven

Mrs. Mary Zimmerman, 33, of St. Joe was killed Tuesday afternoon when she was thrown from her car after it hit a tree and post off an icy Allen County road. She died of a crushed chest and other internal injuries, suffered as the car rolled on top of her.

The accident occurred on the Cuba Road, 5 miles northeast of Grabill. Mrs. Zimmerman was employed at the Crosby Boat Company where she had taken a job following the death of Mr. Zimmerman last May. She was returning home when the accident occurred.

Noah Delegrange noticed the overturned car at about 4 p.m. Tuesday. When he stopped to investigate, he found Mrs. Zimmerman lying beneath the car. Investigating officers reported that the victim evidently was pinned under the car about 20 minutes before Delagrange drove by. She had left work at 3:30 p.m. and would have arrived at the site of the crash at about 3:40 p.m.

A wrecker was used to pull the car off Mrs. Zimmerman. She was pronounced dead on arrival at Parkview Hospital in Fort Wayne at 5 p.m. An autopsy was scheduled for Wednesday by the Allen County Coroner, Dr. Edgar Mendenhall.

Officers reported that the road was covered with packed snow and ice at the scene of the acident. They believed Mrs. Zimmerman lost control of the car at the bottom of a steep grade. The car hit a fence post and tree at the east side of the road.

The accident leaves 7 orphaned children, Phyllis, Jerry, David, Shirley, Donna Jo, Roger and Darlene, ranging in age from 4 to 16 years. Relatives plan to care for the children. Other survivors include two step-sons, Henry Zimmerman of Fort Wayne and Harold Zimmerman of Garrett; a step-daughter, Mrs. Donna Grabill, of LaOtto; the mother, Mrs. Mabel Likes, of Butler; the father, Lamont Likes, of Hudson; 10 stepgrandchildren; three brothers, Cecil Likes of Auburn, Alvin Likes of Sherwood, Ohio, and Glenn Likes of Deerfield, Ill.; and a sister, Mrs. Joan Mock, of Butler.

After the autopsy the body will be taken to the Walter Funeral Home in Spencerville until Friday when services will be conducted at the St. Joe Church of Christ at 2 p.m. Bro. Donald Foust will officiate and burial will be in Riverside Cemetery.

Comets Win Thriller From Avilla, 48-46

Gerald Lothamer, who had been held scoreless through the entire game, took aim and fired a near half-court set shot just before the buzzer sounded last Friday night and hit for a field goal and a thrilling 48-46 Riverdale victory over Avilla at the Auburn gym.

The Comets held leads at the quarter marks, but both teams were never far apart until the final frame when Avilla pulled to an 8-point lead. With less than 2 minutes remaining the locals rallied, aided by Ronnie Fisher's two successive thefts of the ball from the Panthers' possession, and tied the score at 46-all. Avilla missed a free throw, Riverdale got possesion and Lothamer uncorked his only two points of the evening at the right moment.

Quarter scores were 10-8, 19-17 and 30-29, all with Riverdale leading.

Avilla won the reserve game by a 48-43 score.

LADIES LITERARY CLUB

The Ladies Literary Club met Wednesday, January 16, with Mrs. Robert Musser. The president called the meeting to order and the collect and pledge to the flag were given in unison.

For Bible evening, Mrs. Cora Curie and Mrs. Forest Bevington presented Christ and the Fine Arts and Music. The former explained and read several important writings pertaining to Christ. The latter gave scripture and played recordings of famous hymns which began with the birth of Christ and followed through to the crucifixtion.

Mrs. William Staman described the wonders of the world and conducted a word game for entertainment.

Fourteen members responded to roll call.

The critic's report was given by Mrs. Carl Carpenter.

Members were reminded that the next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. M. E. Storer.

After adjournment, the hostess served light refreshments.

Burglaries Reported By Two Local Stores

DeKalb County has been witnessing a number of break-ins in recent weeks and St. Joe has not been without its share. Two major thefts were reported in the past fews days, the first at Dunten's Market and the second at Clauser's Trading Post.

The first occurred sometime late Sunday night or early Monday morning. Dunten's Market was entered by prying open the front door with a half-inch rod or crow bar. The loot totaled approximately $100 and included several cartons of cigarettes and bill collection receipts for the town waterworks. Papers and other items were scattered about the store as the thieves apparently searched for other amounts of cash. They left by the rear door. Footprints in the snow indicated that the culprits walked around the building before choosing the front door as the way of entry.

The sheriff's department was called again Wednesday morning to investigate a break-in at Clauser's Trading Post, this also accomplished by prying open one of the front doors. New locks were recently installed on both doors.

Loot in the second break-in of a commercial establishment included again several cartons of cigarettes, cameras, flash lights and other items totaling approximately $100 in value. No cash was taken.

These break-ins, however, have not been the only instances of thievery in recent weeks. A break-in was made at a house trailer in St. Joe and there have been reports of numerous thefts of gasoline from farm gas tanks.

The county has experienced break-ins in other communities including one early Monday morning at Butler at Harold's Store. A police check at 4 a.m. had revealed no disturbance. But shortly thereafter, at approximately 8 a.m., the store owner discovered the theft as he opened for business. Entrance was gained by breaking a glass in the front door.

ST. JOE VALLEY HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB

The January meeting of the St. Joe Valley Home Demonstration Club was held Friday, January 18, at the home of Alice Reidenbach.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Doris Yeiser. The club collect was repeated in unison.

Devotions were by Pluma Hamilton. The history and words of the song of the month "We Are the Hoosiers of Hoosierland" were read by Doris Yeiser.

The lesson on meat and meat cookery was given by Doris Yeiser and MaDonna Wade.

The response to roll call was given by 18 members, 1 guest and 3 children.

The business session was marked by installation of new officers and planning work for the coming year. During the social hour programs were copied in members' new books.

Lunch was served by the hostess, Alice Reidenbach, assisted by co-hostesses Audra Walter and Nancy Coburn.

The next meeting will be held February 15 at the home of Elnora Blue.

BEST OF ALL

(Poem written by Norma Trout of Mountain Mission School at Grundy, Va. This is the girl who vacationed with Mr. and Mrs. Merwin Place during the summer of 1956.)

We may send to others all our valentines expressing our love,

But listen my friend! It takes more than that for God above.

He wants to live within our lives, and our hearts to possess,

When we give "our all" to Him, then He knows who we love best!

The Bible tells us to go to people, both far and also near,

And spread abroad "the greatest story", of Christ so very dear.

We are commanded to love our neighbors, and do good always,

For in so doing we glorify our Saviour, and show forth His praise.

As we send our valentines, to our loved ones, and all the others,

Let us send the love of Christ, above all else, my Christian brothers.

To some, we'll send large valentines, to some, we may send ones very small.

But to everyone, we'll send Christ, for He's the Best of All!

Another Fuss

The truth hurts.

Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson is finding that out. For the second time in recent months he has raised the ire of some citizens of this nation because of his frank appraisal of a situation in plain, everyday language that anyone can understand.

A few days ago he referred to some of the young men who have taken advantage of the six months' service in the National Guard, plus several years' reserve training, to the two or more years' service in the regular Army as "draft dodgers". Some Congressmen have called for an apology from Mr. Wilson and, as in a previous instance, he may find it necessary for one reason or another to issue one. Perhaps by the time this reaches print, he will be asked to resign.

It isn't very polite to insult people, and certainly it isn't very nice to question their patriotism. Calling a man a draft dodger is insulting and questions his patriotism. But we give credit to Mr. Wilson for having the sense to realize his actions and words are under constant scrutiny. And we don't think he has intended at any time to insult the persons involved in the particular groups about which he has commented, nor has he intended to question the patriotism of all those people. Mr. Wilson has been critical of an idea and the public doesn't appreciate that ideas involve people. His remarks have been made, we take it, with the thought, "If the shoe fits, wear it."

The strange part of the reaction to his remarks is that no one has criticized the program which he has criticized, in effect. No one has seemed to question the reason behind setting up a program whereby a young man has the opportunity to serve shorter time in active service if he so desires. No one has asked for an apology from the National Guard, for instance, for giving a young man the oportunity to serve six months and then return to civilian life, thus making him a "draft dodger." Mr. Wilson is on the spot right now because he said a "bad word." A person may never utter a curse word in anger or disgust and be greatly respected for his ability to refrain from such language. And he does not lower his character by saying, "There is such a word as 'damn'." Mr. Wilson may not like the idea of draft-dodging. And he shouldn't suffer the wrath of the people for saying such a thing exists.

All of the upheaval as a result of his statement or comment is not because he actually has been unfair to anyone. The trouble lies in that a lot of people don't like to have their "sacrifices" lessened. A good many of those individuals insulted are not the servicemen themselves but others who are cashing in on the sacrifice of the young men and counting it as their own. This is a harsh thing to say, some may think, for there are many grieving mothers, fathers, wives, sweethearts, sons and daughters who have lost the men in their lives because of a sacrifice made by the men. But these who have been left to grieve often assume that the sacrifice of these departed men is also their own sacrifice. Even some today who have sons in the service think of their son's serving as a sacrifice on the part of the family. A remark heard just this week on a public-participation radio program came from a mother who was doing some type of service work in her community. The announcer commented about her doing her part for her county and community. She replied, "Oh, we've done more than our part; our son is serving overseas." It sounded just a bit as if that family were to be considered more worthy, or patriotic, if you please, because of the doing of one member.

The sacrifices made by men in service are their own. They have no choice. They face the possibility of death. They are trained in methods of destruction. They are the ones who face bombs and bullets. There is no choice in the matter. The family isn't asked if they will give their young man or young men to the military services; those men are taken. If there is any sacrifice, it comes from those men alone. The others may lose something; but they haven't sacrificed. There is a big difference between losing and sacrificing. The civilian population today hides behind the skirts of the serviceman in this respect. People in this nation won't know what sacrifice is until they must give of themselves individually. The Civil War brought sacrifices on the part of the people. The two world conflicts and the Korean "peace action" did not. This is fortunate for us because our country has not been ravaged by destructive forces. The countries of Europe and Asia know more of what sacrifice is because the destruction is right in their own front yard. And it matters not how smart or dumb, how rich of poor are the people, when they are engaged in fighting for their particular purpose and the shells begin bursting in or near their homes and they must take what weapons they have and fight the enemy, they know sacrifice. We may yet know it in this nation in this generation as other nations have known it in the past.

This has wandered somewhat away from the original subject, but the idea still remains that we don't always see things as they really are. Mr. Wilson put into plain language what he thinks of a situation. Some like plain language, others would rather hear more subtle thoughts so that no trouble is aroused. What Mr. Wilson said in effect is that we have given an opportunity for young men who don't want to serve years in the armed forces to serve months and thus get out of something which is distasteful to them. This type of program doesn't appeal to him. Perhaps if he had used such words in place of the draft dodger description, there might not have been any comment. And there wouldn't have been any use in making the statement, as far as he was concerned, since it would have been passed over.

But Mr. Wilson stated the truth in plain language.

And the truth hurts.

The Polled Shorthorn Breeders Association is built upon the work and interest of such men who strive to improve the breed. In the race across the days they are victors; theirs the praise, theirs the glory and the pride, They have triumped having died." (Charles Hanson Towne).

The semesters have changed and several interesting changes have taken place within the school program. When the Principal's Honor Roll and Honorable Mention List for the semester was posted, it became apparent that the mantle of scholastic champions of the school had passed from last year's graduating class to this year's Sophomore Class. The rankings of the classes, according to percentage of members who made the Roll or List, are as follows: Sophomores 30 per cent (10 of 33); Seniors 23 per cent (9 of 38); Freshmen 19 per cent (10 of 51); Seventh Grade 16 per cent (7 of 44); Eighth Grade 14 per cent (8 of 59); and Juniors 9 per cent(3 of 32). Students with straight "A's" were Charles Easley and Linda Hawk, Seniors; Larry Friend, Sophomore; and Dola Johnson, Seventh Grade.

Those classes that had been operating on a split schedule reversed their schedules at the change of semesters. In most cases, the girls will now be taking Physical Education three days a week and the boys, only two. Two new Driver's Education classes replace the first semester students in that course. The bulk of the English classes have shifted from grammar to literature. The Home Economics classes have moved from one field of study to another (generally from food preparation courses to sewing or home nursing courses).

On the "club" front, the FFA is beginning preparation for the Parliamentary Procedure contest. The Beta Club continues to publish the paper and is preparing to initiate new members on Monday, February 18. The Tri-Hi-Y is preparing for a Sweetheart Dance on Wednesday evening, February 13 (attendance by invitation only).

Among the classes, the usual busy scene prevails. The Seniors have several irons in the fire. Soon to be removed will be their Wednesday night movie, tentatively scheduled for Wednesday, Feb. 6. The Juniors have selected their banquet site and date, held a "Hard Times" class party, and continue working on ball game concessions. The Sophomores are printing tickets and making preparations for their "Record Hop" to be held on February 14, 1957, at 7:30 - 10:30 p.m. at Conley's Store in Spencerville. Tickets, couples 50c, singles 35c. The Freshmen talk of a possible bake sale, and as do all classes, begin to think about their possible projects at the PTA Carnival on Febraury 23.

Reapportionment Would Give County 65-100ths Of Seat

Amendment of the Indiana Constitution looking toward the first reapportionment of seats in the Indiana Legislature since 1921 is being proposed in the 1957 General Assembly.

Most of the variety of proposals introduced before the Legislature recommend that the decennial United States census be the basis of a redistribution of legislative seats among the state's 92 counties.

A new publication of the Indiana State Chamber of Commerce shows that DeKalb County, under a new distribution of the 100 seats in the Indiana House of Representatives based on the 1950 census population, would be entitled mathematically to sixty-six hundredths of a seat. It now has one full seat.

Some measures under study by the legislators propose that the 50-member State Senate also be apportioned upon a basis of population, but others recommend either that the Senate districts remain as they are or that they be apportioned upon a geographical basis. Under one proposed geographical division, the Senate would have 46 seats with each Senator representing two counties.

Under a new distribution of House seats, based upon the 1950 census, the larger counties would gain in representation. For example, Marion County would be entitled mathematically to 14 House seats instead of its present 11½ seats; Lake County, 9 seats instead of 5½; and St. Joseph County, 5 seats instead of 3.

Seats in both the House and Senate last were apportioned in 1921 after an enumeration in 1919 of male citizens over 21 years of age. This enumeration followed a requirement of the Indiana Constitution that such an enumeration be taken every six years and that reapportionment of legislative seats follows.

The State Chamber points out, however, that no such enumeration has been completed since 1919 because not all of the 92 counties have made the constitutionally-required count of male inhabitants.

Three courses, the State Chamber says, remain open for the 1957 Legislature: (1) choose to take no action on enumeration or reapportionment, allowing the present representation to stand; (2) pass new legislation aimed at an enforcement of the constitutional enumeration; or (3) initiate a constitutional amendment adopting the United States census, or some other such base, as the basis for allocating of legislative seats. Proposals made thus far embody the constitutional amendment process.

The following is in loving memory of our dear husband, father and grandfather, Leo A. Schendel, who passed away January 29, 1955.

God hath not promised skies always blue,
Flower-strewn pathways all our lives through;
God hath not promised sun without rain,
Joy without sorrow, peace without pain.
But God hath promised strength for the day,
Rest for the labor, light for the way,
Grace for the trials, help from above,
Unfailing sympathy, undying love. . .

No commercials and no jokes this time!

We have been reading some again, from the writings of Peter Marshall, chaplain of the U.S. Senate in 1947-1948.

Seems like the best thing to do today is to bring you one of his thoughts and one of his prayers.

He said, "The Resurrection never becomes a fact of experience until the risen Christ lives in the heart of the believer."

He prayed our prayer when he prayed, "May our prayer, O Christ, awaken all Thy human reminiscences, that we may feel in our hearts the sympathizing Jesus. Thou hast walked this earthly vale and hast not forgotten what it is to be tried, what it is to know aching muscles, as Thou didst work long hours at the carpenter's bench. Thou hast not forgotten what it is to feel the sharp stabs of pain, or hunger or thirst. Thou knowest what it is to be forgotten, to be lonely. Thou dost remember the feel of hot and scalding tears running down Thy cheeks.

O, we thank Thee that Thou wert willing to come to earth and share with us the weakness of the flesh, for now we know that Thou dost understand all that we are called upon to bear. We know that Thou, Our God, art still able to do more than we ask or expect. So bless us, each one, not according to our deserving, but according to the riches in glory of Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

GOING CONCERN
Lesson for February 3, 1957

A "going concern" is one that prospers, does business and keeps growing. If the Christian church is not a going concern, maybe the reason is that it is not a going concern. That remark needs explaining; it is not meant as nonsense.

Concern?

The Quakers have a good word: Concern, which has a deeper meaning than "firm" or business. It means warm, deep, even self-sacrificing interest in someone or some group or cause. Lincoln had a concern for the Union; St. Paul had a concern for Gentiles; mothers have a concern for their children. Now the church, if it is the true Body of Christ, ought to share his concerns. We know what it was that concerned him—people, the "multitudes", the masses as we now speak of them. The church ought to have—and to be—a living concern for all sorts and conditions of men. A church without the human, humane concern which Jesus had is not what Christ intended.

Going?

Furthermore, the church, so far as it is Christian, ought to be a GOING concern, not only a sitting one—not only a praying one, either. Plenty of churches are (so to speak) sitting concerns. The preacher preaches about "lost" people but nobody gets out to hunt for them—perhaps the preacher doesn't look very hard himself. The members talk to one another about the dreadful state of the world, but they do nothing about it. Missions? What's that? The fact that their denomination is actually going into the ends of the earth, and begs them for help, does not get through to their minds. (Maybe the preacher's fault again?) They have a concern for the sad state of the world, but it's not a going concern, only a talking concern, a tut-tutting concern—nothing alive. So the church dwindles and dies, it's not a going concern any longer because it ISN'T a going concern—it has no real CONCERN, and it never GOES anywhere.

No Mission, No Church

The first Christian church was the twelve apostles. It was a 100 per cent going concern. Jesus did not plan for any of them to remain behind. The directions he gave them are not now followed by any missionary society that has much success; circumstances alter Christian strategy. But all the same, suppose those twelve men had preferred not to go when Jesus sent them? He chose them for two purposes, we read: to be with him and to be sent out. There are always Christians who enjoy worship better than service. Ten people will be out for church to one who will come out for volunteer service of any sort. But there came a time when Jesus had to say (in effect) to his closest friends: You have been with me enough. You have heard all you need to hear, learned all you need to learn—for now. Go out now and change people, change the world, in my name! If they had refused, if Jesus could have found no one willing to go, there never would have been a Christian church. And if the church ceases to be missionary today, it will become a fossil, a relic, a curiosity, without life or usefulness.

"I Wouldn't Be Here If. . ."

Not everybody can become a foreign missionary. (Indeed the Twelve were sent out first to a region smaller than Vermont; their home country.) But there are various ways in which the church can go out, send out. There is a man who has found his life's chief work and interest in developing the moral and spiritual atmosphere of the schools in his state. He said not long ago to a group of religious workers: "I wouldn't be here if my church didn't feed me." What he is doing is outside the church; he works through public agencies of the State. But his inspiration comes from the church. And his church would not have inspired him and "fed" him if in turn it had not been inspired and fed by the Living Bread. Where the church as an organization cannot go, its members, stirred and supported by the Spirit of God, must go, into life everywhere, in the name of Jesus.

Those words—sweet, smooth and sassy—seem to fit this new Chevy right down to its tubeless tires. In the first place, it looks the part. It has a crisp, alert appearance—as trim and functional as an arrow. You can tell that the styling isn't just going along for the ride.

But the real clincher is the sweet and solid way Chevy takes to the road. Horsepower options, you know, range up to 245*. Come take the wheel!

INCOME TAX FACTS NO. 1

Selecting Correct Form Saves Dollars

(This is one of a series of articles on federal income tax filing. These articles are based on information provided by the American Institute of Accountants, in cooperation with the Internal Revenue Service.)

Between now and April 15 over 60 million Americans must file a tax return to report their 1956 income to the federal government. On the basis of past experience about 1 out of every 4 returns filed will contain an error of $2.00 or more. Last year these errors totaled over $100,000,000.

To help you prepare a correct return and avoid mistakes that cost you tax dollars, this newspaper is printing a series of eight articles prepared with the help of the national and state organizations of certified public accountants.

This week's article deals with problems faced by almost anyone who has to make out a return. Later articles will give special hints on deductions to be taken, particularly if you own a car, home or business. Use this series along with the official instruction book which comes free with your tax forms.

Common Mistakes

According to the results of a sampling by the Internal Revenue Service, the mistakes most often made by taxpayers fall into these four groups:

(1) Incorrect listing of income.

This is the main source of error, partly because of debatable questions involving business income. Individuals make mistakes too by leaving out such items as interest on savings accounts, dividends and contest winnings, or by including items which are exempt.

(2) Errors in personal deductions.

This category includes the deductions taken when the 10 per cent "standard deduction" is not used. Important deductions from income are: state and local taxes, interest paid on loans, charitable contributions, medical expenses, losses from storm, fire, flood or theft.

(3) Claiming too many or too few dependents.

Exemptions are allowed for the taxpayer himself and for certain persons he supports, IF they fit the definitions in the instruction book.

(4) Faulty arithmetic.

This is the cause of the fewest number of errors, but approximately 30 per cent of these arithmetical mistakes are made by the taxpayer against himself, resulting in overpayment of approximately $19,000,000 in taxes.

The first thing to determine is whether you should file a return or not. Everyone whose gross income was $600 or more in 1956 must file a return by April 15, 1957. Even if your income was less than $600 you should file a return if any tax was withheld by your employer and you wish to receive a refund. In any case, if you had as much as $400 earnings from self-employment you must file a return to report those earnings for social security purposes.

Non-Taxable Income

It is important to remember that all income is not taxable. You should not include in your return any income which is listed in the official instruction book as exempt. This includes interest on state and municipal bonds, most government payments to veterans and their families, life insurance proceeds upon death, gifts and social security benefits. The tax instructions from the Internal Revenue Service contain a list of the types of income which should be included and those which should be omitted from your return.

If You Changed Jobs

Here is a special point to watch if you worked for more than one employer during 1956. You may have overpaid your social security tax. Each employer is required to withhold social security amounting to 2 per cent of the first $4200 of your wages. If you worked for only one employer, this would amount to $84. However, if you worked for several employers, more than $84 might have been withheld. Check your W-2 withholding slips and see whether the total F.I.C.A. (Federal Insurance Contributions Act) is more than $84. If it is, you can claim credit for the excess in the "taxes withheld" column of your income tax form.

The instruction book which comes with your tax forms gives further information. Help is also available by telephone or at offices of the Internal Revenue Service. The Revenue Service urges you to consult properly qualified advisors if you decide to seek outside help.

ARE YOU MATURE?

Someone has said, "Maturity consists of the following qualities:

1. A well grounded feeling of responsibility and independence.

2. A giving rather than a receiving attitude.

3. Graduating from egoism and competitiveness to co-operativeness and the feeling for the human enterprise.

4. Realizing that hostile aggressiveness, anger, hate, cruelty, and belligerency are weakness, and that gentleness, kindness, and good will are strength.

5. Being able to distinguish fact from fancy

6. Being flexible and adaptable to the changes dictated by fate and fortune."

Now, since that weighty bit of philosophy is out of our system, we are going to take a train ride; in fact probably while you are reading this we are at the Furniture Market in Chicago seeing the new things and making selections of the nice things we feel you'll be wanting to see in the weeks ahead.

Around the Town

With the Editor

Well - - - there goes that little ol' resolution.

You know how it is when you don't have time to do everything you ought to—you do the best you can with the time you've got.

That's the way it is with the Ed this week and the resultant shortened edition.

Incidently, the crossword puzzle wouldn't have been in even if we had the regular 8 pages. The puzzle makers didn't get them here on time.

I hear Casey's having a big doin's this week. You didn't hear? Well, turn the page!

I got a letter from John Crothers who is having a fine time down in Florida playing around with the fish. Read the whole letter next week.

Joe Smith called in a slight alteration in the basketball schedule. The game with Harlan on Friday night this week will be played at New Haven, not at Harlan as the schedules indicated. Also, the admission price will be a "straight 50 cents". I understand the Allen County schools all charge the flat 50-cent fee with no special price for students.

While I was at the school Wednesday, Joe began announcing "History," then a few moments later "World History", then "English", "General Mathematics", and so on, over the public address system now in use in the school office. This enables him to make announcements without the necessity of going from room to room, or to call teachers or students to the office, or whatever. But curiosity got me and I asked why he was calling out those subjects over the p.a. The answer shows maybe why school has been operating so smoothly this year. It's sounds like a little thing, Joe said, but the students who were in the classrooms farthest from the cafeteria at lunch time ALWAYS ended up at the end of the line and had to wait longest for their lunch. So now the principal calls the classes in the order that they are to leave their rooms for the lunch hour, waiting those few moments in between to give students in one room a start before the next room is called for. By rotating the schedule everybody gets at the head of the line sometime.

A. L. Ginther of Fort Wayne dropped in this week to put in an ad for the Elson house in town and while here did some reminiscing about St. Joe and some of the people in it. He remembered Bill Keeler and said he worked for Ford Jackson's dad when Ford was born. He also worked for Bill Smith 'way back when and helped to build the town hall. In fact, he said he made the cement blocks which were used in the construction of the building. He also told of the horsing around (with horses) that went on around here, including the time a couple or three of the young bucks came in a restaurant here in town and brought their horse with them. They would have brought the wagon in too, but it wouldn't fit in the door.

Do you have a calendar at home where you mark the coming events in the proper date squares? — So do we. It has the family birthdays, social engagements, etc. Mike filled one in for Mom here the other day. The square for Saturday, February 23, has his notation, "Dave vs. dentist."

Here I thought about putting a little item in last week about Frank Sechler going to Florida for a week or so and we were doing pretty good back here at home with no rumors about his going down there to get married and I didn't and HE DID! - well, not quite, but he got signed up for it.

—Any day now.

Heard on Jack Paar's noontime radio show:

One little boy to another little boy: "Hey, you know that tongue-twister you taught me yesterday? It's a mouth-soaper, too!"

We have more nice people in our town.

With the misfortunes that have beset the Zimmerman family, the children left with no mother or father, several people have asked "what's going to happen to the children?" Well, relatives are taking some of them but the nice people in St. Joe come in right here. Marcel and Carol Pugsley, who have their own start family-wise, have "adopted" Phyllis, and Harvey and Fern Carr, who have a few kiddy-Carrs of their own, have taken in Dave.

—Real nice people.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank everyone for their helpfulness and expressions of sympathy at the death of Mary Zimmerman. We especially thank Donald Foust and the St. Joe Church of Christ for their kindness.

LIGHTS

Lesson for February 10, 1957

Anyone who has ever driven in city traffic knows what a snarl there is when a traffic light goes "on the blink", meaning that it DOESN'T blink. There is almost as bad a tangle of traffic when one side of the light, either green or red, fails to operate. The driver on the blind side is not sure what he ought to do, but the drivers backed up the street think they know, and honk at him and at things in general, until the police come and straighten things out. Now suppose—if you can suppose nonsense for a minute—that a city board of aldermen decided to save money by not buying red traffic lights. "Let's not discourage our energetic citizens with red stop-lights; what we need is vigor and drive; GO lights are all we need." Or suppose in another place the city fathers decided to buy and install red lights only. People should be left to their own initiative, they might say. All we need to do is to stop them when they need to be stopped.

God's Yes and No

All through the Bible, and especially in the teachings of Jesus, we find, as it were, lights both red and green. There are the red lights of warning and the green lights of encouragement. In the two chapters of the background Scripture, for instance, we find Jesus warning men against: judging by appearances, failure to respond to God's messenger, condemning men for "sins" which are not really sins, regarding institutions (in this case, the Sabbath) as holier than human life itself, speaking evil against God's Holy Spirit, careless speech in general, and living an empty life (the story of the restless demon). These are all warnings against ideas or action which look all right on the surface. The Bible has few warnings against obvious sins; many against sins that look harmless or even good. But also there are the green lights of comfort and encouragement. A certain philosopher, a particular gloomy one, called Christianity God's "attack on man."

Lighthouse

In the New Testament Christians are called lights in a dark world. Indeed Christ says they are "the light" of the world. So the church like the Lord must hang high both the lights of warning and the lights of encouragement. The church must never let the red light get out of order. She must never let people think a sin is not a sin, or that sin is not harmful. She must warn men of dangers that are not obvious. She must never be a Pollyana, she must never sing "The world is so full of a number of things, I am sure we should all be as happy as kings." Like a lighthouse, the church must warn men, both Christians and the world at large, of hidden dangers. If the church sees no harm in what "everybody does", if the church's standards are simply those of the world, if church turns into a sort of celestial rotarian society, its members figuratively slapping one another on the back and telling one another how wonderful they are, then the church itself is in danger.

Home Ligths

If the lighthouse says, STAY AWAY! the harbor lights say COME HOME. So the church, like her Lord, if faithful to God's Word, will show men not only what not to do but what to do. When an airplane is approaching a landing field in the dark, if it is a modern properly lighted field, it will have a double row of lights on the runway, so that the pilot by lining up his plane with those lights can follow them right down to a safe landing. The church ought to furnish lights like those for the world. The church has the right and the duty to speak, as Jesus spoke, not only to its own members but to the world outside, proclaiming the principles of life which is right in the sight of God, not only for individuals but also for group living on small scale and large. The church must speak of sin, yes by all means. But a church that speaks only of sin and never of its remedy is like a doctor who diagnoses but never prescribes—like a harbor authority which maintains a lighthouse to keep boats out but no buoy lights to guide ships in.

Geraldine Poisel, Andy Crow Receive 'Excellent' Rating

Two of Riverdale's student musicians, Geraldine Poisel of the 8th grade, and Andy Crow, high school freshman, have won the coveted "excellent" rating in the Northern Indiana District Music Contest.

Competition was held on Saturday, February 2, in Fort Wayne.

Accompanied by Miss Gailanna Holman, Miss Poisel competed with 25 students to achieve her rating. She played Buchtel's "Jean Waltz" in the baritone horn division.

Mr. Crow, with Miss Holman accompanying, performed on the trumpet Weber's "Carnival of Venice" in a field of 42 contestants.

Both young musicians are members of the Riverdale School Band, directed by Miss Betty Boggs.

LADIES LITERARY CLUB

On Wednesday evening, January 30, the Ladies Literary Club met with Mrs. M. E. Storer. The collect and pledge to the flag were led by Mrs. Frank Shull.

The first part of the lesson was presented by Mrs. William Staman who gave an interesting picture of the Belgian Congo. For the latter part of the hour, Mrs. Wayne Storer read a paper on poetry for Mrs. M. E. Storer. The reading of "Just Before Christmas" and "One Hoss Shay" were enjoyed very much.

Mrs. Wilbur Yeiser conducted a very unusual word game for entertainment.

Roll call was taken with 19 members responding.

After a short business meeting, club adjourned and the hostess served light refreshments.

Clings to the road like a stripe of paint!

The '57 Chevy can give lessons on taking curves and holding the road to just about any car going. Few cars at any price are so beautifully balanced and so smooth, sure and solid in action.

A car has to have a special kind of build and balance to keep curves under control. And nobody outdoes Chevrolet in that department! It "corners" with all the solid assurance of an honest-to-goodness sports car. Chevy doesn't throw its weight around on turns because it carries its pounds in the right places.

And if the road should turn upward, Chevy can take care of that nicely, too—with up to 245 h.p.*

Letters to the Editor

January 29, 1957
Bradenton, Fla.

Hello Ted.

It seems to be the custom for the visitors to Florida for the first time to write to the home town paper and tell the home folks about the wonderful climate and the beautiful sunshine with the temperature holding a steady 86 degrees, and it is all true this season, but the old timers here tell me that this is the best season they have seen in several years. It is not always this way evidently.

The wife and I have been roaming the countryside and the islands and beaches, since we have been here and from now on we want to visit the central and east part of the state and make a trip down to the keys and then comes fishing weather and "Oh Boy" am I ever going to catch up on my fishing?

We were at the Manatu County Fair last week and the Florida State Fair is beginning today at Tampa and I guess we will try to see that on Gasparilla Day as it is the big day of the fair.

This trailer park we are in is the largest in the world with 1100 trailers and 2500 inhabitants and something going on for free every day.

Two free movies a week, two church services weekly, hobby classes, dancing classses, two dances weekly, state reunions and whatnot, one mad round of pleasure and my feet hurt. 10 horseshoe courts and about 20 shuffle courts, and folks say they come to Florida to rest.

We have met folks from home and visited with friends from home and folks from Mich., Pa., Ohio, Iowa and Keokuck and the Lord knows where else and they are all folks just like us, a little bit on the sixtyish side and having the time of their life just doing nothing in particular but loafing and visiting and fishing and riding around and bragging about their kids back home.

We have kinda began to like living in one of these tin cans they call trailers. It's a lazy man's idea of heaven, you can just reach and get most anything you need. The bathrooms are sort of a problem though. You almost have to be a contortionist to get to the places that need washing most. A runt like me can get by O.K. but I would like to see you in what Mom calls our bathroom. I go to the shower room up on the corner where I can soak up and get back home without a charley horse or a crick in my neck.

There is something peculiar about fishing down here. I either have my dates mixed or the map of Florida I have is a misprint, for when I have tried my hand at fishing it was yesterday that they were hitting or else it was over on the point or on the south key that the fish were jumping in the boat. So I am fooling the fish now and am going fishing tomorrow or maybe next week. No fish can cross me up and get away with it continually and anyhow there is a swell fish market only three blocks away.

Rumors have been drifting down here that you have been having alittle nasty weather up there. When I think of all the nasty weather I battled through for 35 yr. peddling mail, I am shedding great big tears of sympathy for you folks in your tribulations this winter.

Well Ted I am running out of words temporarily so say Hello to everyone for me, and that we are having a swell time here.

I hoped I haven't bored you to much.

See you in the spring.

John W. P. Crothers
Bradenton T.P. H-31

Hmmmmm, you had rumors drifting down there and we had snow drifting up here.

But most of it is gone now and these 35-45 degree days are bringing that usual impatience that comes before spring. —Ed.

Hi Ted,

Just dropping a short reminder to let you, and everyone else in St. Joe, know that in a few weeks I'll be out of this miserable place (19 days to be more exact).

Community Club Begins Lighting Project

The Spencerville Community Club held a pot luck meeting Saturday night at the Fire Hall, and presented an idea for the betterment of the community during the course of the meeting.

A general notice to the community is being circulated in the form of a letter which contains details of a lighting project for the Spencerville community. The letter states:

"Last fall we discussed lighting for the whole community. Well, we've got a wonderful opportunity now to get some of the most attractive outdoor lamps available at less than half their original cost. Our lighting committee reported their findings and we see that we can get lamp, wire and even posts at a greatly reduced price. We can get the lamps for $7.00, 100 ft. of wire for about $5.25 and a 7 foot iron post for about $4.50. This is an offer that is really wonderful. We are hoping that folks on every street in town will get one or two and will cooperate with us on the placing of the lights for uniformity in height and distance from the street.

"Sound good? Some one in your block will contact you about the lights but why wait? You can see a sample of this lamp by contacting Jake Hoover right away. Several people have already ordered theirs. We know you want one, too. Wouldn't it be wonderful if all our streets were lighted at night? And with such beautiful lights, too.

"This is one of the projects sponsored by your Community Club. It is a group for community improvement and fun. Why don't you attend the next meeting."

Officers of the club are Rev. Henry Weber, president; Glenn Moore, vice president; and Mrs. Janice Hollabaugh, secretary.

Church League To Meet Monday

The St. Joe Church Softball League will hold its first meeting of 1957 next Monday evening, February 18.

Meeting time is 8 p.m. in the basement of the Lutheran Church in St. Joe.

It is requested that church teams desiring to participate in the summer softball league be represented by their pastors and team managers or representatives.

Included in the business will be election of officers.

Comets Win 1. Lose Pair

The Riverdale Comets eked out a close 44-42 win over the Churubusco Eagles on the latter's home floor on Wednesday January 30.

The local five led 13-4 at the quarter, but were overtaken in the second period as the Eagles posted a 22-21 half-time margin. Churubusco went on to a 5-point 36-31 three-quarter lead before the Comets rallied to a 42-33 lead. A basket and a foul shot made it 42-41. Riverdale scored again to make it 44-41 but a foul with one second remaining gave Churubusco a chance to tie the score. Making the first shot, the second was purposely missed in an effort to gain a tip-in, but it missed and the Comets had their win.

The Riverdale Reserves won the prelim by a 42-31 score.

The Riverdale Comets then took a double licking over the past week end, dropping a 59-44 decision to Harlan at Harlan on Friday night and suffering an upset loss to Metz by a 53-51 score at Metz.

A DAIRYMAN'S TARDY BREAKFAST

Mom goes to bed, along about eleven,
And don't get up in the moring till seven,.
While I milk the cows and do the chores,
She lies in bed and snores.
When I didn't come in to breakfast till eight,
She said, What happened? You are so late,
The bacon is cold, the eggs have been fried,
And we waited on you till we thought you had died.
Well! I milked the fresh cow, threw down some more hay,
The oil man came and I had him to pay;
And that old cow with a spot on her back,
Kicked at the milker, and hit me a crack.
Now if you don't believe this is true,
Look at my leg, it is all black and blue.
Norma's P.S.
That's right, Mom, that's right,
He is black and blue where he should be white.

What Is Right To Work

by Stephen C. Noland, Publisher Marion County Mail, President, Indiana Right To Work Committee, Inc.

A surge of American interest in the right to work has aroused curiosuity as to why the interest.

The answer seems to be general and positive. Strange to say, a good many left wingers and a good many conservatives seem to be in complete agreement on this issue.

The left wingers apparently have been jolted into realizing that there is no progress in a change of masters. This is an old expression of radicals. They aim all their arguments, and even violence, at assuring the freedom of the individual. The conservative is naturally for freedom of the individual. He believes in the fundamental American principles which include constitutional protection of the freedom of the individual.

As to right to work, J. C. Gibson, one of the foremost American legal authorities on the subject, calls it "inherent." Inherent means that it belongs to man by nature.

"The right to work is co-extensive with the right of life itself," says Gibson, "for all save a small fraction of mankind must work for a living, and a denial of the basic means of survival imperils life itself. This utter dependence of man upon freedom of opportunity to engage in the common occupations of life has been brought home to members of minority groups time after time, in country after country. Shylock was expressing the wisdom of ages when he said: 'You take my house, when you take the prop that doth sustain my house; you take my life, when you take the means whereby I live'. "

AMERICAN SENSE

"What we are talking about," said Gibson in an address to the American Bar Association, " is of course the right to work in the American and not in the Marxian sense of the term. In the Marxian sense the right to work is interpreted as embracing a guaranty of employment by a paternalistic state controlling all the means of production. In its American sense the term signifies the inherent right of every man to an opportunity to seek and retain the gainful employment which he desires, for which he may be fitted, and which is available in our economy. The right to work demands that this opportunity be unfettered by artifical and unnecessary restrictions or the imposing of unreasonable or arbitrary conditions, such as a requirement of union membership."

LEGAL BACKGROUND

Although legal opinions involving the right to work go back to laws enacted following the Civil War, comparatively recent decisions are cited as eloquent testimony to the wisdom of constitutional provisions for the right of man.

In a decision 40 years ago, Justice Charles Evans Hughes, as quoted by Gibson, said:

"It requires no argument to show that the right to work for a living in the common occupations of the community is of the very essence of the personal freedom and opportunity that it was the purpose of the amendment to secure."

"The amendment of which he spoke," explains Gibson, "was the Fourteenth which, like he Fifth Amendment to the Federal Constitution, forbids the government to deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law."

Another opinion of great force, rendered in 1954 by Justice Douglas, is as follows:

"The right to work, I had assumed, was the most precious liberty that man possesses. Man has indeed as much right to work as he has to live, to be free, to own property. The American ideal was stated by Emerson in his Essay on Politics, 'A man has a right to be employed, to be trusted, to be loved, to be revered.' It does many men little good to stay alive and free and propertied, if they cannot work. To work means to eat. It means to live . . ."

These observations help explain why men of all political views and all faiths find themselves in agreement on right to work.

Statistics tell us that women are getting men's wages nowadays. That is a fact that married men have always known!

Our observation is that mothers are great people. We have the privilege of noticing mothers conduct their children through our stores and they do a fine job whether it's one child or many.

I suppose that all mothers are a good bit like mine was when I used to come in with dirt on my shoes and track up the clean linoleum. She didn't like it and let me know about it!

We here at Ort's are different than that. We are thankful to all of you fine people for tracking up our stores. What ever you come in for, whether to visit, to buy a fine piece of jewelry, to look for a house full of furniture, to buy a stamp, to get change for the parking meter, to have your watch regulated, to get a refill for your Paper Mate pen, to use our telephone, for all these we are very glad.

Please, dear friends, keep coming in and tracking up our floors, you'll make us very happy!

Statistics show that more than a million women in the United States are overweight. These of course are round figures.

INCOME TAX FACTS NO. 2

Selecting Correct Form Saves Dollars

(This is one of a series of articles on federal income tax filing. These articles are based on information provided by the American Institute of Accountants, in cooperation with the Internal Revenue Service.)

The government gives you the alternative of using the simplified income tax form 1040A, the "short form" 1040, or the "long form" 1040, depending on the amount and circumstances of your income. Selection of the wrong form may cost you unnecessary tax dollars.

The easiest form to file is the 1040-A, and according to Treasury records, one out of four taxpayers use it. To be eligible to file a 1040-A form, your total income must be less than $5,000, consisting entirely of wages subject to withholding (or of wages, dividends and interest, providing not more than $100 of such income came from a source outside that listed on your W-2 slips). The simplified form makes no provision for "Head of Household" status or itemized deductions. If you use this form, the government will figure your tax and send you either a refund or a bill, if you so desire. However, for the first time this year, you can compute your own tax on form 1040-A and either send in the balance due with the return or show thereon the amount of refund you have coming.

Whether To Itemize

Should you decide to use the regular form 1040 you still have the choice of itemizing deductions or using a standard deduction which amounts to about 10 percent of your income. If your income was less than $5,000 and you use the standard deduction, you determine your tax from the special table given in the instruction book.

You are likely to save by itemizing if you:

(1) Own real estate

(2) Had unusual medical expenses

(3) Had deductible child-care expense

(4) Suffered losses from fire, storm, accident or theft

(5) Made fairly large contributions

It is important to remember that if you incur such expenses as transportation, meals or lodging in connection with your work, check carefully the instruction book to find how these expenses may be deducted even though you decided to use the standard deduction.

If your deductions are close to 10 percent, it is wise to itemize them and figure your tax both ways to see which results in the smaller tax. As the Treasury Department has pointed out, "The law expects you to pay your correct tax—no more —no less."

Married Couples

Most married couples save tax dollars by filing a joint return instead of separate returns. This is because the tax is figured on a joint return as if the husband and wife each had one-half the total income (even though the wife may actually have no income). Income-splitting, as it is called, may bring the couple down into a lower tax bracket.

Watch for the exceptions, however. If you had capital losses or unusually high medical expenses, you will be wise to figure both jointly and separately to see which results in less tax.

If you are supporting a dependent and maintain a home for that person although you are single, widowed, divorced or legally separated, you may be able to qualify as a "head of household", and figure your tax on a special table which gives you part of the advantage enjoyed by married couples filing joint returns.

Surviving Spouse

Also, if your husband or wife died in 1954 or 1955, and you have as a member of your household a dependent child or step-child, you are entitled as a "surviving spouse" to the same income-splitting benefits this year as you would have on a joint return—unless you remarried before the end of 1956. The privilege to file as a surviving spouse applies to the first two years following the year in which your husband or wife died.

Legion Urges Religious Observances

Lewis Walter, chaplain of Walter Whitehurst Post 283 of the American Legion, has announced that the local post is joining with other Legionnaires in the "Back To God" movement during the month of February. The Back To God movement is a continuing program sponsored by the American Legion in belief that our country will be strong if our people will return to the religious principles upon which this nation was founded.

The Legion recommends:

Raise our minds and hearts to God in individual daily prayer;

Encourage the placement of a Bible in every home.

Make family reading of the Bible a part of every day;

Encourage religious raining of children;

Encourage weekly worship of God.

The American Legion, pledged to service "For God and Country", has continuously emphasized the spiritual foundations of our freedom. To preserve this freedom, a spiritual reawakening of the people of the United States is imperative.

Religion has a vital place in American life. The Legion, therefore, recommends a return to the fundamentals of our faith: prayer, regular attendance at church, family devotions, Bible reading and religious instruction of children.

This is a program in which Americans of every creed can take part. The Protestant, Catholic and Jewish faiths all remind men of their obligation to worship God. Religious leaders endorse this program with high praise.

The American Legion believes the church and home are the cradles of democracy and two of the greatest character building institutions.

The family that prays together stays together.

Feb. 17 Opens NCE Study

The week of February 17 through 24 has been set aside as National Child Evangelism Week. The DeKalb County Fellowship is joining with similar groups across the nation endeavoring to tell the people what child evangelism is and what it is doing in the county.

Governor Gary of Oklahoma has suggested that this week between the birthdays of Abraham Lincoln and George Washington be Child Evangelism week because "the delinquency problem of the country has been definitely linked with the lack of Bible teaching."

Child Evangelism Fellowship classes probably rank with the Vacation Bible School classes in effectiveness, where seriously put to use. It induces mothers also to learn and teach gospel stories to their children and others in the neighborhood.

Throughout the week, the 18 active "Good News Clubs" will be having open house. All parents are invited to visit the classes. The directors, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rose of Auburn, are hoping that many parents will take advantage of this opportunity to see what takes place in one of the classes.

Wednesday, February 20, has been set aside for a special day of prayer and many churches in the county will take part. On the two Sundays in the special observance, CEF workers, teachers, committee

TRUTH IS ALIVE

Lesson for February 17, 1957

How do you explain advanced mathematics to children who don't know what 2x2 means? Jesus had an equally hard time trying to explain what he meant by the Kingdom of God. (By the way, comparison of passages will show that Kingdom of "God" and of "heaven" mean just the same thing.) Nearly everything he said about it has been persistently misunderstood by somebody or other. Harder than explained a totally new idea is transforming an old one, and Jesus had this more difficult task: for many of his contemporaries, both friends and enemies, thought they knew what "Kingdom of God" meant, already, and they did not want to be told.

A Definition

We can venture a definition of the Kingdom of God to which most persons will agree: The state of things in which God's will is wholly done by all men in all things. Many persons will agree to that definition; but it leaves several questions unanswered. One of these questions is dealt with in the parables chosen for this week's study. It is this: How does the Kingdom grow, or spread, or come? This is an especially important question if we understand that it is a part of God's plan to use his servants — meaning and including ourselves, too—to help bring the Kingdom to pass, to bring it out of the world of hope into the world of fact and experience. Most churches sing the hymn, "Rise up, O men of God!" They do not sing the parody on it which begins, "Sit down, O men of God, you cannot do a thing!"

Not By Force

But suppose we do rise up to work for the Kingdom, what shall we do?

Good men have long asked themselves that question . . . and somtimes given wrong answers. Some have thought that the reign of God could be forced on men. So we have had the Crusaders, the Inquisition, the New England "theocracies", Calvin in Geneva and Cromwell in England—all working on the same theory: You can force people to do God's will. This earth can become like heaven if your police force is good enough.

Not By Machines

But that never has worked. It can't work, because the Kingdom of God is not that sort of thing. So, other good but mistaken men have supposed that the way the Kingdom spreads abroad is by a copying system of some kind, let us say by a vast mimeographing machine. Some particular person, or period, or institution, is taken as the absolute pattern, and people are encouraged to imitate it to the last detail. For example, the early Christian church, as described in the book of Acts, is taken by some people as the picture of the ideal church, and all churches (it is said) should be as nearly exact copies of it as is possible. Or the social and political organization set forth in the laws of Moses are taken to describe the ideal state, and we today should imitate that if we want to get the perfect society. Or some ancient saint is taken as the exact model of every one who wants to be a good person. But these notions are all off center. No world and no institution and no age or system in the past was perfect even for that day; and when you take something that was imperfect yesterday and try to make it fit today, the result is more imperfect than ever.

The Kingdom Is a Living Thing

Jesus' parables show how the Kingdom of God really spreads and grows. He called it once a kingdom of truth; and TRUTH IS A LIVING THING. Truth cannot be forced upon people. Mere copying of truth is mechanical and may even be meaningless. Truth grows the way a plant does, the way yeast does in dough; silently, steadily, by the sheer power of the life that is in it. But since the Kingdom of God is made up of people, since the truth of Christ is not one to be read about but one to be lived out, the Kingdom of God, the world of his heart's desire, comes into being by the personal touch of life on life. Truth spreads from pole to pole only as it spreads from soul to soul.

Rev. Frank Stevenson, former pastor of the St. Joe and Spencerville Lutheran churches and now pastor of Holy Trinity Lutheran Church at Muncie, performed the ceremony. The couple's attendeants were Mr. and Mrs. Art Parry of Fort Wayne.

Howard Williams of Auburn was critically injured last week when he was struck by an automobile as he stood at the rear of a pickup truck parked on the travelled portion of state road 427 south of Auburn. He suffered critical chest injuries, including fractured ribs, probable broken right leg and concussion resulting from a severe head injury.

Mr. Harold Jackson of Oak Park, Ill., was a Friday dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Allison.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Baker and daughters were Wednesday evening dinner guests in the Elwood Hart home.

Mrs. Hilda Kern, Mrs. Viena Rude and Mr. Roy Koch were Friday evening shoppers in Fort Wayne.

Folks visiting in the O. E. Inlow home during the past week were Mrs. Harold Keller and son and Mrs. John Arrants and daughter of Butler; Larry Furnish of Leo; and J. W. Mellick, Mrs. Anna Hursey, Mr. and Mrs. William Hubbard and Mrs. Alice Inlow and sons.

The regular meeting and annual election of officers of the 21st O.E.S. District will be held in Auburn on Monday evening, February 18, beginning with a pot luck supper to be served in the Methodist Church basement at 6:30, followed by the meeting to be held in the Masonic Temple. All members of the district are urged to attend as this is an important meeting.

Supper guests in the J. E. Foltz home Monday were Mr. and Mrs. Chester Scofield of Jewel, Ohio, and Mrs. Lillian Buckingham. Joe has been a shut-in for the past few weeks but is improving slowly but surely.

The annual meeting of the DeKalb County Association for Retarded Children will be held Thursday, February 21, at the Eagles' Home in Garrett. A sound film of the school in operation will be shown. The public is cordially invited.

Ray Allison is improving steadily from a heart condition which put him on the sick list last December.

I'm on guard right now, so I'll sign off. It's time to flank that post again.

Thanks again Ted for sending me the paper.

A Short-Timer
Albert McMaken

(This short-timers letter is a little too big for printing, so maybe you can get a little laugh out of it anyway.)

The short-timer's letter is too good to pass up so here tis· Ed.

Headquarters 285th Field, Artillery Observation Battalion
Fort Bragg, North Carolina

Issued in Solemn Mourning this 8th day of Feb., 1957, to the Neighbors Friends, Relatives, and Family of Albert L. McMaken.

GAS UP THE CAR:

FILL THE REFRIGERATOR WITH COLD BEER:

GET THEM CIVVIES OUT OF MOTH BALLS:

Dear Civilians:

In a very short while the undersigned will once again appear in your midst, undrafted, dehydrated, demobilized, sans ambition, sans weight, and sans the unperturbable constitution of which he was once the proud possessor. He retains only his ambition to once again engage in life, liberty, and the somewhat delayed pursuit of happiness to his own inimitable extent.

In making your joyous and meticulous preparations for his much to be heralded return, be also prepared to face the stark realization that allowances will have to be accorded for the inevitable crude ways and manners in which he will conduct himself as these appurtenances are and will be the direct cause of the environment which has been his miserable lot for nigh onto two years.

He will undoubtedly be suffering from the heretofore unknown malady, properly termed, "The Fort Bragg Heebies," which, although not communicable, can cause great unrest if he is not graciously enveloped in your now new and strange world. Therefore show no alarm if his first few months of existence in your presence reveal strange quirks of behavior on his part. Take it with a smile if he prefers to squat on his haunches instead of sitting in a chair, or if you should find him sleeping on the floor instead of on his Beautyrest. Keep calm if he desires to pour gravy on his dessert, or spread grape jam across his tenderloin. Be entirely nonchalant if a few Army colloquialisms find their way into his speech, and on the whole, condone his every action for a few months, no matter how insane or fatuous they may be. Above all, never ask him why the Smith guy made higher rank than he did. Never express a flattering remark about either the Navy, Air Corps, or Marines. Until he becomes entirely housebroken, be especially observant when he is in the presence of a half-barrel, or a fifth of Haig & Haig.

Bear in mind that beneath his scaling skin and awkward mannerisms, beats a heart of gold. So with untiring kindness, tolerance, benevolence, forbearance, complacency, and abundant amount of mental fortitude, you should be sufficiently able to fully rehabilitate that which is now a hollow shell of the deliriously happy civilian you once knew.

Send no more papers to the 285th FA Obsr Bn, CAUSE I'M COMING HOME!

Very sincerely yours,
Albert L. McMaken

Considering some of the predicaments and situations mankind gets himself into, we cannot help but feel that he is relieving God of a lot of responsibility when he says that he is a self-made man.

However, if you look at the great people of all time, both the well known and the little known, you will find that behind them all was a sense of being powered by a force greater than themselves. They gave the credit to their God for all that they were able to do.

It may be one thing for an earnest individual to use all the gifts that God has given him and thereby build a fine thing for humanity and we do well to applaud his stewardship.

But it is equally true that a person who believes that what he has as talent and substance is from his own doing is simply not honest in his thinking.

All of us need to hear as a constant reminder the words of the apostle Paul. "Neither he who plants nor he who waters is anything but only God who gives the increase."

I am not afraid of tomorrow because I have known yesterday and I love today.

Riverdale School News

The Senior Government classes and the Junior Class, 57 students strong, attended sessions of the Indiana Legislature on February 4. Accompanied by Mrs. Williams, Miss Woodruff and Mr. Brookfield, they departed Riverdale High Schol at 5:45 a.m. on busses driven by Harold Goldsmith and Harold Smith. Arriving at the capitol in time to take an abbreviated tour, they were shown the scenes of Indiana's bi-ennial legislative proceedings. Sessions of both the House and Senate were witnessed by the group. During the former, State Representative Miser of Garrett called the attention of the lawmakers to the Riverdale group, and accorded two, Marilyn Smith and Alva Warstler, the privilege of inspecting the "floor" and his desk. Later in the day, several students were privileged to meet Governor Handley in his office; a part of the group visited the State Supreme Court; the museum of the Capitol proved of some interest to parts of the group.

The students attended the proceedings of the Legislature as a means of supplementing their studies in Government and United States History. Since the Legislature does not meet every year, the next tour is contemplated in 1959.

The Beta Club will, on the evening of February 18, initiate into its ranks Helen Wynkoop, Senior; and Tommy DeLong, Esther Fetters, Carol Flesher, Larry Friend, Joe Leohart, Priscilla Mayer, Paul Myers, Rock Reinhart and Edwin Washler, Sophomores. The club's membership is limited to members of the 10th, 11th and 12th grades who attain and maintain a "B" level scholastically.

Around the Town

With the Editor

Richard Beebe dropped another few lines last week to say he's back at Aberdeen and "the taxpayers are getting their money's worth out of this school" he attended. "It sure was warm here today got up to the 60's hope it stays this way. I am bowling on the company team now and bringing up a pretty good average so far for a beginner. I've got several admirers of the News and we've enjoyed working out the crossword puzzles and reading the poems, especially the one Hank Markle had. He's sure got a point that's right about Ma. Did you get to see the big inaugural parade on TV? Well I got a big wave from the President. It sure was a great experience. Well I want to thank you again for the news. Many thanks. It's such a comfort for one who's away from home."

Richard's address is: PFC Richard C. Beebe RA16513432, Btry. C, 602nd AAA MsL. Bn., Aberdeen Proving Ground, Maryland.

Mose was telling about the flood waters down Tennessee way which he and Mrs. Yeiser went through on their recent trip to visit Rosemary and Gerald Means. A section of the highway was under water and the highway department had it set up on a one-way basis—they thought. You know the little flag they pass back and forth from one end to the other when there's only room for a single line of cars? Well, they had one of those apparently up to the time the Yeisers entered the scene. Because there they were partly through the flooded area and watching intently that white center line through the water, with a big semi in back of 'em, when here comes another huge semi from the opposite direction, followed by a string of cars.

Well, Mose said he saw there wasn't going to be any argument about it—the semi was taking his half of the road in the middle. The Mercury pulled to the side and dropped off the pavement a little, the waves from the passing semi pushed a little, the water came in the door on Doris's side a little, and the Yeiser's were both relieved a little when they made it to the other end.

They were comforted a little, though, when they did reach the other end. The gentle man there informed them that there was supposed to be a flag carried back and forth so those things wouldn't happen.

—I knew it, I knew it. "I wonder how many people will ask if I'm going into another line of business" I sez to myself when the school kids put that dryer in the News Office window. And so far there have been about six.

The dryer is one of the prizes to be drawn for at the PTA Carnival Saturday night.

After the church softball league meeting Monddy night, Don Miller, Rev. Carl Thompson and myself were talking about several things and it came up that Esther formerly belonged to St. Paul's in Fort Wayne and Rev. Thompson said, oh, is that so, someone in his family belongs or did belong there before, and things went on from there from one to another till we came to the fact that he lived in the same house back off of Cook Road that Esther's folks now live in. He also told of the old sink hole that was quite a lucrative thing for himself and some of the other young men of the 30's in that area.

He told one about this fella - - - well, you ask Rev. Thompson about it. I always louse up stories.

This COULD happen:

The stranger stopped his car to watch Elwood as he fished from the river bank. The fisherman caught a big pike, but threw it back. The stranger said nothing. The fisherman then landed a large crappie, but threw that back also. Finally, he caught a small perch and, smiling happily, deposited it in his bag. The stranger was naturally curious.

"Say," he called out, "why did you throw those two big ones back and keep the small one?"

Elwood shrugged.

"Small frying pan."

Fletta Griggs, Andrea Carr To Receive Caps

The Misses Andrea Carr and Fletta Griggs, graduates of Riverdale High School in 1956, will receive their nursing caps this coming Sunday, February 24, at Fort Wayne. The ceremonies will be presented for the Freshman Nursing Class of Parkview Memorial Hospital School of Nursing at the Wayne Street Methodist Church at 2:30 p.m.

Miss Carr is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Carr. Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey Griggs are the parents of Miss Griggs.

Both young ladies have completed one year probationary periods and have earned their nurses caps to show their entering the first year of nursing.

Comets Draw Fremont In Tourney

The Riverdale Comets have their work cut out for them in the next two week ends.

The Comets close their regular season schedule on this coming Friday night as they meet the Fremont Eagles on the Fremont home court. Then during the following week, in the opening of the Indiana High School Basketball Tournament, the Comets face—the Fremont Eagles!

With a mediocre 8-won 11-lost record showing on the books, prospects for the tourney seem none too bright. However, one concession must be made in their favor and that is that they have no real "home floor", finding it necessary to utilize what gyms that are available on their game nights. Consequently, a handicap is given in effect when a home game is played, but the handicap doesn't favor the home team, as is the usual case.

The pairings for the Churubusco-Garrett Sectional are as follows:

AT CHURUBUSCO

Wednesday

Game 1—1:15 Auburn vs. Orland.

Game 2—2:30 Churubusco vs. Flint.

Game 3—7:00 Fremont vs. Riverdale.

Game 4 — 8:15 Butler vs. Hamilton.

Thursday

Game 5—7:00 winners games 1 and 2.

Game 6—8:15 winners games 3 and 4.

AT AUBURN

Wednesday

Game 1—1:15 Angola vs. Salem Center.

Game 2—2:30 Ashley vs. Waterloo.

Game 3—7:30 Pleasant Lake vs. Garrett.

Thursday

Game 4—7:00 Metz vs. winner game 1.

Game 5—8:15 winners games 2 and 3.

The finals will then be played on Saturday.

Each den will decorate its table in accordance with the birthday observance and the theme.

Following the serving of the supper, a program will be presented with the theme of "Golden Treasures." Joe Baidinger will be master of ceremonies. The program includes:

Welcome—Mike Haberkorn.

Response—Ted Haberkorn.

Group singing—Lois Fisher.

Greeting—Rev. Weber.

Cubmaster's report — Glenn Moore.

Introductions—Lynn Fisher.

Remarks by district representative—Orville Collins.

Film Ends CEF Week

"It is Finished," the story of the most eventful day in history, will be told on film by the inimitable Frances Bennett at the Chamber of Commerce Building in Auburn on the evening of Friday, February 22. The program and pot luck supper, beginning at 6:30, will be the climax of Child Evangelism Week in DeKalb County.

Miss Bennett, who visited Auburn in person last fall for C.E.F. Conference, will make the following scenes come to life in the 25-minute sound color film: The Agitation of Pilate, The Courage of the Believing Thief and The Triumph of The Lord Jesus.

All parents, Sunday school workers and pastors in the county, along with the many who are associated with C.E.F. work, are urged and invited to attend.

Cy Gustin Heads Church League For '57

The first meeting of the St. Joe Church Softball League was held Monday evening in the basement of St. Mark's Lutheran Church in St. Joe.

Business conducted during the evening included election of officers. Results were as follows:

President—Cy Gustin.

Vice president — Donald R. Miller.

Secretary-treasurer — Pete Timmerman.

Though no extensive business could be transacted at the first meeting of the year, indications were that there would ge a great amount of interest again this coming summer in the league's activities. Six churches were represented at the meeting by players and managers, and Pastor Donald Foust of the St. Joe Church of Christ and Pastor Carl Thompson of the local E.U.B. churches were present to offer their assistance. There is a possibility of three other churches joining in the league program in coming weeks, in addition to those represented at the meeting.

The next meeting, to be called by the president, will include further discussions on rules, entry fees, combining of teams, etc.

It was noted at Monday's meeting that last summer's activity had been the most successful so far in achieving a program of fun, fellowship and good sportmanship, due to an apparent greater interest in those three departments than in the quest for victories.

LADIES LITERARY CLUB

The Ladies Literary Club met at the home of Mrs. Don Burley on Wednesday evening, February 13. Mrs. Stanley Means led the collect and pledge to the flag.

A very interesting and informative lesson about "flying saucers" was given by Mrs. Weldon Shafer.

Entertainment consisting of a valentine game and merry-go-round word game was led by Mrs. Wayne Storer.

Critic's report was presented by Mrs. Carl Carpenter.

Sixteen members and one guest, Mrs. Elwood Hart, were present.

After adjournment the hostess served light refreshments.

A short business meeting followed. It was voted to give $5.00 to the Heart, Polio and Cancer funds.

Ruth Coburn and Norma Diederich gave a report on cuts of meat and meat cookery.

The meeting closed with all repeating the home demonstration creed.

The March meeting will be held at Katy Crow's home on March 4.

INCOME TAX FACTS NO. 3

Tax Hints For Car And Home Owners

(This is one of a series of articles on federal income tax filing. These articles are based on information provided by the American Institute of Accountants, in cooperation with the Internal Revenue Service.)

Your home and your car may be the source of deductions that will lower your federal income tax. It is important to check all possible deductions because of the savings involved. If you are in the lowest bracket—20 percent— each $5 you can find in deductions may mean a dollar in your pocket. For persons with higher incomes the possible savings are even greater.

The interest on a mortgage is deductible on your federal tax return. In most cases, payments to a bank include both interest and principal; as the mortgage is reduced the interest is less and a larger portion is applied to the principal. Only the interest is deductible in the case of your residence.

Real Estate Taxes

Sometimes the monthly payment also includes an additional amount which the bank holds for the payment of taxes, insurance, etc. In this case the bank is acting as your agent in paying tax on your property. Real estate taxes paid by the bank for you are deductible as if you had paid them directly.

If your home had been damaged by fire, storm or flood, your loss not covered by insurance is deductible. The amount of the loss is calculated by comparing the fair market value of the property just before and just after the casualty. This loss, or the cost of the property, whichever is lower, is reduced by any insurance recovery to determine the loss for tax purposes.

When large amounts are involved it may be wise to have an expert appraisal made immediately after the casualty.

When You Sell a Home

You are not allowed to deduct any loss you may suffer on the sale of your personal residence. However, you may be required to pay tax on a gain resulting from selling the house at a profit.

If, however, you buy and occupy another home within one year, before or after, the gainful sale of your former home, you are not taxed on the gain at the time of the sale. Alternatively, you can start construction of a home within a year, and occupy it within 18 months after the sale of your old home. If the new home costs as much as you received for your old one (with allowances for certain "fixing-up" expenses), you are not taxed on the gain. If your new home costs less, the gain is taxable to the extent of the differences. In any event, you are required to submit information concerning any sale of your home at a profit, whether or not the gain is taxable.

When you buy a home you generally agree with the previous owner on a schedule of adjustments for taxes, insurance, water rates and similar items. However, you and the previous owner can deduct this real estate tax in proportion to the number of days of the property tax year that each of you held the property—whether or not you have agreed to apportion the tax. You are considered to have paid your share of the tax when you bought the home. This applies to any real estate you may have purchased during 1956.

Deductible Auto Expenses

From the time you buy an automobile you begin to have other expenses which are deductible on your federal income tax return. Any state or local sales tax you paid on the car purchase is deductible. So is the cost of your license plates, state inspection fees and interest on an auto loan.

A common deduction in many taxpayers' returns is for state gasoline tax. It is best to keep a record of your gasoline purchases during the year, but if you don't have such a record, you can still make a reasonable estimate.

If you had a collision, you may be able to deduct for the damage to your own car not covered by insurance. Although driving may have faulty, you are entitled to the deduction if the accident was not due to your negligence.

Such a loss, or loss from fire, theft or other accidents, is determined in the manner described above in connection with damage to a house.

The instruction book which comes with your tax forms gives further information. Help is also available by telephone or at offices of the Internal Revenue Service.

Saturday Is Carnival Day

The tempo of excitement is gaining momentum as the big evening of entertainment and enjoyment for school students, patrons and members of the community in the form of the annual Riverdale P.T.A. Ham Supper and Carnival approaches.

Saturday, February 23, to be exact, is the date. That's this coming Saturday! And with scurrying about in last minute preparations, the date, as usual, is coming "too soon," too soon, that is, to be ready for it.

The supper will be served at the school cafeteria in Spencerville from 5 to 9 p.m. The prices for meals will be $1.25 for adults and 75c for children through the sixth grade.

The carnival will be held in the St. Joe gym. Included in the attractions will be the favorite of the kids, the fish pond; the favorite of the adults, bingo; ice cream stand; penny pitch; refreshment stand; weight guessing; auction; kangaroo court; and the various prizes to be awarded by drawings at the evenings conclusion. The prince and princess and king and queen of the carnival will be crowned as determined by their respective rooms' supper ticket sales.

Funds raised through sponsoring this project are used to obtain equipment for school use.

TREES FOR REFORESTATION AVAILABLE

The Indiana Department of Conservation reports that orders for forest planting stock are coming in to the division of forestry at a rate of fifty or more a day. But there are still available sufficient quantities of trees for Hoosiers according to Ralph Wilcox, state forester. Those species are Black Locust, Shortleaf Pine, Virginia Pine, Jack Pine, Norway (red) and White Pine. Species no longer available are Tulip Poplar and Scotch Pine

The cost of the trees to the purchaser is small, ranging from a cent to a cent and a half apiece. The tree stock is packed in bundles in not less than fifty trees. No trees can be purchased for doorway or ornamental planting but, can be used for timber, windbreak, wildlife habitat and erosion control purposes.

Those desiring trees are urged to order early before the supply is exhausted and so orders can be processed for delivery in April.

Order blanks can be secured from conservation officers, directly from the Division of Forestry, 311 West Washington Street, Indianapolis, county agents or the soil ocnservation service.

"THAT'S A POLE TRANSFORMER!"

"What does it do?"

If Johnny were a little older and technically inclined, we might have answered his question by telling him that it is a 4,000-220/110/volt 60/cycle oil-insulated distribution transformer.

The piece of equipment that intrigues Johnny is commonly referred to as a pole transformer. It reduces the voltage of electricity which is delivered to your neighborhood (usually 4,000 or 12,000 volts) to a lower voltage (120-220 volts) to efficiently operate the appliances and lights in your home.

Capable of performing in all kinds of weather, the transformers installed on the I&M system are designed so that everyone can enjoy the benefits of always having enough electricity when he needs it—so all can LIVE BETTER ELECTRICALLY!

Modern electric power facilities help you Live Better!

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday-School Lessons

Background Scripture: Matthew 14:1—16:12.

Devotional Reading: Romans 2:6-16.

READING SIGNS

Lesson for February 24, 1957

All human beings, civilized or not, are used to reading signs. Indeed, all human communication and life goes by sign-language. Words, printed or spoken, are signs. No word on a page looks like the thing it represents. It is no more than a set of marks. But the way the marks are arranged makes meaning for all who can read. Expresion of people's faces, gestures, road signs, we learn to interpret before we can read! The farmers looks for weather signs, the fisherman and the hunter have their own signs to look for. There are few people so stupid that they see only what they see.

Wanted: A Sign!

When Jesus was teaching and healing in Galilee, he was doing so without any official authorization from what we would call the church. And yet he claimed to speak and work with the authority of God. The church officials did not take this easily. They kept pestering him: "Show us a Sign!" they said. How do we know you are right? How do we know what you say is from God? To this day there are people who are not satisfied with what God has shown us. They want to know: How do we know the Bible is true? How do we know Jesus was the Son of God? If the preacher would let himself be bitten by rattlesnakes, without getting hurt: if the stars arranged themselves in the sky so as to spell a personal message from heaven; if some modern Joshua would make the sun stand still, such people think they would find it easier to believe.

The Signs Are Up

Jesus steadily refused to produce any such "sign from heaven" as he was challenged to call down. True, he worked miracles, but it is evident that the kind of miracles he did were not the kind of "sign" the Pharisees wanted. His mighty works were always simply and quietly done, out of sympathy with human suffering. They were never done in dramatic, showy fashion. Never in the childish way: See Me do this—don't you think I'm Wonderful? Jesus told the Pharisees that the signs of the times were there to be read. By "times" he did not mean years or dates. He meant what in the Old Testament usage, with which both Jesus and the Pharisees were familiar, the "times of God's visitation," the special era of God's visiting the earth and man for special purposes. In all of Jesus' work and words was the claim, made outright or implied, that God was in and back of it all. The Pharisees wanted some sign that this was true, some sign outside Jesus. But Jesus was the only sign there was. If they could not see God in him they could not see God any other way. So it is today. Jesus is still the Sign of God.

Wanted: Eyes!

The Kingdom of God is at its core a kingdom of souls, of the spirit; and the signs of its coming are spiritual. An atheist was once asked what it would take to have him believe in God, and his answer was, "Trot him out and let me see him do something." Well, God cannot be led around on a leash. But he is doing things all the time, for those who have eyes to see. The beauty and the order and grandeur of the universe speak of his power and glory. The goodness and the grace that we see in the lives of men and women speak of the creative Goodness that made such persons. Further, more, God is at work every day, transforming lives. The great miracle is not turning stones into bread but sinners into saints. The great miracle is men and women who live above the rules and standard of ordinary mankind, men and women who already in this noisy world have found the melodies of heaven. When you read in the Bible, especially in Jesus' teaching, an invitation and challenge to high, pure, brave living and you think, "This is asking too much, this is beyond human nature," remember there are people who actually do live "beyond human nature" as you say, because they have been touched by the Divine. Such men and women are the living signs of God.

COLDS

The doctor said I had a virus,
But my mother used to call it the grippe;
Then she would make some good sage tea,
And several days on that I would sip.
When she would hear me coughing,
And making an awful sound,
Then I would see her coming,
With a stick of hoarhound.
She would take my temperature
With her hand on my forehead,
And it is my opinion,
That a prayer then she said.
Now they use pennicillin,
And sulfa and aspirin too,
But it always takes about two weeks,
No matter what you do.
I sure hope that someday,
Something will be found,
So that we won't have colds
When winter comes around.

It was an Englishman, met in a train somewhere in Europe, who startled Mark Twain by saying abruptly, "Mr. Clemens, I would give ten pounds not to have read your Huckleberry Finn." And when Mark looked up, awaiting an explanation of this extraordinary remark, the Englishman smiled and added, "So that I could have again the pleasure of reading it for the first time!"

As I read about that episode this week it reminded me of some of our customers' remarks when they visit our stores.

Have you been in lately? You'll be delighted and surprised at the many items we are continually adding to our stock for your needs and pleasure.

One fine new customer, from within a six mile area, in December remarked that he did not know that Garrett had such a store. Come and see for yourself!

This jumbled axiom sorta fits our stores, "A company is known by the man it keeps." We like our men so we just keep them around. We don't know how we could improve our lot by making changes.

What Is Right To Work

by Stephen C. Noland, Publisher Marion County Mail, President, Indiana Right To Work Committee, Inc.

The people of Indiana are being asked this question: "Do you want a Right To Work Law "

"What is a Right To Work Law?" is the usual answer. The reason for this answering a question with a question is deep-seated in the Hoosier's character. He wants to know the facts before he gives his opinion.

His request for information is encouraging, for it indicates his interest in the subject. He wants to know more. And he is learning more. The facts are being submitted to him by an organization called the Indiana Right To Work Committee, Inc.

The Indiana Right To Work Committee, Inc., is a non-profit corporation. It supports no political party. It endorses no candidate for public office.

It is pledged under its article of incorporation to a single purpose—enactment of a Right To Work law to protect the right of all Hoosiers to join or not to join any organization as they see fit.

RIGHT OF CHOICE

That's what Right To Work is, the protection of the people's right of choice and association.

The Federal government leaves definition and protection of this right to the states under the Taft-Hartley Act. 17 states have already enacted such laws. These laws have been upheld by the United States Supreme Court under the First, Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution.

So it is clear and firmly established that the question whether a state's citizens should have the Right To Work is solely a question of how the people of that state feel about protection of their fundamental American right of freedom of the individual.

That's the question that Hoosiers are being asked to decide.

THE COMMITTEE

The Indiana Right To Work Committee is made up of labor union members, employers, citizens who are neither union members nor employers, and people interested in preserving government by constitutional moderation.

The Committee upholds the right of Hoosiers to join a labor union. That right is guaranteed by the laws of Indiana. Its justice is recognized and approved.

The Committee is in no way opposed to the organization of employes into unions, the institution of collective bargaining, or the activities of labor unions as long as their mission is confined to its contract limits of employment conditions.

In fact, the Committee rests all its policy decisions not on just one right of the citizen to join or not to join a labor union as a condition of getting a job or holding a job, but on the Constitutional right of a citizen to join or not to join any organization — church, garden club, fraternal order, Parent-Teacher Association, or any other group——as he sees fit.

WHY UNIONS

The campaign is directed against compulsory labor unionism because the unions which pressured employers to enter into forced union membership contracts are the chief offenders.

The courts have repeatedly held that a man's right to work is his right to live. The basic definition was worded by the Nebraska Supreme Court in a 1955 decision as follows:

"We think the freedom of association, the freedom to join or not to join in association with others for whatever purpose such association is lawfully organized, is a freedom guaranteed by the First Amendment. We also think the right to work is one of the most precious liberties that man possess. Man has as much right to work as he has to live, to be free, to own property, or to join a church of his own choice, for without freedom to work the others would soon disappear. It is a fundamental human right which the due process clause of the Fiftn Amendment protects from improper infringement by the Federal government. To work for a living in the occupations available in the community is the very essence of personal freedom and opportunity that it was one of the purposes of these amendments to secure. . . "

That is one of the plain and honest answers to the Hoosier's fair question: "What is the right to work?"

Around the Town

With the Editor

Printers aren't the only ones who overestimate their capabilities or underestimate a job, whatever the case may be.

I understand Lester Pugsley stopped in the barber shop recently for a hair cut. Jerry Leeson, the prop, needed a little plumbing done so he approached Lester with an offer. "I'll give you a free hair cut if you'll put that faucet on for me."

It loked like a good deal to Lester so he said O.K. and got his hair cut. Then he tackled the faucet.

Well, it took a couple of hours or so to get it installed, what with the difficulties encountered.

Let's see, that figures out that plumbers are working for about 50 cents an hour.

—And if you wanted to make a dirty remark, you could say that Lester got a good trimming the last time he was at the barber's.

I get a monthly copy of the International Musician. Occasionally the classified ads get my eye and I look through them to see what's for sale in the line of musical instruments or what jobs are available in the profession or who wants a job in the profession. This one caught my eye last week:

"Wanted—Commercial minded pianist or duo with lots of vocals and entertainment value, both old and new. Pictures and complete information, also tape recording. Thirty hour week, state price. All replys answered. Red Dog Saloon, 162 South Franklin, Juneau, Alaska."

—Now, now, you can't always tell by a name. I'll bet it's a real nice place. Besides, it's a golden opportunity to get away from it all.

A friend of the News, evidently from Cincinnati (I didn't recognize the handwritting on the envelope though it looked familiar) sent in a tear sheet from the Cincinnati Enquirer of February 19 which contained an obituary of Peter F. Haberkorn. He is described as the "most loved of all revenue people", having worked in the Internal Revenue Department for 38 years before retiring in 1952.

As far as I know, he wasn't closely related, if at all, with the Hoosier Haberkorns. Maybe it's a good thing he wasn't—he and I wouldn't have gotten along anyhow . . . he was a Catholic and a Democrat . . . not that there's anything wrong with either one but I just don't happen to belong to either one of the organizations.

Speaking of religion, that reminds me of a joke Esther's father told a week or so ago.

There was this Quaker who performed his daily chores on the farm which included milking the cow. One day as he was performing the aforesaid milking, Bossy kicked over the milk bucket. The man got up, went over in the corner, counted ten, then returned to the cow and finished milking. The next night, the same thing happened, the cow kicked over the bucket while she was being milked, the man went over in the corner and counted ten, then finished the milking. On the third night the cow again kicked over the milk bucket. The man got up went over in the corner and counted ten, then went outside and walked around the barn and returned to the cow and said,

"Cow, thee knowest that I am a Quaker and dare not indulge in violent language nor do thee bodily harm. But what thou knowest not is that at any time I can sell thee to a Lutheran."

At the Cub Scout Blue & Gold Banquet last Friday night the Carrs faced us from across the table. We had finished the meal and were nibling on cake when Nick observed, "Ted, you and Mom are just the opposite —you're tall and she's fat!"

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
International Uniform Sunday-School Lessons
BY DR. KENNETH I. FOREMAN

Background Scripture: Matthew 16:13—17:27.

Devotional Reading: John 3:-14-21.

WHO IS THIS?

Lesson for March 3, 1957

We all like to know what people think of us, but sometimes all we really want is compliments, or else we ask out of idle curiosity. Jesus asked the same question most people ask some time or another: Who do men say I am? But it was not curiosity or pride with him. He knew better than any one that what men thought of him was vital -not to him, but to them. What people think of Christ affects their whole lives. Is he no more than a picturesque figure out of the past? Then we can safely ignore him. Is he a wise teacher, no more? Then we can put his teachings together with those of other great teachers and add a few nuggets of ideas from him to the wealth of the ages. But suppose he is more—?

They Thought They Had Seen Him

Nobody in Jesus' lifetime thought of him as a priest. The priests were professional religionists; but Jesus did not make that sort of impression. He reminded people of no priest—rather of prophets. Many spoke of him by the name of well known prophets —John the Baptizer, Elijah, Jeremiah. Of course they did not literally think these men had risen from the dead; but it was almost as if they had. Incidentally, the modern reader might look up the three prophets whom Jesus was thought to resemble. They were anything but gentle, meek and mild. At all events, they were men whose authority did not come to them from a position, an institution. They were men whose power and authority came from within; men carrying their commissions direct from God.

The One Lord

One might think that no higher category could be found for Jesus than Prophet — one sent by God, speaking the word of God. But Jesus once called himself "more than a prophet." So it was his closest friends thought of him. Peter's "Great Confession" is well known. Speaking not for himself but for all—for the question was put to the group, Simon Peter said (as Matthew reports it) "Thou are the Christ, the Son of the Living God." The words should not lose their force because of familiarity. Peter does not use the language later theologians were to devise. He does not use words which a Jewish man of the first century could use—but they were not words Peter could have applied to any one else. CHRIST means Messiah, King, God's special chosen King, to usher in the World's New Age. No Jew looked for two Messiahs. Peter was saying to Christ: there have been many prophets; but there will never be more Christs than one. You stand alone, with none to match you, none beside you. For Messiah was not only a unique title, there was nothing above it. Furthermore, the word Christ implied a great deal more than Prophet. You could take a prophet or leave him—his messages might not be for you at all. But the Christ was to be every man's Master, Lord of Israel, Lord of the world. Before a prophet man may keep the silence of respect. In the presence of the one Lord a man must bow in reverence, asking, What wilt thou have me to do?

Eyes of Faith

What did Jesus mean when he said to Peter, "Flesh and blood has not revealed this to you, but my Father who is in heaven"? He meant that Peter and the rest of the Twelve (not Judas!) could see with eyes of faith what the Pharisees never saw. It is always possible to doubt the full meaning of Jesus Christ. In his life time there were a great many who listened to his teaching and watched his miracles and never believed in him at all. Belief in Christ is never forced. It is not like believing that two and two are four, or that the paper you are reading is printed in black ink. The deity and lordship of Christ can never be demonstrated like a proposition in logic or a theorem in geometry. Our relation to him must be personal. All personal relations are carried on by faith, not mathematical demonstration. A man and his wife, a father and his son, even a merchant and his customer, live with each other and trust each other by faith. The eye of love, the eye of loving faith, sees what mere sunlight never shows.

GO TO CHURCH ON SUNDAY

Attend the church of your choice,
And listen to the Master's voice.
He will surely speak to you,
If to him your heart is true.
Come! join with us and sing,
Praises to our Lord and King.
It doesn't pay to stay away,
And say I'll come some other day.
We will be looking for you,
And we know the Lord will, too.

The School Squeeze

One of the major problems that faces the nation and its individual states is that of education and the provision of adequate facilities for the youth attending school. The state of Indiana is not without is headaches in that respect, nor is this community immune from concern for "the school".

The members of the local school board have not been without the realization that this community has a need for making immediate plans and provisions for adequate school facilities for local youth. They havc not been encouraged to any great extent by public opinion recently and have not been "pushed" therefore to take any positive action regarding the provision of a new school. New school construction is necessary because the grade school, in particular, has now reached the point of saturation. With each new year of late bringing a first grade which requires two school rooms and two teachers, due to increased enrollment, thus bringing a pattern of continuous increase, the situation is now at the critical stage. The only solution apparent at the present time, that is a solution which does not involve new construction or remodeling, is to use the principal's office for a class room. The size and location of the office make this solution rather unsatisfactory and would actually be only a temporary relief measure. With three townships in the present consolidation and with students coming from Jackson Township to attend the Riverdale consolidation, there are now just too many pupils to be accommodated in the present building. And time will make the problem more difficult.

Though the high school is able to "get along" in a somewhat more eased situation, there is the fact facing the community that within a very few years, those same classes of increased enrollment now in the lower grades will be converging upon the upper grade facilities and creating the same general problem there.

With this situation at hand, the school board has been in the past few months making inspection trips to a few school installations to get some idea as to the various types of construction now offered and their comparative costs. One of the newest types of construction will be visited on Tuesday, March 12, when the board and other members of the surrounding community will travel to Rosedale, Indiana. There they will inspect a school constructed of glass and concrete block and incorporating a floor plan which is comparatively unconventional with respect to the usual type of floor plan now seen in schools. The new type of design and method of construction is reported to result in an averall cost approximately two-thirds that of conventional construction costs.

The school board is concerned with the problem now facing the community and is making this trip, accompanied by the county superintendent and representatives of the townships involved in the operation of the local school, to get further information on the probable cost of constructing a new school for the Riverdale School Corporation. The community has been "drifting along", in a sense, for the past few years and now the shortage of school facilities has caught up. It is necessary, therefore, to have public opinion expressed so that the board may be guided to a certain extent by the desires of school patrons. If it were possible to make this coming trip more open to the community with respect to numbers, this would be done. However, the distance involved, some 450 miles round trip, and the difficulties in providing extensive transportation facilities for that day limit somewhat the number who can make the trip. It is suggested that school patrons can still make their individual contribution in meeting the school problem, in this particular instance, by inquiring of the school board members or others making the trip concerning the inspection trip and the facts which will be acquired from the trip. This and any other information they may have concerning other installations visited and investigated will keep the public aware of what is going on in their school system. Teachers can also be consulted about the situation.

The problem should not be put off any longer. Our school is beginning to bulge. Something MUST be done. But first, school patrons must be informed.

WHAT MAKES PROGRESS?

Visitors from other countries often stand in awe when they see the widespread evidence of America's great production. When told that this unparalleled production results from our unique economic system, they still do not understand how this is possible. Many Americans do not know what makes our economic system tick. They may know that the three great foundation stones of the American way of life are faith in God, Constitutional government, and the private ownership economic system; but they do not understand what makes the economic system work so well.

There are five accelerators built into our production system which are not found in combination and in like measure anywhere else in the world. It is important that every citizen know what these five factors are, so they can be properly appreciated and protected. They are: 1. Freedom to work; 2. Freedom to dream; 3. Freedom to compete; 4. Freedom to advance; and 5. Freedom to invest.

Our freedom to choose our occupation makes it possible for the American to enjoy his work, to work at top efficiency and thus produce more per man hour of work. Productivity means production per worker. The American's freedom to choose his own work has been a basic factor in pushing American productivity far ahead of the rate in every other country in the world.

When the American finds the occupation he likes, he is free to dream and to try to make his dreams come true. Thomas Edison tinkered with everything, and he constantly dreamed of new things to create. Some of Edison's inventions have been priceless contributions to the advancing welfare of American citizens. Many important discoveries and developments in American industry have come from the minds of workers with freedom to dream. Industries have themselves been created out of the ideas or dreams of a free worker's groping mind. Our system harnesses the brain power of the whole population.

When a person is free to dream dreams, and free to make his dreams come true, he encounters in America a third great stimulating factor: competition. He may dream up a new kind of farm tractor which performs amazing feats. But anybody else can make tractors, too. If someone can beat the dreamer in production and marketing and new ideas, he's free to do so. This keeps a steady flow of improvements going into American products. The consumer benefits tremendously. All production is shaped by the consumers' desires.

Many of the present-day industrial leaders came up through the ranks of employees. They were ambitious, industrious, enterprising—and free to work for advancement. American competition, along with our freedom to advance, has developed the finest industrial and business management in the world. American management goes through a process of "screening" by competition. Incompetent management cannot survive the keen competition of our free market. The most efficient rise to the top. This means better jobs and a more secure future for employees and better products at less cost for the consuming public.

The final factor in America's record-breaking economic progress is the freedom to invest under private ownership. In industry, investment is the secret of productivity. For a hundred years there has been constant advancement in industrial machines until today we have "automation." The development and building of new production tools is expensive. A century ago a man's tools in manufacturing cost only a few dollars. Today the average job in American industry requires an investment of more than $12,000 — per job! This is one of the major factors, of course, in our unmatched productivity and our unmatched living standard.

We should be reminded that the key word in each of the five accelerators of our great production is "freedom." Take freedom from any phase of our economic system and our progress would stall. For our self-presevation and welfare, we must watch carefully and guard against all encroachments on freedom in the economic life of our nation.

—Dr. George S. Benson, Director, National Education Program, Searcy, Arkansas.

The halls have a somewhat hollow and empty feeling this week as the student body re-adjusts to the basketball-less atmosphere. In that respect, they share the feeling with more than 650 other Indiana schools. For the team, the season has not actively ended yet, for the next few weeks can actually be the most productive of the year. Released from the necessity of preparing for a specific opponent each week, the coach and team now work for the future by drilling on the lessons of the past season.

The P.T.A. Carnival and Ham Supper have come and gone. The Sophomores received the distinction of naming the Carnival Queen and King, Dianne Gick and Larry Friend. The expenses have been computed; the profits, divided; the event recedes into the past for another year.

The Freshman Agriculture class held its Chili Supper and Entertainment on Friday, March 1, in celebration of its successful pest hunt. The losers provided the winners with all of the chili and crackers they could consume, prepared by Mrs. Hurni and Mrs. DeLong. Winners of the flat-ground domino championships were Leonard Jarrett and Walter Reinhart.

The Junior Class is in the process of selecting a play for its presentation on Friday and Saturday, April 12 and 13.

The Senior Class continues planning for their eastern trip, scheduled for the week of April 21-27. Their composite picture materials were destroyed in the fire which gutted the Meyers Drug Store in Fort Wayne, the Jefferson Studios occupying the second floor of that building. Members have been asked to furnish one of their "friendship" photos to enable the photographer to re-make the composite.

The high school students were recently shown the 2-hour kinescope of the television presentation of Shakespeare's "Macbeth." It turned out to be rather advanced material for the larger number of students, but due to the difficulty of scheduling (it was on order 15 months), it was shown to all while the school had the chance on the likelihood that it might not soon come again.

Missionary Has Problem Getting Vaccine

The March issue of "The Foreign Missionary", publication of the United Lutheran Church, contains an article of interest to friends of Rev. William Billow, now serving in the foreign mission field for the ULCA in Japan.

The magazine article concerns the use of polio vaccine and its shipping difficulties and is quoted as follows:

"Missionary William D. Billow, serving under the temporary assignment of treasurer and business manager for the Japan Lutheran Missionary Association, tells of the tribulations he experiences in this office. In April of 1956 he received word from the Board of Foreign Missions in America that a gift of Salk polio vaccine was to be available for all children and all expectant mothers. It was September before the Japanese government was ready to issue import permits for this new item. Accordingly the order was placed for this vaccine.

"Its arrival in Japan is the subject of a long letter from Missionary Billow, telling of a dozen or more trips to the waterfront and an almost exasperating run around from the port to the government offices in Tokyo and back and forth for papers, for stamps on papers, for recovery of papers, and for more papers. Finally the precious vaccine was delivered to the harassed missionary and deposited temporarily in the hospital for safe keeping."

Rev. Billow and his wife, Doris, have been in Japan since August of 1954.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
International Uniform Sunday-School Lessons
BY DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

Background Scripture: Matthew 18—20.

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 55:6-9.

SEVENTY X SEVEN

Lesson for March 10, 1957

Is it a mark of high breeding never to forget an injury? One of the most famous Americans was known also as a duelist. When he left home as a boy, his mother wrote him a letter which contained some Christian advice; but she mixed with it an idea she could not have found in her New Testament; he must never overlook an insult or a slight. It is rather strange how many Christians (Christians otherwise, that is) have had the same notion. Long after dueling was outlawed in most states, it was still going on in the "Bible Belt." It has gone out there too by now; which may be an indication that people understand the Gospel better than they once did.

The Need For Forgiveness

In a southern town there lives a man who was in a penitentiary in another state for 19 years, for a crime he did not commit. He was a stranger and he had a gun; so when the local hoodlums all came up with alibis, this man was a convenient mark, and to the penitentiary he went. And there he stayed even after the real criminal confessed. Authorities kept him there because if the facts became known, and the man released, some important reputations and careers would be ruined. Finally, through the efforts of a sister and a friend, he was released, 19 years not guilty, but punished all the same, even years after his innocence was established. Would you be in a forgiving mood after that? Not many people have tremendous, long lasting injustices done to them of that sort; yet the story illustrates one point about forgiveness: it is not always a matter of forgiving persons directly. One may suffer severely, unjustly, without its being possible to identify the persons who are responsible for things we suffer (such as unfair laws, or customs which harm us in some way): but although we cannot forgive the responsible persons—who may be many—face to face, it is just as un-Christian to harbor bitterness in the heart against "fate" in general as it is to feel bitterly about some one we know.

God Has More To Put Up With

When Peter asked his question about forgiveness, he was thinking, it seems, of a kind of rule. Forgive a man once, twice. . . to seven times; but the eighth time is one too much? Jesus' reply—that if a brother repents 70 times seven times, we are to forgive him just as many times— is not a matter of strict arithmetic. It is not intended as a rule. It is Jesus' way of saying: Forgiveness must be without limit. The reason Jesus suggests, in his parable, goes to the heart of things. God has far more to forgive than we have. Even an apostle, Jesus suggests, has sinned against God more than any man has ever sinned against him. What we have to put up with from others, every day, are trifles compared with what God has to put up with from us. If the reader thinks this is an exaggeration, let him consider one point; the way we Christians misrepresent God. His reputation in this world is maintained or blackened by those who profess to be his people. We claim to be his children, and yet we often act as if we had been sired by the devil. Few if any human beings have been so persistently slandered as God is by his professed friends.

Forgiving From the Heart

Forgiveness has been called a fiction, and in a way it is. It is not the same as ignoring or condoning, but it treats the offender exactly as if no offense had been committed. That may be fiction; but there is no true forgiveness without forgetting. God's forgiveness is complete: he casts forgiven sins "behind his back"—he remembers them no more. Human forgiveness like all things human is never complete, for in spite of our best efforts, the thing will keep coming back to mind. Nevertheless, true Christian forgiveness makes every effort to forget. Forgiving without forgetting leaves things much as they were. Only in complete forgiveness can there be a complete new start. Erasing the whole thing from mind, living as if it never had happened; this may be a fiction but it is a fiction of love.

Hart-Smith

Miss Dorothy Smith of Waterloo and Jack Hart of St. Joe exchanged nuptial yows at 2 p. m. Saturday, February 16, in the First United Brethren Church in Waterloo.

Rev. Frank Engle, pastor, officiated at the double ring ceremony in a setting of lighted candelabra, yellow gladioli and lavender chrysanthemums.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Smith of Waterloo are the bride's parents and Mr. Hart is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Hart of St. Joe.

The bride wore a turquoise dress of Italian silk, with black shoes, rhinestone necklace, earrings and bracelet. Her flowers were a corsage of red roses.

Miss Jane Hosler of LaOtto was maid of honor. Her dress was a beige knit with black shoes. She wore a corsage of pink roses.

Mark Smith, brother of the bride, served as best man.

A wedding supper was served at the home of the bride's parents. Mrs. Merl Myers assisted Miss Mabel Krou with the supper.

Mr. Hart is serving with the armed services and is stationed at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

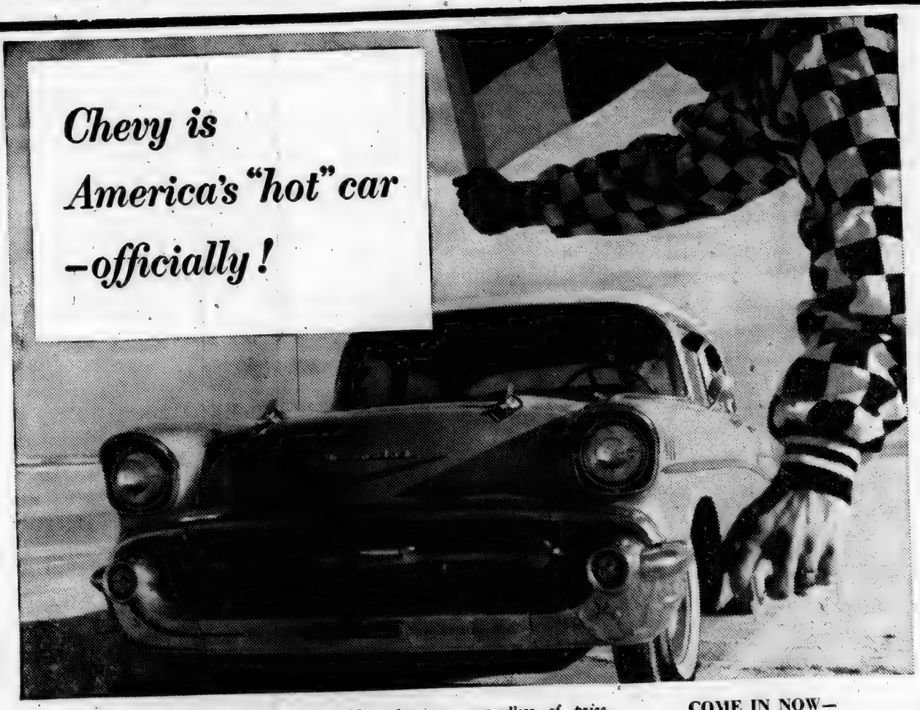
Chevy is America's "hot" car —officially!



Chevrolet Wins Coveted Manufacturers' Trophy at Daytona Beach as "best performing U. S. automobile"!

Want facts about performance?

Then look at the official figures from NASCAR's* internationally famous Daytona Beach competition for stock cars. Here's what you'll find: Chevrolet, in two weeks of blistering competition, proved itself as America's Number One performance car. Nothing in the low-price field could touch it. No other car, regardless of price, scored such a sweep. And Chevy walked away with the famous Manufacturers' Trophy, hands down!

The 1957 Chevrolet is, by all odds, the most astonishing performer ever produced in the low-price field. Best of all, this superiority isn't limited to just a few extra-cost high-performance models. Every type of Chevy—from the six-cylinder models right up to the 283-horsepower "Super Turbo-Fire" V8's, from the single-carburetor V8's with Powerglide to the stick-shift "270's"—is a championship car.

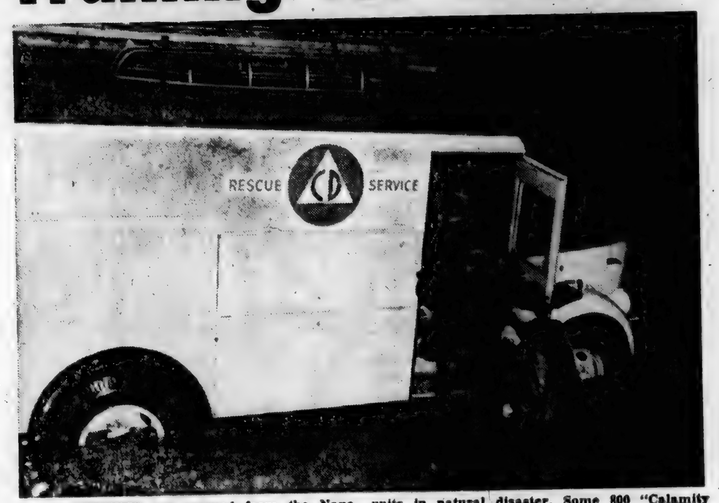
Training for Trouble



FLOOD VICTIMS are rescued from the Napa River at Napa, Calif., by civil defense workers, a typical example of the role of local CD rescue units in natural disaster. Some 800 "Calamity Jane" rescue trucks such as this are now in use in the United States. (Photo by Bob McKenzie)

Rescue Units CD's Good Samaritans

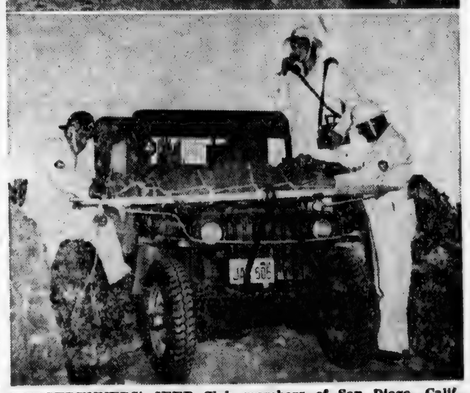
A "white charger," complete with a team of white-clad "knights," may some day come to your rescue if you are trapped under debris after an attack or natural disaster.

The "white charger" would be a Civil Defense "Calamity Jane" heavy rescue truck, or the recently announced light truck. Some 800 rescue trucks are now in use by local U. S. civil defense units.

Approximately 60,000 trained volunteers—some of them perhaps neighbors—are serving on civil defense rescue teams.

All are organized — akin to America's pioneer era — against the day when their community might have to take care of itself for hours, or even days in the event of enemy attack or natural disaster before outside help could be spared.

ALL-WOMEN RESCUE group, known as the "Calamity Janes," from El Reno, Okla., have lived up to their name by doing civil defense rescue work during two Oklahoma tornadoes and four major fires in El Reno. Shown "splinting" the arm of a mock victim at a civil defense rescue institute in Denton, Texas are seven of the group's 22 members, and Don Eagle (right), who with his wife founded the "Janes" two years ago. (Dallas Times-Herald Photo)



'RIDGERUNNERS' JEEP Club members of San Diego, Calif., demonstrate how they could rescue and transport victims trapped under debris of buildings shattered by war or earthquake. The four-wheel-drive vehicle club is the only one of its kind known to have joined local civil defense in a group as a rescue outfit. In addition to their regular civil defense rescue classes, the 60 club members conduct runs into nearby desert and mountain country to practice search and rescue of plane crash victims, lost tourists and other emergencies. (San Diego County Civil Defense Photos)

SMALL RESCUE truck, approved by the Federal Civil Defense Administration for Federal matching funds, has an amazing array of equipment for its four-man crew. Included are: (1) Hydraulic jack, along with spreading and pulling equipment; (2) portable inhalator, and (3) portable one-kilowatt generator. Four-wheel-drive truck can traverse rough terrain. Around the Town

With the Editor

Butch Liechty stopped in a couple of weeks ago to say that as far as he knows, the first robin in these parts was spotted the week before out at Cy Kline's place.

You know how it is, we kinda go by that bird's appearance to bolster our belief that spring isn't too far away after all, despite the cold weather relapses.

I haven't noticed any robins, myself, but there have been a few baseball gloves seen, which is almost as reliable a sign as Mr. Robin .

The way commercials have become a part of our everyday living, through the media of radio, television and newspaper, we perhaps don't appreciate what things are said today in an "ad" that not too many years ago would have raised a few eyebrows, maybe. It's all a part of progress, I suppose, but sometimes it presents a problem, especially where the small fry are involved, the small fry with the usual talent of absorbing everything they hear.

There's one commercial in particular which we hear at home around 11:15 or so on the radio, sponsored by a firm whose product is used in aiding the functioning of the human digestive system. Included in the cleverly worded commercial is the catchy phrase "urge to purge" and a reference to use of the product by women who happen to be in a certain condition.

A couple of weeks ago on a day when the commercial had been heard for the umpteenth time in our household, Phil confronted Mom with a question:

"Mom, what's a 'fregnant' woman?"

Before Mom could answer, Mike chimed in with, "Not 'fregnant', Phil — 'fragrant'. It means 'smelly'."

—She let it go at that.

Bill Sible says you'd be amazed at the way the kids go for the appearance of the ponies he's displaying in connection with the contest the Fort Wayne papers are currently sponsoring for boys and girls. The top prizes are two ponies and Bill has been making the rounds of this territory showing the animals in various cities and towns.

Sometimes the enthusiasm of the kids presents a problem. Bill related an incident in Ohio to illustrate. He made a stop for gas at a country station and while there a lady emerged from one of the few houses nearby. She asked if the ponies were going to be shown at such-and-such-a school down the road. Bill answered no, he was sorry but they had a schedule to follow that day and he couldn't go to that school. The lady was rather insistent and finally asked if Bill was returning by the same route and would he pass here again. Yes, said Bill, he'd be coming back the same way. It was then arranged that he would make an extra stop for a few minutes at the school down the road a bit. Bill wondered whether it was O.K. to just stop there without any permission from the principal or the teachers, but the lady said, oh it'll be all right, you just go down there on your way back.

Well, when they came back, the truck and ponies turned down that road and pulled into the school yard. And just about the same time, Bill says, the doors of the little school flew open and about 75 kids came pouring out of the building and swarmed the pickup-truck.

Bill says he doesn't know who the lady was or what kind of "pull" she had, but they sure were ready when the pony truck came down the road.

—What would it be like if we didn't have cowboys and horses and ponies and all that kind of stuff.

—Sometimes wouldn't it be fun to be a kid again?

—Hiyo, Silver!!!!

I don't know who lost 'em, but Monday morning there were two sacks of corn standing right in the middle of the road down at the four corners south of town, propped up against one another just as if they had been purposely put there. Wonder if they fell of a wagon or truck in that position?

"Well, you can't say I made any noise coming in last night."

"No, but the men carrying you did."

SAMMY

I hear Sammy barking,
I better go and see;
Mebbe there is some one,
Has come to call on me.
He is my companion,
My little body guard;
And you will always find him,
Out here in my back yard.
He will bid you welcome,
As you come to my back door;
Knock before you enter,
Or you may get your britches tore.

Rash Of Break-Ins Nets $1550 Loot

A series of break-ins in DeKalb County and nearby in Allen County Tuesday night is believed to be the work of the same person or persons. A total of $1550 in merchandise and cash was obtained in break-ins at St. Joe and Butler. No estimate of value was given for goods taken in two break-ins at Leo.

In St. Joe Clauser's Trading Post was entered for the second time in recent weeks, this time by breaking in a pane of plate glass in a front door. Included in the loot taken at the trading post was a cash register, valued at $750, a quantity of cigarettes and around $30 in coins.

Also hit by burglary in St. Joe was Jiggs' Motor Service, where the thieves broke in a back door and took another cash register, valued at $500, two tires, mechanic's tools and cigarettes and candy.

At Butler the Janke Lumber Yard was entered and a quantity of cigarettes, a wrist watch and $11 cash taken.

Investigating officers also found evidence that the car used in the burglary at Butler had been driven to the rear of Harold's Grocery at the east edge of Butler and became mired for a time in soft gravel. There was evidence that the grocery was looked over for a possible break-in but no attempt was made to enter.

The Leo thefts were made at a furniture store and hatchery with the loot including equipment and cash.

The burglaries occurred either late Tuesday night or early Wednesday morning.

What Is Right To Work

by Stephen C. Noland, Publisher Marion County Mail, President, Indiana Right To Work Committee, Inc.

Right To Work Law

"What do they mean by a right to work law?" The man said he had been reading about political candidates being for or against a right to work law, but no one could answer his question as to what a right to work law is.

A good way to answer his question is to cite a right to work law. Here is one. It is the 1947 act of the North Carolina General Assembly. It is selected from among many because it was upheld both by the Supreme Court of North Carolina and by the Supreme Court of the United States.

"Section 1. The right to live includes the right to work. The exercise of the right to work must be protected and maintained free from undue coercion. It is hereby declared to be the public policy of North Carolina that the right of persons to work shall not be denied or abridged on account of membership or non - membership in any labor union or labor organization.

Illegal Combination

"Section 2. Any agreement or combination between any employer and any labor union or organization whereby persons not members of such union or organization shall be denied the right to work for said employer, or whereby such membership is made a condition of employment or continuation of employment by such employer, or whereby any such union or organization acquires an employment monopoly in any enterprise, is hereby declared to be against the public policy and an illegal combination (or) conspiracy in restraint of commerce in the state of North Carolina.

"Section 3. No person shall be required by an employer to become or remain a member of any labor union or labor organization as a condition of employment by such employer.

"Section 4. No person shall be required by an employer to abstain or refrain from membership in any labor union or labor organization as a condition of employment or continuation of employment.

"Section 5. No employer shall require any person, as a condition of employment or continuation of employment, to pay any dues, fees, or other charges of any kind to any labor union or labor organization.

"Section 6. Any person who may be denied employment or be deprived of continuation of his employment in violation of Section 3, 4, and 5 or one or more of such Sections, shall be entitled to recover from such employer and from any other persons, firm, corporation or association acting in concert with him by appropriate action in the courts of this State such damages as he may have sustained by reason of such denial or deprivation of employment.

"Section 7. The provisions of this Act shall not apply to any lawful contract in force on the effective date hereof but shall apply in all respects to contracts entered into thereafter and to any renewal or extensions of any existing contract."

Effect

The remainder of the Act includes the usual provisions validating all the Act not found to be unconstitutional, repealing laws that may be in conflict, and setting the time that the Act became effective.

As to the effect of the Act the economy of the State of North Carolina improved at a rate above the rate in the country at large, and the labor unions increased their membership 226.1 per cent.

This experience completely and finally proves that right to work laws do not reduce employment and do not wreck labor unions.

The North Carolina Act had about the same effect as right to work laws in the seventeen states that have them. It disarmed the labor dictator. It Americanized him.

Time Changes In September

DeKalb County and other fast-time communities won't be affected by the new time law passed by the Indiana Legislature until September 29 when clocks will be turned back one hour for central standard time through the winter months.

But communities now on slow time will advance their clocks one hour on April 28.

The Indiana House and Senate agreed on the compromise measure over the week end. It calls for fast time from the last Sunday in April to the last Sunday in September and slow time the remainder of the year.

It became law immediately after the bill was signed by Governor Harold Handley on Tuesday. It will become effective next month since it carries an emergency clause.

The bill provides fines and jail terms for government officials who violate it, specifically prohibits governments from adopting resolutions endorsing another time and provides for withholding state aid from local governments not obeying the law.

INCOME TAX FACTS NO. 4

Claim All Exemptions

(This is one of a series of articles on federal income tax filing. The articles are based on information provided by the American Institute of Accountants and the Indiana Society of Certified Public Accountants in cooperation with the Internal Revenue Service.)

Many people overpay their taxes because they cheat themselves on their personal exemptions.

Here is how to count your exemptions (each one takes $600 off your taxable income):

One exemption for yourself, two if you are 65 or over, two if you are blind, three if you are both 65 and blind. The same applies to your husband or wife.

If your husband or wife died during 1956 you can still file a joint return claiming the exemptions, including those for age or blindness, to which the deceased would have have been entitled at the time of death.

Who Qualifies?

One exemption of $600 can be taken for each person who fits the definition of a dependent. This $600 is not doubled for age or blindness, however, as in the case of your personal exemption. To count for an exemption, the dependent must:

(1) Have less than $600 gross income for 1956 (except that this does not apply to your child if he is under 19 or is a full-time student).

(2) Have received more than half of his support from you, unless you file a Multiple Support Agreement (see below).

(3) Not file a joint return.

(4) Be either a citizen of the U.S. or a resident of the U.S., Canada, Mexico, Canal Zone, Panama and in some cases, a serviceman's child living in the Philippines.

(5) Live with you (absence while attending school does not interfere) or be a close relative as defined in the instruction book or be a cousin receiving institution care for a mental or physical disability who had lived with you before going to the institution.

Multiple Support Agreements

If you shared with others in the support of a dependent, but none of you provided more than half the support, you may still be able to arrange among you for one of the group to have the $600 exemption. You might agree, for example, to take turns in having the exemption from year to year.

The one who claims the exemption must have contributed more than 10 per cent of the support, and he must be a member of a group who altogether provided more than half support, and that person must have been entitled to claim that dependent except for the requirement of providing more than half support.

In order for one of the group to have the exemption all other members of the group who contributed more than 10 per cent must sign declarations that they will not claim the dependent. The Internal Revenue Service provides Form 2120 (Multiple Support Agreement) for this purpose.

Children and Disabled Dependents

There is a deduction of as much as $600 for care of children under 12 while the breadwinner works. This child-care deduction is available to mothers, widowers, divorced and legally separated persons who are allowed to deduct expenses paid to someone other than a dependent for the care of a son, daughter, stepson or stepdaughter under the age limit. This regulation also applies to any dependent of any age who is mentally or physically incapacitated.

A working wife is entitled to this deduction if her husband is physically or mentally incapable of providing support. Where the husband is not disabled, the working wife may also take the child-care deduction only if a joint return is filed, and the $600 limit must be reduced by the amount of the couple's gross income exceeds $4500. It should be kept in mind that you can't take this deduction if you take the standard 10 per cent deduction.

The instruction book which comes with your tax form gives further information. Help is also available by telephone or at offices of the Internal Revenue Service. The Revenue Service urges consulting a properly qualified advisor in seeking outside help.

HIGHEST COMMAND

Lesson for March 17, 1957

We all live by authority of some kind. When some one says, "Do this!" we do it—willingly or unwillingly, but we do it if we can. If a man says, "I wear no man's collar, I do as I please, I am my own authority," a close observer can often perceive that the man is fooling himself. He may have certain habits, certain appetites. He may be one whom Dorothy Parker describes: "Some men cannot pass a bookstore." It may be books, or liquor, or fishing tackle, or women—something says with a compelling voice to this boastful man, "Come!" and he loses no time coming. Sometimes the man who brags most of his own freedom is the man who is the most willing slave.

Who Is In Charge Here?

Consider some of the many bosses of the human race. One authority whose voice is loud in the land is the "Voice of the People." Some politicians live by it. A politician will split the welkin telling the world what a low-grade rat his opponent is; but then the opponent beats him in the primary, and the politician sings another tune. "The people have spoken," he says; and turns around to support the very man who (he had just been saying) was hardly fit to be dog-catcher. Others again regard the law as the highest command. In their eyes, law can turn right into wrong or wrong into right. But the law is a human thing; any good lawyer will admit that there is a gap between what the law commands or permits and what is morally right. Law tries to catch up with morals; it never creates right or wrong.

Money Talks

Others again find their highest authority in money. Some will admit it, some will not. But whenever you find a person making all his decisions in the light of the one question: what will make the most money, or, what will cost the least, then you know that for that person the last word is with the cash account. One form of this authority is Business. If it's good for Business it's good for the country. In the name of this authority many practices are advocated which are definitey not good for the people who make up the country. For many other persons, the highest command is the voice of the one who is most loved. In times gone by, it might be the King's Favorite. In our more democratic era, individual citizens may take their wife's or husband's word as the last word. Or—to take one more type, for a vast number of persons the highest authority is their Church. Some people even think the church cannot make a mistake!

Jesus, Lord of All

For the Christian, however, his highest command is that of Jesus Christ. The vows taken when a person is confirmed, or joins the church, profess, sometimes, in these very words, "I take Jesus Christ for my Lord and Savior." "For my LORD. . ." If the word means what it was intended to mean, it remains that above all other authorities is His. All these other commands have their places; but his is supreme. In a great corporation there are many persons with authority; but only one President.

No decision at lower levels is valid if it conflicts with a policy the President has laid down. So there are situations where the money question is decisive. There are other situations in which a political party's decision, slate or platform may be decisive for the party worker—and so on. But if decisions on these lower levels come into conflict with what we may call the policy of Jesus, then those lower decisions must give way. In Jesus' lifetime He challenged every authority that confronted him. He was responsive to authority within proper grounds (when He paid taxes or when placed on oath in a trial) but even over the church, even over the inspired law, He claimed first right. The sensible Christian does not claim for Jesus what he did not claim for himself. He did not set up to be an authority on forms of government, financial affairs or farming. But he did lay down certain great principles founded in the will and nature of the heavenly Father.

INCOME TAX FACTS NO. 5

Personal Deductions May Cut Your Tax Bill

When you use the "short form" in filing your income tax return, or take the standard deduction on the "long form", you are allowed a deduction of about 10 per cent to cover such personal expenses as interest, state and local taxes, contributions and medical expenses.

If you are sure that your personal deductions are less than 10 per cent standard deduction, there is no need to itemize them. But it is worth the effort of calculating your tax on both forms. Here are some deductions you should be careful not to overlook:

Interest On Loans

The interest you pay on loans is deductible. This includes mortgages, automobile, appliances, home improvement, or personal loans you may have. The part of "carrying charges" representing interest on installment purchases is deductible. Evidence such as a statement from the seller should be obtained to show the amount of interest you paid during the year.

State and Local Taxes

Most taxes, other than federal taxes, are deductible. These include state and local real estates, personal property, income, retail sales, poll taxes and, in all but a few states, gasoline taxes. You can also deduct auto licenses and registration fees, but not dog or hunting licenses.

Charitable Contributions

Another type of deduction you can take if you itemize your deductions is your contributions to any "religious, charitable, educational, scientific or literary" organizations. These contributions are deductible up to 20 per cent of your income, and up to 30 per cent if at least 10 per cent of your income was paid as gifts to religious organizations, schools or hospitals.

In adding up your contributions, don't forget that gifts of property can be deducted at their fair market value as of the time they were donated. Suppose, for example, you contributed to your church a share of stock which had doubled in value while you had it. You can deduct, as a contribution, the full value of the stock at the time of the gift, even though you only paid half that much for it. At the same time you escape paying the tax on the capital gain which would have been realized if you had sold the stock instead of contributing it.

An individual is not permitted to deduct a contribution which he has pledged but not paid during the tax year. Contributions of services are not deductible, and blood donations are construed as a service.

Transportation Expenses

An employee is permitted to deduct, in determining adjusted gross income, all his transportation expenses incurred in connection with his employer's business if they are not reimbursed. These include fare, automobile expenses, and (if in connection with over-night travel) meals and lodging. Other expenses paid in accordance with an expense allowance arrangement with the employer may also be deducted for this purpose.

An employee's expenses other than these can only be deducted if the standard deduction or tax table is not used. The expense of commuting between home and place of work is not deductible at all.

An "outside salesman" (one who usually works away from his employer's business) can deduct all business expenses before arriving at adjusted gross income, just as if he were in business for himself.

Miscellaneous Deductions

If you had certain expenses connected with your employment (other than travel or reimbursed expenses) you can claim them as miscellaneous deductions. Examples would be tools, uniforms, union dues and employment agency fees.

Other miscellaneous deductions include the fee for preparation of your tax return, some alimony and a share of interest and real estate taxes paid by a cooperative apartment corporation of which you are a tenant stockholder.

I&M INCREASES AREA POWER SUPPLY

The electric power supply of Indiana & Michigan Electric Company in the Butler area was greatly bolstered recently with the conversion of the area's power transmission network from 33,000 to 66,000-volt operation, William R. Nimmo, Butler District Manager of the utility, has announced.

One of I&M's major construction projects in its Butler District in 1957, the conversion completion not only increases the electric power supply available in the area, but also provides Butler, St. Joe, Hamilton and area communities with a 2-way power supply source at the higher voltage.

The conversion project, more than a year in completion, included the construction of approximately 16 miles of new 66,000-volt line, the building of a new 4,500-kilowatt substation at the southwest section of Butler, and an increase in capacity of the Hamilton station from 2,000 to 3,750 kilowatts. The new Butler station will replace the existing downtown 3,000-kilowatt station that has served the city in the past. The latter station will be retired in the near future.

All improvements will provide the Butler area with an abundant supply of electric power for the increasing needs of industry, homes, farms, and commercial establishments, and is part of I&M's continuing improvement and expansion program designed to keep well ahead of the requirements of its customers, Nimmo said.

A great writer once said, "Most people live in houses, but how many live in homes?" A home is something more than just four walls and a roof . . . it expresses the likes and desires of the family that lives there. A HOME IS YOU. It contains everything to fit the requirements of your family.

This definitely still fits but times have certainly changed since Mom was a bride. When Mom married, a woman's work was never done. Running a household in those days was a full time job that allowed very little leisure time. But today's bride has been freed from all that drurgery by a retinue of modern electrical servants. . . and the bride of the future will have even more appliances to make her work easier and give her more free time to devote to family and community activities.

We here at Ort's are constantly striving to keep abreast of the ever-changing times. We carry a full line of time-saving appliances for your home. Westinghouse, Sunbeam and Hoover are examples of the dependable merchandise stocked in our stores. Drop in and see them this week end.

Sure goofed last week with the Seniors' bake sale item. It will be held this week on Saturday, not last Saturday, and last Saturday was the 16th, not the 15th.

Oh well, that gives me another week to get the place cleaned up. Spring, you know.

Speaking of spring, Mrs. Gee sends a note saying,

"Where have you been the past month. Two robbins were seen in the back yard at the Foster Gee home the middle of Feb. Spotted by Mrs. Gee."

I been a lotta places the past month, but I guess they didn't include the Gees' back yard.

Hey, we picked up a couple of new subscribers this week. A couple of strange faces came into the News Office, but they've been hereabouts for a time. The new readers are Orville Gick and Charles Cole.

Golly -sniff, sniff - now we - sniff - won't get - sniff - to see the - sniff, sniff - Pistons play - sniff - any more - sniff, sniff. G'bye Mel - sniff - g'bye - sniff sniff - George, g'bye fellas - sniff.

Oh well, it's almost baseball time again and I've always got my Cubs. - - What's that you say - - I might as well keep on crying??

The salesman after gaining entrance to the prospect's home put on his personality act. "My what a lovely home you have," he gushed. "And pray tell me what is in that beautiful vase on the mantel?"

"My husband's ashes," said the young wife.

"Oh, I'm sorry. How long has he been dead?"

"He's not. Just too lazy to find an ashtray."

LADIES LITERARY CLUB

The Ladies Literary Club met at the home of Mrs. William Staman on Wednesday evening, March 13. Mrs. Don Burley led the collect and the pledge to the flag.

Roll call was taken with 20 members responding.

Mrs. Claude Laub conducted a parliamentary drill. Mrs. Elwood Hart was voted in as a member of the club.

After adjournment an auction was held after which the hostess served light refreshments.

Spelling Contest To Be Held Next Week

Frank Kessler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Musser of St. Joe, won the privilege of representing the Riverdale schools in the coming eliminations of the Fort Wayne Journa-lGazette spelling bee by virtue of his outlasting fellow students from the local school in a spelldown held Monday afternoon. Terry Daub, son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Daub of RR, Butler, was named alternate. These two students, with Miss Nancy Brown and Michael Haberkorn, qualified to participate in the school elimination held at the High School in St. Joe. Michael could not participate, however, due to illness.

Frank is a student in the 7th grade, Terry in the 6th, Nancy in the 8th and Michael in the 5th.

By winning the Journal-Gazette elimination, Frank is ineligible to represent his 7th grade in the County Spelling Contest and will be replaced in that contest by Miss Kathy Kizer.

Frank won the spelldown by correctly spelling "selected" after Terry defaulted on the word, and then also spelling correctly the word "citizen."

Pronouncer at the elimination Monday afternoon was Mr. Howard Hill, principal of the elementary grades at Spencerville. Mr. Joe Smith, principal of the high school, served as contest judge.

The DeKalb County Spelling Contest will be held in the assembly room of the county court house at Auburn on Thursday and Friday evenings, March 28 and 29. The 3rd, 4th, 7th and 8th grade eliminations will be held on Thursday evening with the 5th and 6th grade and Journal - Gazette competition to be held on Friday evening.

Contestants in the county contest, representing the Riverdale schools, are as follows:

Grade 3 — Cynthia Friend (alternate, Judy Griggs).

Grade 4—Lee Impton (alternate Imogene Nusbaum).

Grade 5—Michael Haberkorn (alternate James Furnish).

Grade 6—Judy Impton (alternate Lenare Jolly).

Grade 7—Kathy Kizer (alternate Joel Tuscan).

Grade 8—Nancy Brown (alternate Arthur Baughman).

New Schools

by The Editor

On Tuesday of last week, a group of people from the area contained in the Riverdale School Corporation traveled to Carmel and Rosedale, Indiana, to inspect schools built under a new system of design. One carload had an additional glimpse of school construction at the Orchard Park elementary school near Carmel where Principal Carl Bailiff led a tour of inspection of the year-old building of conventional design.

The elementary school near Carmel serves part of the families in the township while the school in the town itself serves the remaining portion. This new building in Orchard Park Addition contains 12 classrooms and a utility room which is used as the cafeteria. Lunch tables and seats which fold into the walls are utilized here so that the room can also be used for whatever gym instruction needed on the grade school level. It is not a full-sized gym, however, and the floor is covered with asphalt tile, over cement, as are the floors in halls and classrooms.

The rooms are of conventional rectangular shape and contain individual-unit seating facilities. The primary grade rooms contain their own rest room facilities and all rooms have their coat racks and convenient storage space for overshoes, gloves, etc. Dimensions of the rooms are 32x36 and 36-x40.

The central oil heating system includes two boilers, one as a standby in case of emergency. The one-story school is finished in brick outside while the cement block construction inside is finished with an attractive speckled effect obtained by blowing the coloring material onto a thin coating of cement applied to the blocks. Wood beams are used in the building and add to the attractiveness of the interior, although there was an indication that their use might detract from the soundproofness of the classrooms.

Carmel and the surrounding area are suburbs of Indianapolis. Extensive building of new homes in the past few years is evident and the principal remarked that he must be prepared each week to enroll additional students in the already overcrowded school. With the growth in population in the area and the volume of building, the financing of new school construction presents little or no problem. A new $1½ million high school is to be constructed in the next year or so and thereafter six additional rooms will be added to the new elementary school.

Cost of the school, completed in March of 1956, was $389,000.

A glimpse of a new Catholic school near Carmel showed a building utilizing the new method of school room design which was seen later on a larger scale at Rosedale where Florida Township has erected a 16-room school plus a gymnasium seating around 900 and containing a stage and folding bleachers. Basic construction of the school is cement block and brick with lighting improved by the use of blass block from the 40-inch level to the ceiling in two walls of each room. The rooms are pentagonal in shape, making it possible to erect them in "clusters" of six or eight.

The Rosedale school contains 4 self-contained elementary classrooms with private washrooms, 1082 square feet area in each room; 4 regular elementary classrooms 1050 square feet area each room; 1 health clinic room with private washroom; 1 teachers' conference room with private washroom; 1 cafeteria serving room, 1500 square feet area; 1 cafeteria kitchen with food storage and private washroom; 1 home economics room with two food preparation areas (total area 2300 sq. ft.); 1 library and book repair center, 1445 sq. ft. area; 1 commerce room with machine and classroom areas, 1274 sq. ft. area; 1 general science laboratory with private office, light and dark storage rooms, photographic dark room, 1200 sq. ft. area; 3 general purpose high school recitation rooms, 975 sq. ft. area each; 1 music and band room with instrument and uniform storage rooms, total area 1585 sq. ft.; 4 central washrooms and toilets.

The gymnasium contains a basketball court 84x50; folding bleachers seating approximately 900 persons; a stage 20x50; boys' shower room, 21x20; girls' shower room, 21x20; foyer 18x53 with sandstone ticket booth and redwood trophy cases on either side.

The shop and agriculture building is a separate unit, a 60x40 concrete block building with private washroom.

The administrative section of the new building includes a waiting room, secretarial office, principal's private office, fireproof storage vault, supply storage room and private rest room.

Cost of the building was $332,409.15. Increases in the cost of construction since it was built, however place its present cost at approximately $420,000

Pictures of the Rosedale school can be seen at the News Office where a folder and pamphlet are available containing pictures and descriptions of the building.

Subscription, $2.00 per year.

It Costs To Be Informed

The question of postal rates keeps popping up in the news frequently in connection with the possibility and advisability of raising the rates in all the various classifications or in certain specific classifications. The goal in mind is to put the post office on a paying basis or at least on a break-even basis.

It isn't just a question of money, however, that should be considered when attempting to regulate or adjust postal rates. This is a case where the individual should think as a member of a free society in a free country and consider what policies are necessary to preserve that free atmosphere. In this case it should be remembered that the very first requirement for maintaining a free society is that the individuals living therein must be not only educated but also well-informed. The public is kept informed through different media, depending on the type of information to be distributed and the relationship between it and current everyday living. It isn't fair, for instance, to place all printed publications in one category when they may have different purposes. A magazine containing an analysis of political events is not as concerned with speed in publication as it is in the scope of its content. The newspaper, on the other hand, is a means of presenting news almost as it happens. Therefore there enters a difference in presentation. It is important that we have instantaneous reporting of major events in order to have the means ready to meet whatever emergency may arise. Thereafter it is important to have an analytical summary so that past experience may be of some assitance in meeting the future.

There is a difference within the field of newspapers, also, with regard to purpose. A daily paper is the instantaneous means of presenting information to the public while the bi-weekly and weekly newspaper is the means of informing the public on the local level. Each serves a purpose.

With respect to the postal department, the problem has resolved to a consideration of whether the post office should be running in the red or black. All things considered, we believe that in the light of the nature of this unique free nation, where dissemination of information is of utmost importance, due consideration must be given the fact that it is a public responsibility in such a free nation to provide the means of spreading information and that means is the postal system. It matters not whether the means of spreading information of public importance is in the form of a newspaper or in the form of a pamphlet from our congressmen, free people need to pay through taxation partially, at least, for the privilege of being informed.

It is true, however, that a wholesale privilege of using the mail at the expense of the taxpayer cannot be granted. Every printed publication can claim to be a means of distributing public information; what they all contain must be of public interest or they would have no subscribers. There must be a governing standard, therefore, as to what publications are serving the basic need of a free government in their distribution of public information. It is a question of deciding on what printed publications are most important to what we call the American Way in setting up rates for the use of the postal system, not of merely getting the department on a paying or break-even basis.

To Lead - To Follow

The average person doesn't like to think of being double-crossed nor of there being one who would perform such a deed against him, but the way of governmental and political activities in the present times might be cause for some to wonder if they haven't been the victim's of a wholesale double-cross. But then, on second thought, maybe we have just double-crossed ourselves.

In the state of Indiana, for instance, the Republican party has sought to be the champion of the people with respect to lowering taxes, reducing spending, etc. From their criticism of their Democratic opponents, it looked as if the Republican party was "on our side." But with the events of the past few weeks, with the budget program as presented by the governor, with the tax programs approved by the legislators, there doesn't seem to be anyone with guts enough to stand up to "you and me" and say, "Now look here, buddy, you elected me to office and you want me to cut taxes and cut government spending. But at the same time you keep coming to me because you are a member of this or that group which feels entitled to special consideration, or you support a lobby, asking for my help in getting the state to get this or that program, project, or legislation completed. I'm telling you, if you want me to be able to do anything to cut your taxes and cut spending, you're going to have to quit asking your government to do so much for you."

It's a difficult job to be a member of the state legislature, just as it's a difficult job to be a member of our national congress. A representative of the peaple is not just a representative of the feeling of the majority of his constituents, though John Q. Public frequently thinks that is the way it should be. Elected representatives have a responsibility to protect the interests of the people they represent and to support programs which will be of general good for their people, but not to the extent that such representation does not take into account the interests of the general public. There is an inclination to expect our representatives to foster and promote those programs which we in a particular territory think are for our benefit, and sometimes those programs are not for the best.

It is a selfish attitude to be thinking only in terms of our congressional district, of our trade area or what have you in pressuring our representatives to get what we want. And they are put in the position of doing what is asked of them or facing the possibility of being unseated at the next election. While there is room for criticism of the Indiana state legislature and the governor right now as far as the tax program is concerned, there is also room to be critical of ourselves because the pressure that brings high government spending is often traeable right back to the voter himself. Maybe we have been double-crossed - and maybe we had a hand in it.

Occasionally remarks are heard to the effect that "what we need is another Lincoln." There are probably many "Lincolns" in this nation today who believe in the same ideals as did Abe and who govern their actions accordingly. But they are the candidates for public office, perhaps, who DIDN't get nominated or elected. They are the ones who will NOT be bought off, who will NOT promise this or that group their undying support in order to get the group vote, who do NOT think of the people in terms of pressure, privilege and pull but in terms of overall good.

It WOULD be nice if there were another Lincoln to lead us today. But would we follow???

MONEY FOR SCHOOLS

Maybe it's the taxes — but at any rate I am beginning to wonder if we Americans aren't getting a little out of bounds in our demands for higher and higher education for all children.

I favor encouraging boys and girls to use and develop their brainpower to the limit. I think proper provisions should be made to make education of the finest kind available to those who can become leaders or who can play even a small role in the many pursuits which call for training and education.

But I am not too enthusiastic about paying taxes to teach chemistry to thousands, or millions, of girls who have no interest in the subjelt, in trying to drum trigonometry into heads which can't possibly absorb it, or in continuing to embarrass boys and girls of inferior mental ability by insisting that they make fools of themselves by trying to partilipate in studies which are clearly beyond their comprehension.

It seems to me that a new type of "segregation" in schools might be a big answer to our school problems. Not segregation of black and white, but segregation of dumb and bright.

Perhaps "higher education" — say education from the tenth grade on — should become a privilege rather than a requirement — a privilege for those who, by test, prove that they have the brains to get something out of it.

Isn't it possible that our "emergency" school problem, which we see featured in many weekly newspapers, stems from efforts to provide space, teachers and facilities for "students" who have passed the point where scholastic training can be of any further benefit to them?

MOTIVE POWER FOR PROGRESS

The American economic system gives natural laws freedom to work in their natural way. The motive power in the system is supplied by man's natural desire for rewards — or profits — in all his undertakings. This is a fundamental human desire. When it is multiplied by the number of people in America, it is a powerful force, producing great volumes of goods and services. By permitting this profit motive a great degree of freedom, the American system is tapping the brain-power and the energy-power of all its people.

A 12-year-old boy doesn't like to mow the lawn at home — for free. But let the next-door neighbor offer $2.50 for a lawn-mowing job, and the 12-year-old suddenly finds joy in mowing that lawn. Given enough lawns to mow, at $2.50 each, he will spend the entire summer working without complaint. And the money he earns comes from somebody else's exercise of the profit motive. The man next door may be a carpenter, a manufacturer, or a lathe operator in the local wood-working plant; whatever his occupation, his brain-power and energy-power are driven by the human desire for rewards, where he is earning so much he can't afford to mow his own lawn.

The opponents of the American profit-and-loss system are advocates of some form of Socialism — whether it be the Soviet-type Communism, the Swedish-type "Welfare State" or the present English-style "Conservative-Socialism." The irony is that after 40 years of operation, the Soviet-type Communism has produced a living standard only one-tenth as high as ours; in the so-called Swedish "Welfare State", the living standard is about one-third as high as ours; and in England where "nationalization" of basic industries has operated 12 years, the living standard is not quite half as good as ours.

The people who are determined to change the American system fundamentally center their subtle and direct attacks on corporation or business profits — trying to make people believe they are unreasonable and that, therefore, the system is not good. To intelligently understand such propaganda, and thus reject it, we should examine some facts about business profits.

In the last year for which we have the official Commerce Department statistics, the national income was approximately 300-billion dollars. The net profit of all the corporations in America amounted to 5.9 per cent of this total income, or about $17.8 billion. Approximately 30 per cent of the remainder of the national income, or $90 billion, was paid into the various governmental units in taxes. That left $192 billion going to individual citizens in personal income.

And what about the corporation profits; where did they go? Three and three-tenths, or $9.9 billion, was paid directly to the stockholders — more than 12,000,000 people, most of them small town residents earning less than $7,500 a year. The other 2.9 per cent of the profit was ploughed back into the business — to buy new machines, to pay for research, to develop new production methods and new products, to expand plants, to help build new plants, and to make new and better jobs.

There is another way to measure corporation profits — on the sales dollar. In the last year for which we have official figures, the annual corporation sales in America totalled $508 billion. In spite of the belief of some people (and the propaganda) that profits run 12, 15, 25 and 50 per cent — the fact is that the profit on this $508 billion in sales amounted to 3.3 per cent.

On my desk is a recent annual report of a big packing company, showing the breakdown on its sales dollar: 73.2 cents of each dollar was paid for raw matrials — cattle, hogs, sheep; 13.1 cents was paid to employees in wages, salaries and benefits; 2.6 cents went for shipping costs; 5 cents for supplies, chemicals, packaging; 1.3 cents for taxes; 4 cents for plant maintenance and other necessary services for doing business. That left in net profit eight-tenths of one cent on each sales dollar! And a substantial part of this went back into the business, to make better products, and more jobs.

The alternative to the profit system is Socialism — with its loss of freedom and drastically lower living standard. We should all understand these and other facts about our profit system — and be strongly for it.

—Dr. George S. Benson, Director, National Education Program, Searcy, Arkansas.

Riverdale School News

Basketball season draws to an end in three ways with the ending of this week. The class tournament will be played on Wednesday and Thursday nights. Drawings have matched the Freshmen to the Seniors and the Sophomores to the Juniors with otner matches in the consolation and winner brackets. The three weeks of "spring training" were concluded with practices this week, and, of course, the finals of the state tournament will be played Saturday.

The PTA meeting, ordinarily held on Tuesday, will be held Friday night. The program includes student entertainment. A prize is to be awarded to the winner and another to the second place class presentation. Your attendance would guarantee that each class would feel like a winner, regardless of the final standings.

The Seniors now set their sights on their class trip, scheduled to begin on the evening of Tuesday, April 23. The tour agency is Henry Boersma Tours of Ann Arbor, Mich. The itinerary of the trip includes two days in Washington and two days in New York City.

The Juniors have chosen their play, have held their tryouts, have had their cast selected and will begin rehearsals this week. Parts in the play, a family comedy, went to Mary Jane Baker, Delores Davis, Donald Donat, Lola Mathes, Judy Miller, Robert Griggs, Wallace Tustison, Bonnie Waters and Robert Wilder. Mrs. Williams will supervise ticket sales and business operations; Mr. Stackhouse will direct; Mrs. Pugsley will supervise make-up; prompting will be Reta Gerig; stage management will be handled by Donald Noragon. Date of presentation is Friday and Saturday, April 12 and 13, at 8:15 p.m. CDT. Tickets will go on sale approximately March 25.

With the coming of spring, field trips of the various classes are becoming heavier. The agriculture classes attended a tractor and machinery maintenance school in Auburn on Tuesday, the 12th. Activities in the 4-H are stirring, preparatory to their usual busy summer schedules. Business classes recently underwent an exercise in shopping at a local market. Within the next few weeks, business classes are expected to tour a Fort Wayne industry. Plans are in the formative stage for Mr. Parkison and Mr. Stackhouse's spring trip of the Sophomore Class, a one-day affair, to Detroit.

The school was visited this past week by Mr. C. E. Eash, Indiana State Beta Director, of Indianapolis. He made several suggestions for the handling of local Beta activities and offered his services for a fall meeting to set the tenor of the year.

HYPOCRITES

Lesson for March 24, 1957

The word "hypocrite" can be thrown around recklessly. Someone asked Dr. W. L. Lingle once why there are so many hypocrites in the church. His reply was that there are really not so many as some people think. The church, he says, is full of half-way Christians, stupid Christians, ignorant and weak Christians, even 2½ per cent Christians. But a genuine hypocrite is a person who is bad and knows it, and pretends to be good in order to conceal his badness. Such persons, says Dr. Lingle, are few. However, we should not sit back and suppose that all the hypocrites were Bible characters. Still less should any one imagine that today all the hypocrites are in the church. People who are at least temporary hypocrites can be found all around us. Perhaps IN us!

Family Hypocrites

We don't have to go to church to be hypocrites. We can practice right at home, and some of us do all too well at it. The word originally meant simply "actor". We are all hypocrites when we act better than we know we are; or when our preachments fly at a higher level than our practice. When Father gives the children a lecture on honesty, the very day when he sells a piece of real estate for more than he knows it is worth; when he spanks the children for losing their tempers — but doesn't spank them till he has lost his own; when Mother tells the children at table to be patient, though she wouldn't wait in line at the post office but squeezed in out of turn; or when she greets the visiting Mrs. Jones like a long-lost sister, only to say before the visitor gets into her car that she hopes THAT bore never comes again; — Father and Mother are being play-actors. Even the children may be play-acting when they take their parents' lectures or discipline as if they hear every word and meant to do better next time, when all the while they are thinking about something else; and they may be terrible little hypocrites about school—how mean the teacher is, and how all the children pick on me, and son on.

Business Hypocrites

Dwight L. Moody admitted the church harbors a good many hypocrites, but—he said —there are a lot more outside the church. There are indeed. Take business for instance. Listening to the high priests of big business in America, reading the advertisements, the man from Mars might take it seriously and believe that the main object of business is service. The jolly fellowship at luncheon clubs might be taken in the same way; how can these people be deadly rivals? The answer is, they aren't. The club rules allow admittance of only one person from each "classification." But in each classification the man may be a ruthless rival of other men in the same line not in this club. And as for service, it is quite true this is an aim of business, but the aim is making money. Even men in "professions" which have a long and honorable record of service may be there for the simple reason that there is more money in it than in anything else they would find congenial. When a town finds itself year after year without a resident doctor or minister simply because it is a town of poor people, the citizens are a little dubious about the "service" professions.

Hypocrites In Church

Which brings up the kind of hypocrites who drew Jesus' fire—the hypocrites in church. Aren't we all hypocrites when we tip our heads back and sing, "Jesus, I my cross have taken, all to leave and follow thee"—when we decline even the small opportunities for service the church offers us? Isn't a minister a hypocrite when he exhorts his people to virtues which in his position are very easy but which he would find pretty hard if he were in their place? (Temperance, for instance.) Isn't the church member a hypocrite who hastens to dust off the Bible when she sees the minister coming up the front walk? Isn't the churchman a hypocrite who is extra careful of his language around the preacher? And aren't we all hypocrites when we pray, "Thy kingdom come," — and back the prayer up with one thin quarter?

KEEPING BATCH

(First week Fern was in the hospital.)

Here on my little chair I sit,
More lonesome now than any time yet.
They put her in a hospital bed,
And I know she would rather be here instead.
I went to town, and stopped at the store,
Then went to the hospital and heard my wife snore.
I fried some potatoes and hamburger steak,
And all that was left little Sammy ate.
I got a batch of potatoes, pickles and ham,
And a batch of fried toast made up for Sam.
I got a batch of bacon and eggs, and I think
A batch of dishes stood in the sink.
Some folks think keeping batch is fun,
But I'll be glad when my batchin' is done.

SPENCER TWP. HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB

The Spencer Township Home Demonstration Club met on March 13 at the home of Nellie Allen with Elizabeth Stemen as co-hostess.

The club creed was led by Maxine Studebaker. Marilyn Laub used as the devotion a flannelgraph story, "Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor." All sang the club prayer led by Valda Brown.

The second part of the lesson on meat was given by Berniece Wilder. She also gave a demonstration on making pizza pie.

During the business meeting which was conducted by the first vice-president, Alice Kagey read a poem, "Being a Friend." She also gave a report of the county council meeting.

Fifteen members and one guest, Mrs. Weber, were present.

For the means of adding to the treasury, the first quarterly birthday auction was held. Marie Ward acted as auctioneer.

The committee served delicious refreshments in keeping with St. Patrick's Day. All were instructed to wear something green or else. Those neglecting to do so had to kiss the blarney stone.

The English tell a story about a reluctant conscript asked by the army oculist to read a chart. "What chart?" asked the draftee. "Just sit down in that chair and I'll show you." "What chair?" said the man.

Deferred because of bad eyesight, the draftee went to the nearby movie. When the lights came on he was horified to discover the oculist in the next seat! "Excuse me," said the young man as calmly as he could, "does this bus go to Shipley?"

Even tho' we are always much later than everyone else we always like to report when the big event happens; yep, we finally saw our first robin of the season!

The corner has sort of a secret - well, not a secret exactly as some folks have found it out by coming in occasionally. Johnny wants to know:

"WHAT'S A SUBSTATION FOR?"

The truth is, Johnny, that without the substation and its huge transformers and equipment you couldn't run your electric train or watch your favorite television programs.

Because there are substations, electricity can be economically generated close to sources of coal and water, then transported over long distances, if need be, to the areas where it is needed by farm, home and industry.

In the substation, the high-voltage electricity that travels by transmission lines from the generating plant is converted to a low voltage which can be used in the area where your home is located.

The 294 substations I&M operates in its area are designed to perform automatically so that all customers can be assured of continuous service day and night.

Around the Town

With the Editor

Say, if women were really changeable as the weather, wouldn't it be something!

There are three possible explanations for this cold wave so far. One is that Herb Amstutz started fixing up his recently acquired boat last Saturday; the second, I started to scrub down our water craft on the same Saturday; and three, Ray Means took out the rocks and weights he had in the trunk of his car. With that big hill at the Means residence, a little extra weight is needed in the back end of the car during winter snows to get traction in the driveway.

So Ray figures like everybody else that winter's over, so he takes out the weight, so comes the snow storm.

Our family attended a barber shop quartet parade at Defiance Saturday night and we really heard a good show. The Mid-States Four of Chicago, the great "old pros" of barbershopping, were there. But the stopper of the show, we thought, were the "Babbling Brooks" of East Liverpool, O. It's a family affair with the father and three sons doing the harmonizing. The youngest, and the tenor, is 16 years old and what a golden voice. If they ever come to Fort Wayne on a quartet parade, and you want to hear some good hearin', be sure to go to the show.

Inquired the Sunday school teacher of her class: "Who was the first man?"

"George Washington," came a prompt reply.

"Oh, no," she corrected with on amused smile.

"Well, then, I suppose it was Adam," muttered the student, "if you're counting them foreigners."

A small colored lad was caddying for the President in Georgia. The President hooked one into the rough, causing the caddy to exclaim, "You sure goofed that one!"

The next shot was a slice and again the caddy responded with "_ - an' there you goofed again!"

Just then another caddy went by and called the President's boy to one side. "Does you know who you's caddyin' for? That am the President of these United States!"

"Sho 'nuff?" questioned the first and "Sho is," replied the second.

The President's next shot was a good one, and his caddy fairly beamed up at him as he said, "You sho is improvin', Mr. Lincoln!"

The break-in at Spencerville was discovered at 8 a.m. Saturday when Lynn Fisher, owner of the store, opened for business. The grocery had been closed at 9 p.m. Friday.

The burglars entered by breaking a glass pane in a back door on the south side of the building. A bolt was released but they were unable to release a second lock. The door was then forced open.

Taken were 8 cartons of filter tip cigarettes and 6 cartons of regular cigarettes. The cash register, which contained a few pennies and was unlocked, was not molested.

A Time To Speak

Though there is considerable thought being given in present weeks to the national budget and related problems, including cutting spending, cutting taxes, there doesn't seem to be any particular trend of thought as to how these things can be accomplished. Human nature is such that it likes to hear about and talk about what ought to be done and what should be done. But it is an entirely different matter when it comes to how to do it. We're always ready to listen to ways to cut the other fellow but when it comes to us, it seems that we just can't afford to have any less than we are getting, and we probably will need more in the future. The result is that the other fellow doesn't get cut because he hollers as loud as we do and we don't get cut (substantially, that is) because we holler as loud as he does. Result - no results.

If the average citizen were to have an inside exposure to the financial goings-on of this country and had the ability to comprehend the scope of government in its present form, he would probably be more able to understand the whys and wherefores of our national spending program. It is a lot different to be on the inside looking out than to be on the outside looking in. Those who are elected to serve in public office, having had high ambitions to do something about whatever "mess" may have promted their running for office, undoubtedly find that there are ways and means present of shutting off any programs of reform which may be carried into our legislative bodies by those inspired individuals. Indeed, it is conceivable that President Eisenhower, who just a few years ago spoke in terms of cutting government expenditures because they were too high and who now leads us into the highest peacetime budget ever, may himself, the President of the United States, have been pressured by the groups and individuals who pull many of the strings which greatly influence this nation. It may be the same type of pressure which caused the governor of the state of Indiana to raise taxes and to accomplish nothing in the matter of reducing the cost of state government. It is discouraging to think that such control is exercised over our elected public officials, but that control evidently is present.

How can you reduce the cost of government? The answer is easy - reduce government spending. How can you reduce government spending? Now there is a question. When you reduce government spending, that means somebody is going to get less money. There are very few volunteers answering any request from any source these days to use less money. It would be a herculean task to go over the various departments and choose those which were more deserving than the others and which should not be requested to reduce their budgets. The program of government in this country today runs so much along the line of "security" that there are few departments which could not say "if you cut us, you'll be endangering the security of the people." And anyone taking the job of selecting departments worthy of keeping their present budgets would bear the wrath of the other departments being cut, plus that of portions of the general public.

Well, then, what solution is there? No one may have the exact solution but there may be some worthy approaches. It seems that the simplest beginning to reducing the cost of government would be to reduce it overall. Rather than analyze the functions of each one of the departments individually and pass judgment on their worthiness, wouldn't there be less concerted grumbling and pressure if ALL divisions of the national budget were reduced by a flat rate? With the reports of waste in both civilian and military departments, it seems reasonable that we could reduce the budget by 10 per cent and not hurt anyone but those who are riding the gravy train of extensive government. Anyone is inclined to be careless of resources when those resources are unlimited, and in the United States today the attitude generally in government spending is "there's plenty more where that came from."

If you would add your two cents' worth to the apparently rising public clamor for something to be done about reducing the cost of government, and you are in agreement with the thought contained in the accompanying coupon, cut it out of this paper, sign it, paste it to a post card and send it to one of your Congressmen - Senator William Jenner, Senator Homer Capehart or Fourth District Representative E. Ross Adair - at Washington, D. C.

This is an opportunity for readers to call upon our elected Congressmen to take action to reduce the cost of government; there has been enough talk about it. Perhaps readers would prefer to express in their own words their ideas on the subject and certainly that would be a response welcomed by our Congressmen. Whatever your feelings, take time to express them, in your own words if you have the time to write, in the words of the coupon if you are in agreement.

No, not later - now, while you think about it.

TO: Sen. Wiliam Jenner or Sen. Homer Capehart, Senate Office Building; or 4th Dist. Rep. E. Ross Adair, House Office Building; Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir: I respectfully request your consideration of any measures which will contribute to reducing the cost of government. Realizing that this is a difficult task, I suggest that a flat 10 per cent reduction be made in all departments as the fairest and quickest means to take action.
Sincerely,

THE RUSSIAN SHOWCASE

The workers of Russia now have waited 40 years for the Communist government to live up to the promises of Communism-Socialism. They have waited in vain. The promises of Communism and Socialism are pipe dreams. They could never come true. The workers of Hungary learned this, and now they have told the world about it in a brief tragic surge for freedom. The workers of Russia know it, too, but since they are living in a overpowering Police State they haven't yet mustered the courage to revolt on any big scale.

Karl Marx, its founder, called Communism "scientific Socialism." His present-day followers call it "scientific Socialism" or just plain "Socialism." Socialism is the economic system in Russia today. In its economic workings it is the same brand of Socialism operating in England's "nationalized" industries, in India's Socialist system, in Israel, and in all the other Socialist countries.

Russia thus serves as a two-window showcase for people throughout the world to view: (1) in its government it is a Socialist bureaucracy carried to the ultimate end of all Socialist bureaucracies — which is dictatorship; and (2) in its economic system it has abolished private ownership, and established government ownership and control of the facilities of production and distribution. People throughout the world should observe results in Russian because Socialism there has had everything in its favor. The Planners, who are the key men in the workings of Socialism, have had a completely free hand. They have drawn up one "Five Year Plan" after another for 40 years, and the full force of government propaganda and, wherever necessary, coersion has been utilized to enforce the plans. All have failed. After examining the truth about Russia today and after looking through both windows of the Russian Showcase, it is difficult to understand why some people in our own country believe we need a bigger Federal bureaucracy, making plans for agricultural and industrial production and distribution, and that such a system would be better for most of the people of America.

Mr. Peter F. Hurst, Michigan industrialist, has reported after a careful study of conditions inside Russia that "scientific Socialism" has brought the Russian people only poverty and slavery — except for the two to three million functionaries in the sprawling government bureaucracy who live like kings. And now, reporting in United States News & World Report, a Virginia research-educator, G. Warren Nutter, makes the same kind of report after a fact-finding tour of Russia for the U. S. National Bureau of Economic Research.

Professor Nutter visited a number of Russian factories and observed "scientific Socialism" at work. One was a factory at Leningrad producing curtains, tablecloths, etc. Before Socialism-Communism took it over, it was operated as a private enterprise. "The building, almost all the machinery and a great real of the technology," noted Professor Nutter, "obviously date from the tsarist period."

"Except for one floor of new spinning and winding equipment built in the Soviet Union and East Germany .... the machinery is of English, German and French design, as installed around 1886. Much of the power is transmitted through overhead belt lines, a relic of the days when steam engines were used as prime movers. The rooms are dark, dirty and crowded with machines. Not even primitive safety equipment is to be seen. Graphite is used as a lubricant, and it covers everything with its characteristic black and slippery coatings — stairs, walls, railings and workers ...."

"On the whole this plant looked like something out of the nineteenth century ...." Some of the other plants visited by Professor Nutter were newer and more modern but at the end of all his travels and studies he concluded that the Soviet economy is 50 years behind America's. Close examination of Russia's production record under government ownership, on 17 important products, shows that she is from 16 to 69 years behind our private ownership, free enterprise U. S. A. Let's guard against the growth of Government power in our own system. Our prosperity and freedom are at stake.

—Dr. George S. Benson, Director, National Education Program, Searcy, Arkansas.

BIT BY BIT

When Neolithic man in the Stone Age picked up a short, stiff bristle, dipped it in sand, and began twirling it rapidly into a piece of stone, he little knew that he had discovered a most important universal tool — the drill bit. Using thorns, sharp bones and flint, he must have astonished himself with some of his first efforts. In New York City's American Museum of Natural History there are drum-like stone beads with neat, symmetrically drilled holes in them. These are estimated to be 50,000 years old. It is not farfetched to guess from such evidence that by 10,000 B.C. man had already developed the basic idea of our modern drill.

As every manual training student knows, a drilling bit is based on the principle that if an abrasive point is rotated in one spot long enough, it will penetrate into and even through the material to which it is applied. The harder the material, the harder, tougher and more abrasive the drill bit must be to make a hole. To meet the requirements of modern industry, many of today's bits are made of a special high-speed steel melted in high frequency electric crucible furnaces and hardened with tungsten, chrome, vanadium and other alloys.

When alchemists of the Middle Ages were shown evidence of the hole drilling prowess of the ancients, they were properly awed. They saw beads of stone, too hard to be scratched by steel, with holes of all sizes drilled into them. This seemed so impossible a feat that they believed the ancients had discovered a secret process of softening and then rehardening stone at will. This search for a "lost art" became a goal of the alchemists. Today we have proof that prehistoric man could drill holes varying in diameter from the size of a pin to as much as four inches.

There are three basic parts to a drilling tool: the handle, power source and drill bit. The latter is the cutting end, a versatile and individual piece, which may vary in width from one mil (.001 of an inch) to several feet in diameter and which may be made of anything from steel to diamonds.

Originally, drill bits were simply flat, rough bars of steel, chisel-shaped or angularly pointed at one end. Someone improved them by twisting the flat bar while it was hot, creating a series of flues. The tool was further improved by sharpening the flutes into cutting edges.

All of these drills were unsatisfactory, however, because burrs, chips and other loose material clogged the cutting end while extremes of developed heat wore the bits to a frazzle. In 1860, England's Sir Jonathan Whitworth invented the modern spiral-grooved twist drill bit. The corkscrew-like action of these spiral grooves made a path for loose cuttings and allowed coolants to wash down to the bit at the cutting end.

Just before the last war the "shankless" drill was perfected and it revolutionized the industry. Conventional drills have shanks (the stem that fits into the power tool) which are an integral part of the bits. Shankless bits fit into the operating tool by means of an adapter or chuck which grips one end. This increases the usable part of the cutting edges by a much as forty per cent. In this way a power drill can operate as many as 135 different size bits with as few as seven adapters.

How far we have advanced in this business of drilling is made clear by one manufacturer's new machine which drills holes in human hair. So small that it cannot be seen by the naked eye, it is also so delicate that it breaks on contact with a piece of facial tissue. Yet this bit whirls at 1800 revolutions per minute, making almost invisible holes in X-ray equipment through which electrons pour.

Most familiar of all drill bits, no doubt, are the ones in the hands of the dentist. He uses a variety of small, interchangeable metal bits to polish and bore into teeth. Now there is hope that all the unpleasant associations which are normally connected with this instrument may be eliminated with a brand-new type of drill bit. Your dentist can now us a small, pencil-shaped instrument with a tiny steel bit that vibrates 29,000 times a second, forcing a fine-spray against your tooth. This bit, moving with such ultra-sonic speed, drills with no noise, pain or pressure. With it, a new age of dentistry has arrived.

Largest and most powerful of all drill bits are those used in boring through rock and earth. Probably the most familiar to an observant stroller and "sidewalk foreman" is the compressed air drill with its chisel-shaped bit that rips pavements and streets into pieces by a vigorous up-and-down and reciprocating rotary movement.

Diamond and core drills are used for deeper earth boring. The former is a hollow tube of steel which is lengthened as the hole deepens. The biting end of the bit, which projects from the bottom of the hollow tube, is studded with black industrial diamonds. As the bit rotates and grates against the rock, it breaks it into large chunks which are then brought to the surface. A larger version is the core drill which is a heavy hollow cylinder or barrel open at one end. As the barrel rotates, steel is poured at the cutting bit and around its walls. When the drill is withdrawn, big hunks of solid, loosened rock are removed.

There are two methods for drilling into the depths of the earth in search of oil and gas. Both use giant chisel-like bits of specially treated steel capable of withstanding not only tremendous pressures, but also extremes of heat.

The cable tool system is used for shallow drilling. This is similar to pounding a hole in the ground as the bit is raised and then dropped with tremendous force. A rotary drill bit, attached to a rigid length of pipe, is used for deep drilling. The entire assembly is rotated in the bowels of the earth, the boring bit chewing up cores of rock, clay and earth. As the bit burrows deeper and deeper, additional lengths of pipe are added as protective casings. In this way it has been possible to drill as far down as four miles into the earth. As the bit wears out and is replaced, the miles of added pipe lengths must also be hauled to the surface and dismantled.

So harsh is the task given these bits that they must force their path in the face of as much as 15,000 pounds of pressure per square inch and temperatures of 270 degrees Fahrenheit!

One of the most remarkable boosts to the recent do-it-yourself fad has been the post-war development of a handy gadget - the portable power drill (cost: $20-$25) with its variety of bits that bore, burnish, hone, polish, nibble, plane, guage, sheet, scrub, twirl, sharpen and stir. Close to 20,000,000 home power drills have been bought since the war to swell the size of a growing multi-million dollar new industry.

Rotating their bits at an average 2000 revolutions per minute, power is transmitted from the motor to a spindle at the front end by a series of small gears. A chuck attached to the spindle grips the various bits and attachments up to one-half inch in diameter. Here then, in the age of the atom, is the application of a tool discovered 100,000 years ago, into a most useful household gadget.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

BY DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

Background Scripture: Matthew 24—25.

Devotional Reading: Matthew 24:32-44.

LAST JUDGMENT

Lesson for March 31, 1957

All human judgments are imperfect, and some of them highly unjust; because no man knows all the circumstances of any act, not even his own. We are notoriously poor judges of our own actions, but we are no juster to others. Judgments of ourselves are spoiled by pride; judgments about others are spoiled by prejudice. We never do really see any action all its dimensions. We can never judge the consequences of an act because we know only a small fraction of them. We cannot well judge the motives of an act, because we mis-read (or read through rose-colored glasses) our own motives, and the motives of others we can do no more than guess at.

Final Judgment

Nevertheless, most of us are called on to pass judgment on others in various ways. And when we are honest we do try to come as near to God's viewpoint as we can. That is, we try to take everything into consideration. But try as we may, we must admit first and last that only God can be the final judge, for only he has all the facts. There are many pictures of the "Last Judgment" in the Bible and they do not agree in details, since they are pictures of what cannot really be imagined. But back of all the pictures, stern, compelling, chilling as some of them are, we discern some plain truths. One is that not only is God the final Judge of every man, but his judgment is final because he and only he has all the facts, and he does not render his judgment till all the facts are in. True, God's judgment is going on all the time, and we can read them in history. "I can read his righteous sentence by the dim and flaring lamps" as the poet says. This is true of men and nations, that the divine judgment is interwoven with their lives. God settles many of the affairs of this planet, on this planet. But in the ultimate future, and only then, will all the facts be in. No judgment before then, not even God's is final.

The Great Separation

All sorts of efforts have been made to dull the force of Jesus' terrific picture of prophecy of the Last Judgment in the parable of the sheep and the goats. It has been said that this is a judgment of nations, not individual persons; but anyone who can read Greek can see that is not the case. The word "them" in Matt. 25:-32 plainly does not refer to nations but to persons. (Furthermore, how do "nations" fit into the end of the story?) It has been said too that this is not a separation of the "saved" from the "unsaved." But the issues of the Trial, as Jesus pictures it, are eternal life and eternal death. The fact is, this is Jesus' picture of the Last Judgment of mankind, and there is no getting out of it. At least two points stand out, etched as it were by fire. One is that the final judgment against a man is not necessarily for what he has done but for what he didn't do; did not even think about doing. The other point is that the basis of judgment is a man's human relations. True, deeper than that is a man's relationship to Christ; but in this parable, Christ identifies himself completely with the troubled sufferers of the world. What we do, or do not do, about human misery, we do or fail to do for the Lord.

The Judgment Seat of Christ

Another strange thing appears in this overwhelming portrayal of judgment, vast and final. The Judge, the King, is the Son of Man, Jesus Christ himself. This fits in with other passages in the New Testament where sometimes Christ, and sometimes God, appears as the Judge of all. This is a tremendous claim on Jesus' part, to have the right to sit on the throne of the universe. Nowhere is the deity of Christ more strikingly affirmed than right here. On the other hand, he is still the Son of Man. He is our Elder Brother, bone of our bone and flesh of our flesh, "made like his brethren in every respect" as Heb. 2:17 says. God in his final judgment acts with and through his Son who was and ever shall be one with God and one with man. We cannot deceive him. He is one of us.

WITH YOUR WIFE IN THE HOSPITAL

When your wife gets sick, and to the hospital goes,
On the old grindstone you soon get your nose.
You milk the cows and do the chores,
Then go to bend and you miss your wife's snores.
And as you lay there, you can't help but think,
Of that batch of dishes you left in the sink.
And of all the things you must do next day,
Before you go to the hospital, where your wife she lay.
And then you ask the Father above
That he would come down with all his love,
And touch your wife and heal her pain,
That she might return back home again.

The story is told about a motorist being picked up unconscious after a crash. He was being carried to a nearby filling station. Opening his eyes on the way he began to kick and struggle desperately to get away. Later he explained that the first thing he saw was a "Shell" sign and "some guy was standing in front of the 'S'."

The transition is still going on! Maple is still being delivered to our uptown store. Dining rooms! Bedrooms! Living rooms! Occasional furniture! And lamps! I didn't know there were so many kinds of lamps with maple on them!

Who were all those people who wanted Maple and Maple trimmed lamps? If you see any of them, tell them that the lamps are here, now, at our uptown store!

Around the Town

With the Editor

I took a walk over to the school house the other night and - golly - everything needs to be done at once. People are having trouble with drains, some of us would like to have curbed and paved streets, etc., etc. But on that walk the other night I found out - again - as probably many other walkers in town have found out for themselves before that we need new sidewalks and sidewalk repairs. With the conservative amount of precipitation we had early this week, the walk was covered across with water and mud and it was necessary to go out into the street in order to continue on my way.

We don't like to be told what we ought to do oftentimes but I'm afraid there are some property owners who deserve to be "told" that they should put in new sidewalks. Couldn't we make some sort of a "package" deal with a contractor and get those bad walks replaced???

No, that wasn't the bogey man stalking about the streets last week. It was the assessor, Trustee Walter Morr, pinning down all us taxpayers for next year's contribution.

Hubert Stackhouse gave me a copy of the word list used in the Journal-Gazette spelling contest last Friday night after the excitement was all over and the champion had been named. I think there were some 75 words used before the winner was decared and Hubert, who was the pronouncer and helped to prepare the word list, was getting close to the last page. At first it might seem that maybe they had a close call, maybe they might have run out of words. But after a look at the last page, I don't think there was any danger of that. What do you think? The last page of the word list included:

Hypothecate, eleemosynary, usufruct, ameliorate, tintinnabulation.

Of coruse, those came after plebiscite, baccalaureate, pneumatic, chauffeur, aeronautics, meteorology and fiduciary.

Say, I wonder if one of those kids could have loused things up if he or she would have been given oue of those real toughies. For instance, if you were the pronouncer and had pronounced "tintinnabulation" and the contestant said, "Use it in a sentence, please," what would you have said - or done?

Ted Voirol says he wants to give the responsible parties a chance to keep their dogs out of trouble out at the Voirol farm just south of town. He states that three dogs were after his sheep last week and he just chased them away. But if it happens any more, the dogs will get a surprise, of a permanent nature. The three involved this time were 2 browns and a black with maybe a little white spotting.

With all of the canines on the prowl around here these days, too many, in fact, it is apparent that in some cases the dog is left on his own most of the time. However, there are those who are taking proper precautions with their pets and providing good care for them. They probably won't experience any particular difficulties. But if you have a dog in the household and he or she has the run of the town a good part of the day, don't be surprised if he or she turns up missing.

—It's amazing how many dogs are living in St. Joe — and how few families have dogs to report for dog tax assessment when the above-mentioned trustee makes his assessing rounds.

Helen: "The two best things I prepare are meat loaf and peach cobbler."

Don: "Well, which is this?"

5th Grader Wins 2nd Straight Spelling Title

Riverdale Schools received recognition in the county spelling contest at Auburn last week end through the efforts of the students participating in the contest. The recognition came as the result of 2 second place winners and a county champion.

On Thursday night in competition within the 3rd, 4th, 7th and 8th grades, Lee Impton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert W. Impton of Newville and a student in the 4th grade at Riverdale Elementary School at Spencerville, won second place the the 4th grade contest.

Later in the evening Arthur Baughman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Baughman of Rl, Auburn, and a student in the 8th grade at Riverdale, won a second place ribbon in the 8th grade contest. He substituted for Nancy Brown who could not be present to compete.

On Friday night, when 5th and 6th grade and Journal-Gazette competition was held, Michael Haberkorn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Haberkorn of St. Joe and a student in Riverdale 5th grade, outspelled students from 12 other county schools to cop the county 5th grade championship. This was Mike's second successive championship, he having won the blue ribbon as a 4th grader in 1956 competition.

The Journal-Gazette contest for DeKalb County was won by Sharon Haynes, 14-year-old student at Tamarack School in Troy Township, correctly spelling "fasefnate" to win. Frank Kessler, Riverdale's representative in the J-G contest, went down on "unconscious" in the latter half of the contest.

County winners of the J-G contest will now compete at Fort Wayne in the regional contest. The Fort Wayne winner will then proceed to the national contest at Washington, D.C.

SAMMY WRITES TO FERN

(as interpreted by Merwin J. Place)

Well, Fern, this is Sam.
I am very lonesome, indeed I am.
Merwin gives me plenty to eat,
But your cooking, Fern, just can't be beat.
Every day, Merwin goes away,
To the hospital, where he says you lay.
Lately, he has been pretty blue,
When he was that way, I was blue too.
But today he came home, with a great big smile,
He held me, and talked to me quite a while.
He said, Fern, that you would be home some day,
And then he and I would have to mend our way.

Your puppy.

Juniors To Present Play Next Week

"We're Young Only Once", the class play of the Riverdale Juniors, will be presented in two performances at 8:15 CDT on Friday and Saturday, April 12 and 13. Selection of the play, try-outs, selection of the cast and the first three weeks of rehearsals are completed as of this issue of The News.

The play brings the Riverdale audiences back into the home again after a prolonged absence (the last several plays have been set in such widely differing places as train stations, girls' colleges, principals' offices, town halls, and the like). The family is the Daws, the Father is Robert Wilder, Mother is Bonnie Waters, Peggy is Deloris Davis, Junior is Wallace Tustison. The problem is to make Junior as close to fascinating as possible for the benefit of the town glamour girl, Mimi (Mary Jane Baker). Assisted in his efforts by Harry Jones (Robert Griggs), Junior attempts to do so despite the obstacle of the town's rich man's son, Sam Benham (Donald Donat). Portraying the "real gone" teen-ager who observes these preposterous attempts is Judy Miller as Cissie. Junior's secret weapon in the battle of love is Miss Delores LaMour, as played by Lola Mathes. Through Junior and Harry's efforts, not only is Mimi fascinated, but the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Daws is strained to the breaking point through misunderstandings.

Ticket sales for the play are being handled by members of the Junior Class, and reserved seats are now on sale at 60 cents each. The seating arrangements will be more comfortable this year, as the crosshouse rows will contain only 16 seats rather than the usual 20 as in past years. General admissions on the evenings of the performances will be 50 cents for adults and high school students and 35 cents for under-high-school age.

Production crew of the play includes stage manager, Donald Noragon; make-up assistant to Mrs. Pugsley, Dorothy Bry; promptress, Reta Gerig.

Let's Go!

An encouraging note was struck Monday night at the regular meeting of the local town board. Included in the business of the meeting was the planning for investigation of the procedure to be followed in attaining street improvement, in this instance laying of curbs and gutters on the main street.

Public improvements of this sort must be taken a little at a time and while the start may seem small, possibly only a block or two at a time, yet it is a beginning which can lead to a better St. Joe. In small town affairs money is as big a problem, or bigger, perhaps, as in larger towns and cities. Improvements have been at somewhat of a stand-still locally in the past few years as far as extended public works is concerned and the results are reflected in the physical appearance of the town as a whole and in the low market value of real estate and homes individually.

There is always the attraction of living "cheaper" in a small town and certainly it cannot be denied that there are those who come here only because of the lower cost of living. For those who are more conscious of their responsibilities and more ambitious in keeping a higher standard of living by keeping a higher standard of upkeep on their property, there is then the "load" of holding up the standard of the community both for themselves and for those other disinterested families.

There are some who are doing much to keep the appearance of their property, and, therefore, of the town, pleasing to the eye. There are many more who are not. To the casual observer, this condition tends to point out a lack of working together, that something called "community spirit." What is noticed is not the town as a whole but the few properties which are obviously well-kept.

With the possibilities apparent of public improvements through the initiative of the town board, it now becomes a matter of private concern to keep up with these efforts, to improve individual properties and improve the place where we live, not with the idea of competitive "keeping up with the Joneses" or perhaps doing them one better, but rather with the idea of taking care of what we have and adding to it as we can.

As a starter, paint can do wonders.

About The School Board

We had the privilege of sitting in on a school board meeting Tuesday evening, a privilege, incidentally, which is available to anyone, and observing the conduct of the first of what may be considered very important and significant meetings with regard to the operation and expansion of our local school.

What impressed us most was the continual interest shown by all members of the board throughout the meeting even though it lasted over 3½ hours. As a matter of fact, all of the business ready for consideration was not transacted and another meeting was scheduled for next Monday night. It was enlightening to observe these several men taking part in the work of school administration and willingly sitting through hours of discussion and deliberation with little or no showing of impatience or desire to "get things over with" in a hurry. Riverdale school patrons can be assured that their school board is composed of conscientious personalities.

Another significant characteristic of the board is that they are not afraid to speak their piece when the occasion arises. Though all members are not inclined to bring forth comments or suggestions which they are rather certain will be of a possible controversial nature, there are enough on the board who are willing to get such discussions started and bring facts and opinions out into the open.

Having observed the board in action Monday night, and seeing the acute "growing pains" which our school is now experiencing, we can say that the public can be assured of diligence, patience and forthright expression of thought governing the actions of the board, if Monday evening can be a basis for judgment.

While the success of the board is due to the combined efforts of all serving on it, we are certain that the other members will echo our observation which gives much of the credit for the business-like conduct of the meetings and the over-all smoothness of operation to the untiring direction of the president of the board, Mr. Ralph Sechler.

A Time To Speak

The coupon published in last week's issue of The News is reprinted herewith. Those who agree with its thought are urged to cut it out, sign it and paste to a post card, then send it to their Congressman: Senator William Jenner, Senate Office Building; or Senator Homer Capehart, Senate Office Building; or 4th District Rep. E. Ross Adair, House Office Building; Washington, D.C.

If readers have further thoughts on the subject, they are urged to take time to write a letter to any one of the above Congressmen and state their views.

TO: Sen. Wiliam Jenner or Sen. Homer Capehart, Senate Office Building; or 4th Dist. Rep. E. Ross Adair, House Office Building; Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir: I respectfully request your consideration of any measures which will contribute to reducing the cost of government. Realizing that this is a difficult task, I suggest that a flat 10 per cent reduction be made in all departments as the fairest and quickest means to take action.
Sincerely,

AN IMPORTANT INVESTIGATION

Senator John L. McClellan, chairman of the United States Senate's "Select" Committee conducting the investigation into racket activities among officials of certain labor unions, feels that the committee and staff will be engaged at least a full year in hard and tedious work. "It is a job which none of us sought," he said as he sat for an interview in his office on Capitol Hill. "But it is a job which all of us feel must be carried on with dedication and whatever sacrifices are necessary."

That the sacrifices will be heavy already was apparent. Although it was a legislative off-day on Capitol Hill, Senator McClellan had spent six and a half hours in Committee work, including two hours with officials of the FBI—before most people had had their lunch. His afternoon was full, and a group of West Coast people were scheduled for a 5 p.m. appointment with the chairman and Robert F. Kennedy, Committee chief counsel. After that there would be conferences with Kennedy and other staff people to set up plans for the public hearings on the next day.

Senator McClellan said: "I would like for you to tell your readers, Dr. Benson, that for the time being we simply cannot get around to investigating all the reports flowing into our office. However, as we complete the building of our Committee staff, we will try to properly handle every tip, every report, every appeal that is being made upon us at the moment." He gestured toward a high stack of telegrams on his desk. On the desk of his admisitrative assistant in an adjoining office was a still higher stack of telegrams and several foot-high stacks of letters.

Several thousand communications regarding the rackets investigation have been received by Chairman McClellan. Each day's mail brings hundreds. Many of them are from labor union members registering vague or generalized complaint about the operation of their union. Some of the letters make specific and detailed charges. They are coming from states all over the country.

The formation of the "Select" Senate Committee and the direction of its present investigations grow out of another investigation. Senator McClellan's Committee on Government Operations was prying into some questionable practices in the Government's procurement of clothing. The trail led to New York. McClellan investigators found that Johnny Dio, prominent in some labor union activities was enmeshed in some of the procurement dealings.

The deeper McClellan's Committee dug, the nastier were the facts and their implications. Later, on the West Coast, other shocking facts were uncovered. The Senate Labor Committee was brought into the picture. The two committees agreed on a full-fledged investigation and set up the "Select" Committee. Senator McClellan, who had demonstrated an uncommon ability to handle investigations and hearings and who had achieved an enviable reputation for fairness, was his colleague's choice for chairman.

"Every American citizen has a stake in the work of this committee," Senator McClellan soberly said to me. "Some of the evidence we have suggests an unwholesome and dangerous situation in some areas. The very future of our freedom system could be jeopardized."

As I left the Senator's private office, Chief Counsel Kennedy and a group of Oregon people entered. On the desk of the receptionist in the outer office a new batch of telegrams had been opened. I scanned the one on top. It had come from a West Coast city heretofore not mentioned in the McClellan Committee hearings. The sender's name and address was signed. The telegram said: "GET OUT HERE AND INVESTIGATE DIRTY WORK IN LOCAL (NAME AND NUMBER GIVEN). ONE MAN BEATEN. I'M NEXT. F-BI KNOWS."

The McClellan Committee seems determined to "get out there" on all such summonses, and to bring to the attention of the nation (and local authorities) any racketeering conditions jeopardizing our freedom system. For that we should all be grateful.

—Dr. George S. Benson, Director, National Education Program, Searcy, Arkansas.

CAR THIEVES NEED YOUR HELP

Two 17-year-old youths in a stolen car raced down a busy New York city street at 70 miles per hour. Behind them, the red flasher-light and screaming siren of a police car moved closer. At an intersection, an elderly accountant waited until his light turned green and then started across the street.

The stolen car seemed to come out of nowhere, skidding crazily out of control as the driver sought to avoid the pedestrian. The old man's body was hurled into the air and fell lifeless. The car struck a post broadside and the driver flopped halfway through the windshield with a broken neck. His passenger leaped from the car and ran like a frightened deer, ignoring the warning police bullets whistling over his head. Then the officers fired for keeps. He fell dead with a bullet in his head. The score: three dead.

Near Chicago, two youths in a fast stolen car sped recklessly through several small towns, defying police to catch them. But they hadn't figured on the police radio network and the roadblock. Within a few minutes, they were forced to a stop when police parked their squad cars diagonally across the road. One youth threw up his hands. The other darted for a cornfield. A shotgun blasted and he dropped with a heavy charge in his back. The score: one dead.

In Milwaukee, three boys—ages 16, 17, 18—stole a doctor's car while he was visiting a patient. A half-hour later, they were speeding down a highway at 80 miles per hour, trying to outdistance a pursuing police car. A sharp curve loomed ahead and the inexperienced drived braked too late. The car slid off the road and slammed with violent force into a tree, wrapping itself around like a horseshoe. The score: one boy dead, two crippled.

Separate investigations of these tragic affairs were made by coroners' juries. Two facts in common were present in each case: (1) For each boy involved, it was his first auto theft. (2) Each of these stolen cars was what officers call a "key left" theft.

The accidents would not have happened if the car owners had not foolishly or forgetfully left ignition keys in their cars!

Thousands of accidents involving stolen cars occur every year, injuring and killing thieves and innocents alike. Time after time, police are forced to risk their own lives to protect yours, driving at high speeds to curb reckless young car thieves.

Figures on car thefts are so large as to be almost unbelievable. In the five years from 1951 to 1955 one million cars were stolen in the U.S. In the first six months of 1956, auto thefts increased 22 per cent. Experts predict that the coming years will be even worse.

Car theft is almost exclusively a youthful crime. Of 24,000 persons arrested with stolen cars in 1955, nearly 18,000 were under 21 years of age; 4,200 were under 15!

Why do boys steal cars? Typical explanations given this writer by boys in custody were: "We just wanted to go for a ride." "We saw the keys in this car, and so we took it." Some boys can't pass a greenhouse unnoticed if there's a handful of rocks handy. Others, it seems, have trouble passing a flashy new car if a set of keys dangles invitingly from the ignition lock.

According to the National Automobile Theft Bureau, 90 per cent of all stolen cars were driven away with their owners' own keys in the ignitions. "People who wouldn't put their wallets down for an instant," says a bureau spokesman, "will leave $3,000 autos with motors running., keys in the ignitions, or duplicate sets in glove compartments." That figure of 90 per cent would be even higher, police add, if some motorists weren't ashamed to admit their own carelessness.

Most stolen cars are eventually recovered, usually found abandoned on some quiet side street. Too often they have been stripped of radios, heaters, batteries and tires. For boys who start out by stealing cars for joy rides often graduate to parts-stripping and other crimes.

Youthful car theft is the one major crime that motorists could reduce almost to zero simply by training themselves to be less "key careless." In doing so they would be helping to lower the rates of other serious crimes that go hand in hand with auto theft: hit-and-run accidents, manslaughter, burglary and robbery.

A few months ago, in Cincinnati, Ohio, a "Post" reporter and a policeman set out to prove that key-careless motorists were solely responsible for increasing car thefts and the delinquency associated with them. In less than an hour, the pair "stole" 18 cars from the downtown district, taking only those cars with keys in the ignition, and parked them on a side street. When the worried owners called police, they were given a lecture on key-carelessness and then told where to pick up their cars. "The angriest one of all," the reporter told a TV audience, "was a red-faced FBI agent!"

Milwaukee, Wis., became alarmed about its increasing auto theft rate a few years ago and decided to do something about it. The Metropolitan Crime Commission prepared and distributed pamphlets, and inspired newspaper stories criticizing motorists who made it easy for boys to steal cars. "Partners in crime," they were called.

Since some citizens are more money-minded than civic-minded, the commission pointed out that key-careless motorists, violating the law themselves, may be held legally responsiblle for damages and injuries inflicted by thieves with their cars. It also showed how theft insurance rates would be reduced if there were less claims for damage or missing accessories from stolen autos. In no time at all, the auto theft rate dropped 50 per cent.

Decatur, Ill., launched a similar campaign, ticketing motorists and fining them as much as $300 per violation for leaving keys in their cars. After a year of this, Decatur's rate of thefts was reduced nearly 80 per cent.

Since some citizens are chronically absent-minded or careless about keys, campaigns and laws may not cure them. Frank J. Wilson, retired U.S. Secret Service chief, once suggested to auto manufacturers that they equip all cars with a foolproof ignition system.

He had in mind a type of lock that would not shut off the engine until the key was removed. This was a good idea except for one objection. Too many people now leave their cars at the curb with motor running while they dash into a store for cigarettes or something. The new lock might encourage others to do the same.

Another police officer thought that all cars should be equipped with a lock that would spring-eject the key into the driver's hand when he shut off the engine.

When a really foolproof lock has been developed—this shouldn't be much of a challenge to Detroit's automotive genius—states can pass laws requiring the locks on new cars, just as many now require safety glass windows and frame-connected hooks for safety belts.

If we can make auto theft much more difficult than it is now, we will save at least 100,000 youths a year from committing their first major crime.

HE TOOK THE CUP

Lesson for April 7, 1957

The dark shadows of Gethsemane have never fully lifted. If even the closest friends of Jesus did not watch with him through that hour, we cannot at this great distance hope to penentrate where no light is. Some have found it hard to believe that Jesus actually knew distress. This is to deny Jesus' own words: "My soul is very sorrowful, even to death," Mark's report that he was "greatly distressed and troubled," and Luke's story of the sweat like drops of blood. It could hardly have been fear of death that disturbed him. Lesser men have met it without a tremor, and he himself had faced it more than once without fear. It was something deeper that broke up the fountains of his soul that night.

Cup of Suffering

There are gleams in the darkness. Jesus refers to his experience as a "cup." He had been speaking of a cup not two hours before, in the upper room, the cup of his blood. Was it this cup he prayed might pass from him? We make a mistake when we think of this in merely physical terms. In many a hospital there are patients who have already suffered longer and more severely than Jesus could have, physically speaking, all of Good Friday. It was his soul that was troubled, not his nerves, in Gethsemane. The cup of suffering which he dreaded was more than scourging and nails. He was being rejected. . . rejected. Not a friend would stand by him. All his work would come to an end. He had fought for time, but time was running out. He had come to his own, and his own people had not received him. He was God's last word to men, and men had no response but thorns and a cross. Other men have known rejection, but none have known it as he knew it, for not another man in history came to this earth so full of heaven as he.

Cup of Sacrifice

The cup which he dreaded was also the cup of sacrifice. From earliest times, the Christian church has read the story of Gethsemane and Calvary in the light of the prophecy in Isaiah 53: "He was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities." The weight of human sin lay darkly on his soul. It was not that in Gethsemane for the first time this had occurred to him. Long ago he had spoken of giving his life a ransom for many. The rejection of love is a sore thing to bear; but to feel the weight of the sins of the world is something of which we do not even dare to think. He had always identified himself with sinners and with sufferers; but now he was going the last mile appointed to the suffering and the sinning. All the pain and all the perverseness of mankind fell upon him, a smothering clour which in a few hours would even hide the face of God.

"Not As I Will"

We must not accuse the Master of cowardice, not even of weakness. Horror there was indeed; but a strong man may be filled with horror without being any the less strong. Jesus did not turn to flee. Yet it is quite plain, and we must not pretend it was otherwise, that Jesus wished for some other cup than this. "Nevertheless," he said, "not as I will but as Thou wilt." We do not know what other occasions there may have been when Jesus knew that his own will was not as his Father's will. Yet if there had been other occasions his prayer must have been ever the same: Not as I will! Above all other desires, above even the desire to fulfill his own will—a desire all the stronger, the stronger the character is—was the overarching desire to do the Father's will. There were elements of Jesus' suffering in Gethsemane which set that night off from all other nights, and that strong soul apart from all other souls. And yet even in the mystery there is something for us to learn. If the masterwish of our life is that our own will be done, we shall come to frustration in the end. But if the overmastering wish is that our Father's will be done, then whatever our first desires may be, our highest prayer shall still be answered.

TRACTOR GENERATOR is demonstrated for rural civil defense officials as a source of supplementary power when regular electric lines are knocked out by storm or attack, or when located some distance from the farm buildings wired for electric service. The generator can furnish electricity for such chores as sawing wood, post-hole digging or welding. In an emergency, the generator would be invaluable for running milking machines, incubators, refrigerators, deep freezers, water pumps and lighting.

Tractor Driven Generators Seen Valuable To Rural CD

New electric generators, driven by farm tractors and capable of supplying house-type emergency power for the nation's farms in the event of civil defense disaster or emergency needs, have been developed by several manufacturers.

These generators are mounted on tractors and are designed for service to the farmer either during electric power failures or when portable electric tools need to be used away from the buildings normally served by commercial power.

Portable tools such as electric saws, post hole diggers and welders can operate satisfactorily with electric power furnished by these generators.

Another use is as a standby power source for operating milking machines, incubators, brooder equipment, refrigerators, deep freezers and water pumps during commercial power failures.

Federal Civil Defense Administration officials concerned with rural civil defense believe the units would be valuable to the farmer in the case of enemy attack or natural disaster such as flood, hurricane or tornado, when electric power lines might be knocked out.

STATES MAY NOW GET SURPLUS CIVIL DEFENSE PROPERTY

Thirty-three states are now receiving surplus property under the donation program of the Federal Civil Defense Administration, which was started only last November.

So far, surplus property which originally cost the Federal Government $3,000,000 has been given to state civil defense agencies.

The material consists of such representative civil defense items as crash trucks, fire-fighting and rescue equipment and tools, office furniture and supplies, generators and other electrical equipment.

Hundreds of other items are available now through the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, to which FCDA has delegated the authority for distributing the material. In the near future, other pieces of equipment will be added, including five Navy helicopters and eight Air Force C-45 transport planes.

Hot water heaters would provide a good source of uncontaminated water for families forced to remain for days in a basement fallout shelter after a nuclear attack.

FCDA Urges 7-Day Emergency Food Supply for All Families

If the United States ever suffers thermonuclear attack, one of the basic problems for America's millions would be food, and how to get enough of it.

In the so-called good old days the family pantry generally was loaded with food—ready for any emergency.

TODAY, THE FEDERAL Civil Defense Administration recommends that every family keep a minimum of a seven-day supply of food in the home for instant use in an emergency. This has become known as Grandma's Pantry.

To estimate how much food is needed for seven days, multiply the number of persons in the family by the amounts shown in the adjoining list for one person. A two or three weeks supply would be more desirable. Foods listed are merely types recommended, not necessarily those which must be stocked.

The items kept on hand should be those staple groceries that are used in your normal pattern of daily serving. By following this plan rotation is no problem, as you replace the items used by shopping frequently enough not to deplete your supply to an appreciable extent.

Suggested Pantry

MILK: One package of powdered, non-fat dry milk, and two 14½ oz. cans of evaporated milk.

FRUITS: One 1 lb. 14 oz. can each of two varieties of canned fruits, and 1 lb. of dried fruits.

JUICES: Three cans of approximately 1 qt. 14 oz. each of fruit or vegetable juice.

VEGETABLES: Six cans (approximately 1 lb. each) of vegetables.

SOUPS: Four 10½ oz. cans.

MEATS AND MEAT SUBSTITUTES: Four cans (approximately 1 lb. each) of your favorite items. Include cheese or peanut butter if desired.

CEREALS: Seven individual-service packages of ready-to-eat variety.

BREAD: The canned varieties.

CRACKERS-COOKIES: One box.

BEVERAGES: One small jar of instant coffee, one of instant tea, or a 1 lb. package of instant cocoa, whichever your family prefers.

SOFT DRINKS: Twelve bottles.

SUPPLEMENTARY ITEMS: Sugar, salt, seasonings, candy (types that store well), chewing gum, and cigarettes and tobacco.

CAUTION: Store these items like Grandma did—in a dry, cool basement or storeroom within a temperature range of 35 to 50 degrees for best results. Check your "pantry" preferably weekly but at least monthly and rotate items regularly. Use within six months. Bottled water should be changed every six weeks.

IF YOUR CHILDREN are young, decrease the amounts by one-fourth. If the children are infants, canned baby foods should be substituted for some of the other canned foods. And don't forget—be sure to plan for old people or invalids.

Another word of caution: check your "pantry" at least monthly, and rotate items regularly. Bottled water, for instance, should be changed every six weeks.

Essential items for your stockroom should include two gallons of water in jugs or bottles for each person, and three gallons for each child under three years old. You should also maintain a supply of salt and sugar, matches, fuel, cooking utensils, a can opener, and tableware.

You would also do well to have in your storage room a portable radio, flashlight, candles and holders, first-aid kit, blankets, pail and garbage container.

On the lighter side, you might add a supply of games and toys for the children.

"GRANDMA'S PANTRY" exhibit in California shows typical amounts and items of food which might make up a meal for families ranging from two to eight. Food in the "Pantry" would be used—just as in bygone days—to provide a reserve in case of emergency. But now, it's a different kind of emergency—instead of impassable roads, it could be radioactive fallout which would force a family to stay in shelter for days without outside help. (Stockton, Calif., Record Photo)

SCHOOL CHILDREN are rescued by civil defense workers at Chattanooga, Tenn., from flood waters which had marooned their school bus. Even harder hit were the three states of Kentucky, Virginia and West Virginia, where 31 counties were declared a major disaster area and allocated $900,000 in Federal Civil Defense Administration disaster funds. The money will pay for emergency restoration of more than 300 bridges, as well as temporary repairs to roads, schools, and other public facilities destroyed or damaged by flood waters. HONOR TOP FARM LEADERS FOR CIVIL DEFENSE WORK

The Federal Civil Defense Administration has awarded special certificates to the heads of four national farm organizations for personal leadership "in bringing the message of the First National Civil Defense Week to the rural public."

They were given to Homer Brinkley, National Council of Farmers Cooperatives; Hersche Newsom, National Grange; James G. Patton, National Farmers Union; and Charles B. Schuman, American Farm Bureau Federation.

The certificates were given by FCDA Administrator Val Peterson in connection with the fourth regular meeting of the National Advisory Council on Rural Civil Defense March 4 and 5 in Washington.

Similar certificates also were awarded to Earl McMunn, past president of the American Agricultural Editors Association, and John McDonald, 1956 president of the National Association of Television and Radio Farm Directors.

Farewell Dinner Given For Mellick Family

Following the morning service at the Coburn Corners Church of Christ last Sunday morning, a farewell basket dinner was held in honor of the pastor, J. W. Mellick, and family who leave this week to assume new duties with the Church of Christ at Wellington, Ohio.

Several visitors and former members were present, including those from the Cedar Creek congregation at Leo. Following the noon meal there was a presentation of going-away gifts, from the congregation, a check for one hundred dollars and a frypan.

Mr. Mellick and his family came to Coburn Corners from Jeromesville, Ohio, in March of 1956. Wellington Ohio, where the family is moving, is a town of 3300 and is located about 45 miles southwest of Cleveland or about 150 miles directly east of Hicksville. Mr. Mellick plans to continue meeting at Toledo with the Lake Area Ministerial Group each month.

The Mellick family includes the pastor, Mrs. Mellick (Wilma), Richard 15, a freshman at Riverdale, David 13, grade 8, Danny 10, grade 4, and twins Gary and Larry, 7, who are in the first grade The Mellicks express their appreciation for all the kindnesses shown them and also for the friendships and acquaintances made within the community. They urge friends from this community traveling in the vicinity of Wellington to stop in and visit them.

VOLUME LXXII | ST. JOE, (DeKalb Co.), IND. | Thursday, April 11, 1957 | NUMBER 15

Around the Town

With the Editor

That was some surprise we got last Sunday morning, wasn't it? 9:30 a.m. and everything seemed to be under control, just a cloudy day. But 10:30 - wow, a blizzard. For the benefit of those away from home, we had quite a snow Sunday, something like 6 or 8 inches altogether by the time Monday rolled around. No school for 2 days - people getting stuck in driveways and on the street where they parked - the mail route driver coming in late which meant Jerry Baker got in from the St. Joe route at 1:30 instead of noon.

A few have been asking "why the flag" here recently. I just thought it would be a good idea to have the red, white and blue waving in front of the News Office daily for no other reason than as sort of a reminder. But with those rainy and sleety days preceding the snow storm and my trying out the hardiness of the News' flag, it (the old one) won't be seen any more. The wind ripped it pretty well to shreds. So we'll just have to "retire" this one and get a new one which then won't be subjected to such rough weather.

A few others have been under the impression, I guess, that when our family moved into the Harris property, we also inherited the store building. - - We didn't. - - And we aren't completely moved yet.

Do we like our new home? - - Shur-r-r-r we do.

Some luck.

The Leo community worked hard to get street lights installed and a post office authorized and last week the Cedar Creek Courier was full of the news of same and what happens on opening day - the post office burns, not completely down, I hear, just the roof. And I understand there was a gang of community carpenters on hand on short order to put hammer, saw and nail to the task to make necessary repairs.

They really want that post office.

"Sonny," said his mother, helping him with his homework, "how much are 7 and 4?"

"Twelve," said Sonny.

"Not bad for a little shaver," his father volunteered, "he only missed it by two."

First Aid Helps Choking Youth

First aid training and knowledge of the application of artificial respiration were possibly the difference between life and death for Cal Coburn, 18, of St. Joe on Tuesday evening of this week. And Joe Robinson, also of St. Joe, is the one responsible for the difference.

Cal had contracted a cold previous to the heavy snow which fell early this week. He found it necessary to expose himself to the cold weather to help dig out his car stuck in the Coburn driveway thereafter and apparently this exposure aggravated the cold. He was suffering from a high fever and suddenly was afflicted with a choking spell Tuesday evening at about 7:30 p. m. His mother, Mrs. Victor Coburn, called for assistance from her brother, Andy Monroe, who was working that evening at the new fire house in St. Joe. A call was then placed to the Butler fire department for their resuscitator and they urged contacting Mr. Robinson to give artificial respiration until the unit arrived. This was done and by the time the unit was rushed to St. Joe by the Butler city police, Mr. Robinson had applied artifical respiration which apparently dislodged an accumulation of phlegm in the youth's throat causing the choking spell. Cal had turned blue in color due to his choking.

An ambulance had also been called in the meantime and at its arrival, Cal was taken to Sander's Hospital in Auburn where he is now recovering.

Cal is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Coburn and is employed by the Universal Co. at Butler.

Tot Dies Of Heart Ailment

A heart condition proved fatal this week to little Sue Ann Hart, 2-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Hart of east of St. Joe.

Sue Ann underwent surgery last week to correct the condition and appeared to be progressing satisfactorily when she died unexpectedly Monday at Riley Hospital at Indianapolis. She had had the heart ailment since birth.

Surviving in addition to the parents are three brothers, Billie, Gary and Dennie; the paternal grandmother, Mrs. Della Hart of St. Joe; and the maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Keener of near Hicksville.

Funeral services were conducted Thursday at the Coburn Corners Church of Christ with burial in Riverside Cemetery at Newville.

PTA To Elect Next Tuesday

Virgil Smith, president of the Riverdale P.T.A., has announced an important meeting of that organization next Tuesday evening, April 16. Parents of students and patrons of the school are urged to attend the meeting.

Included in the business of the evening will be the report of the nominating committee. Election of officers will be held following the report.

The meeting will be held at 8 p.m. at the high school gym in St. Joe.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank those who assisted in any way to help give first aid to our son this week when he suffered a choking spell, We are particularly grateful to Mr. Joe Robinson for his efforts.

SPECIAL REPORT FROM THE EDITOR

While Billions Go Abroad - or, First Things Last - or - - -

Patrons of the local post office will find it necessary to adjust somewhat to the new postal regulations put into effect by the postmaster general of the United States.

Beginning Saturday, April 13, and effective every Saturday thereafter, there will be no window service. However, the star route will operate as in the past with the regular morning and evening delivery and pick-up. Mail will be distributed in the local boxes on Saturdays, but no rural delivery will be made. Only special delivery letters will be serviced on Saturdays.

Beginning Monday, April 15, the post office will open at 7:-30 a.m. and close at 5:30 p.m. as in the past. However, the windows will be closed from 10:30 a.m. to 12 noon for the lunch hour, instead of 11:00 a. m. to noon as in the past.

The new regulations stem from a dispute between the postmaster general, who says that additional funds are needed in order to continue mailing service as in the past, and the Congress of the United States, which refuses to grant additional funds. The new regulations are an economy measure.

50 MPH Musings

DeKalb County roads recently were placed under a 50 mile per hour speed limit; not just certain roads nor certain zones but the entire county road system other than state and federal highways. This action was taken by the county commissioners at the request of the sheriff's department.

It would be interesting to be able to look at every speedometer of every car now traveling county roads under the new limit. To be sure we would find many observing the limit and doing so with no effort. We also would probably find that these are people who usually didn't travel over 50 before the limit was in effect. We would also find others who are obeying the law but under some strain. They probably will exceed the limit at some time or another because of forgetfulness or being late for an appointment or some other reason. And though they will exceed the present limit they will not be traveling at an unreasonable speed. Then there are those who will not observe the limit simply because they do not observe too many automotive regulations, written or unwritten, in the first place.

If any of these are involved in an accident, what will be a factor in determining the extent of charges pressed? The speed at which the car was traveling. If it is over 50, it will be too bad for the driver, even the reasonable driver. There will be no consideration as to whether the speed was or was not reasonable; it will be a matter of plain black and white - over 50 in a 50 limit zone. This seems right in a way, but in another way it doesn't. For how many accidents have there been on county highways? Enough to state that a 50 mile limit is necessary? We haven't noticed that condition; perhaps it exists. If there has been no rash of accidents, however, then the limit does only one major thing - that is to make lawbreakers of a lot of people.

There has been some progress in altering traffic regulations to keep pace with the times. One of the results of the introduction of the automatic shift in the automobile is the establishment of right-of-way intersections in place of complete stop intersections. It is a matter of adjustment that where manual shifting of gears does not take place, a complete stop may not be reasonable. And so safety regulations compensate for the vehicles they govern. If every stop intersection were "patrolled", the courts would be even more crowded than now, because automatic shifters just don't usually make a complete stop. What should we do, arrest them all? Reasonable or unreasonable?

Other regulations concerning speed have been adjusted in some localities because they have ceased to be reasonable. Large cities have begun to raise their limits, in some cases the 20 mile zone is now a 25 mile zone, and so on, but the adjustment has far from made a race track of the city street. It has, however, made the limit more reasonable for the driver. In other instances, an increase in the limit would not be advisable. Here in St. Joe a car passing through the 2-block business district is subject to a 20 mile limit. Here it can be classified as a reasonable limit because of the concentration of activity in those two blocks.

Take a drive, now, over to the county seat, via Jackson Center. As you approach the county seat, you will note while you are yet in the country a sign which says, "Speed limit 20 miles per hour." About 500 feet down the road, more or less, there is a rather sharp curve. Perhaps the limit is intended to protect the driver who might enter the curve too fast. But the sign doesn't indicate a curve safety-speed of 20, it sets a speed limit of 20. We doubt if one car in a hundred slows to 20 for that speed zone; they may for the curve, but they will go right back up to 30 and more for the remaining few blocks into town. So we have wholesale lawbreaking, not raising public safety by one degree. Rules of safety are made to protect the individual. As a matter of fact, legislation of any type often is a matter of protection. These laws are best made not to incriminate but to set a penalty for acts which threaten public well-being.

Our neighboring state of Ohio has a state speed limit of 50 miles per hour. We would have to study safety statistics to know whether or not fatalities and injuries have been materially reduced by such a limit. We do know from observation that there are many who do not observe the limit because on the open road it does not seem reasonable. Does the speed limit make a person more safety conscious, or just conscious of the fact that he - or she - better look in the rear view mirror occasionally to see if the police are in sight?

No doubt there is a necessity for speed laws in many cases. The highways today generally are not sufficient in safety features to allow throwing them open to the whims of the driver. But in a locality such as DeKalb County and in consideration of the driving on rural county roads, there doesn't seem to be assurance that a 50 mile speed limit will bring more safety to those roads, or make county residents more safety conscious.

The only safe speed limit is - 0.

Reasonable or unreasonable?

Good Works

The Spencerville Community Club was organized recently for the purpose of providing park and recreational facilties for people in that community, particularly mindful of the inadequate recreational outlets for the youth in the community. But the club has branched out and while it still is working towards its original goals, it has taken a responsibility to make Spencerville residents more mindful of the community's appearance.

The club's program of beautification and of lighting is a commendable one. It is a good thing that the club's efforts are directed toward a wide scope of community betterment. What success they have depends, of course, upon the cooperation of the public. But the idea is a good one and cannot help but prove rewarding for all concerned. The more that is done, the richer the reward.

FAREWELL TIME AT COBURNTOWN

by J. W. Mellick, March 31, 1957.

We thank the Lord a thousand times o'er
For a hundred friends, and many more;
For little babes in mother's arms;
For youngsters with their childish charms.

We thank Him for times with the open Book,
When together, we for the Truth did look;
And for the weekly time of united prayer,
When pastor and people their burdens share.

Now comes the time to say, "Goodbye"
With a bursting heart and tear-damp eye,
With an earnest prayer for the common good,
That you all will stand as the Master stood.

It is our prayer that the Seed will grow;
That by His grace His Truth you'll know;
That His working grace from you will sound
'Til "Christ in you" will be known around.

That you'll take your stand for all His Word,
And not just a few things you have heard;
That you'll search it out and take your stand;
Heeding not human, but God's command.

That the Holy Spirit you all will know,
And not in vain form and tradition go;
That true Spirit - unity you will find —
Oneness of love, and oneness of mind.

May the "Christ of the cross" be your only hope,
Not in merit of works in darkness to grope.
Exalt Him high to His rightful place,
And you'll have abundant showers of grace.

When troubles come and trials assail,
With boldness enter "within the vail".
He once was here; He knows our plights;
He had His Gethsemane and darkening nights.

Keep the prayer-line open and the connections tight,

Reaching "Headquarters" to win the fight.
Neglecting not the place of prayer,
But keeping appointment with Him there,

When in the pulpit a new face you see,
There's one Man that matters and it is He,
Whose hands bear scars of a battle won,
Who now lives there beyond the sun.

It is He "with Whom we have to do",
He's done His part - now it's up to you.
A preacher's a Christian - but only one. . .
When the church does its part, the vict'ry's begun.

So, to all we say a hearty farewell,
Perhaps to meet many times . . who can tell?
You pray for us, we'll pray for you
And really see what God will do!

The world's a mess and none are strong;
The devil has power in forcing wrong.
Let's look to Christ and the power He gave
On Pentecost, our souls to save.

Christ comes again! Let's look above!
Let our hearts be happy and filled with love;
May our hands be busy with deeds of good,
Always doing the things we should.

When Christ returns with trumpet call,
And the saved are raised both great and small,
Who will be missing? May there be none!
May we see you all . . . one by one!

Forget not God's promise nor our earnest pleas
Made from the pulpit or on our knees,
As to you we preached or for you prayed
That the Lord would help you "make the grade".

From you "in body", but not "in heart"!
Time or distance can't make us part!
Thank God again for the "blessing-yield"
As we've been together on this field.

Have we regrets? Yes, . . . a few;
Learned some things as we start anew.
Have we been helped in these few days?
A hundred times! In many ways!

So, "thanks a lot", for all you've done!
For mem'ries sweet, and friendships won!
Our lives are richer as we go away,
And we hope these words you too can say.

And, as we go, we take you too;
And, as we leave, part stays with you
Thank God again for His wonderful ways-
Let's faithful be. That only pays!

May your love increase, and your faith prevail
'Gainst every wind and stormy gale;
May your "course" be straight, and your "voyage" blest
'Til you enter, by grace, that Haven of Rest.

Pilgrim, take your cross and follow Him;
When the way is bright or the light grows dim
Keep looking up! Earth's not our home!
Look for the Day, when we'll cease to roam!

IS FEDERAL AID FOR EDUCATION DESIRABLE?

During the last Congress the Federal "School Aid" Bill almost passed. It was defeated by the controversy over using Federal funds to build segregated schools. But few in Congress appeared to be against "Federal aid" for education. For twenty-five years the shrewd promoters of "Federal Aid" have spread their propaganda that it means "something for nothing." Of course, any thinking person knows that all money for taxes in the United States is located within the borders of the 48 states, and could also be taxed by the State governments. We also know the Supreme Court has ruled that what the Federal Government subsidizes, it has the power to control.

A year ago the president of the American Bar Association, E. Smythe Gambrell, declared his belief that "Federal aid" to the public schools would ultimately bring the destruction of freedom to this country—that it would be nothing short of a national calamity for the public schools to become dependent upon "Federal aid." The president of the Conference of Chief Justices of the states, Justice William Duckworth, also expressed his fear that the expansion of Federal powers in social and economic fields through "grants-in-aid" threaten our constitutional form of government.

Roger A. Freeman, who was appointed to serve on two presidential commissions to study the fiscal capacities of the states to meet their school needs, made this statement about the current "Federal Aid to Schools" Bill which will come up soon in the 85th Congress:

"What we are faced with is not a Federal School Construction Aid program, but the first and fateful step in the nationalization of the public schools!"

In an address before the Civic Federation of Chicago, Oct. 31, 1956, Mr. Freeman said, "The public schools last year expended slightly over $10 billion. A Federal Aid program of $250 to $400 million might at best have boosted that total by 2 1-2 to 4 per cent, which is less than half the average annual increase from state and local funds in recent years.

"It is apparent," he said, "that the bills that Congress considered would have made very little difference in overall school finance. What, then, accounts for the excitement over the failure of the school aid bill? It appears that the sponsors of the Kelley Bill had far more in mind that a $400 million Federal Aid program. That was to be only a down-payment. The real purpose was to get a foot-in-the-door, to get the principle of Federal responsibility for the schools established, and then prove in subsequent years that the amounts were far too small. Beardsley Ruml proposed that the Federal Government contribute at least $3 1-2 billion a year to the schools, and preferably more.

"That gives the subject a different aspect. It would be naive to assume that the Federal Government would spend several billion dollars a year for any purpose, and have nothing to say on how the money was to be spent . . . Sooner or later they would suggest—with the big stick of non-compliance behind it—that schools conform to their ideas of how they should be organized and administered. This is what has happened to all other major Federal grants-in-aid programs as the amounts increased. History teaches that political power inevitably follows the power over the purse."

Roger Freeman directed the research for the Education Committee of the President's Commission on Inter-governmental Relations, which made an exhaustive survey and then reported:

"We have not been able to find a state which is economically unable to support an adequate school system. . . Federal Aid is not necessary, either for public schools, or for capital expenditures for new school facilities."

Mr. Freeman reports:

"From 1900 to 1955 public school enrollment doubled—but school operating costs multiplied 43 times!

"School funds have increased faster than enrollment, faster than prices and other public services!

"In 1900 school funds equalled 1 1-2 per cent of national income—in 1955, they equalled 4 per cent!

"A United Nations' World Survey finds that the United States has highest per capita expenditure for education!

"The number of teachers has risen faster in the U.S. than the number of pupils—here's national average: in 1900, there was one teacher to 37 pupils; in 1955, there was one teacher to 27 pupils!

"Unless a nation-wide movement can be organized to lay the true facts before the American public," Mr. Freeman warns, "it appears that sooner or later Federal School Aid will be enacted. . . Too few people realize the effect which the entry of the national government into the educational system would have, not only upon our schools, but upon the continued existence of the Federal system.

"Ours schools are the last great bulwark of state and local autonomy. They should remain so. If the schools fall to Federal influence, they will set the pattern for more and more powers to go to Washington until our states are left empty shells and reminders of what was once a great Federal union of sovereign states."

This will happen unless our people awaken now to the danger that threatens us. You can go into action at once: (1) write or wire your Congressman and Senators to defeat this School "Aid" Bill now; (2) get literature and inform your friends of the danger. Hold meetings in your home or community center. Ask everyone to write to their representatives in Washington to stop the "Federal School Aid" Bill cold when it comes up for passage!

—Harry T. Everingham in "Spotlight For the Nation," Committee For Constitutional Government.

Church League To Meet Next Friday

Cy Gustin, president of the St. Joe Church Softball League, has announced that the organization's next meeting will be held on Friday, April 19, at 7:30 p.m. at the Gustin home at the northwest edge of St. Joe.

The first meeting of the league for the 1957 season was held several weeks ago at which officers were elected. Serving the organization, in addition to Mr. Gustin, are Donald R. Miller, vice president, and Pete Timmerman, secretary-treasurer.

All churches in St. Joe and Spencerville and the surrounding community are invited to participate in the league. If it is felt that one church may not have enough boys and men to field a complete team, there will be the opportunity to combine in order to get sufficient numbers. Several churches have participated in the past few years, including the Newville Church of Christ, Mt. Pleasant, St. Joe Church of Christ, Newville E.U.B., St. Joe Lutheran, Spencerville Methodist, Spencerville Lutheran and Concord Methodist, and there is a strong possibility of other churches being represented this year in addition.

League activity begins around the first of June, dependent upon the weather. This year, it appears that may be quite a dependent.

Letters to the Editor

Kwitchurbelyakin

How many of us condemn the Town Board and our neighbors for the condition and appearance of our town?

Take a good look in the mirror and you will see a fellow that could help this situation if he only would.

If each one of us would try to clean up and fix up our own homes and premises, the results would be astonishing.

Curbs, gutters and sidewalks will come in due time if you will do your part first.

Dear Ted,

Letters to the editor of the home town paper are certainly a joy to read. Doris didn't get much of a chance to meet all of the fine folks around home before we were married and of course we skipped the country very soon after the wedding. Our stopover in Saint Joe was all too brief in August of 1954. Anyhow, as we read the "News" over here in Yokohama she is gradually getting to know more and more about that wonderful little town in Indiana that gives the "News" its news.

I'm not sure which we read first, the editorials, ads or local news. The opinions of the editor on many and varying subjects have been enlightening. We always compare the price of food at Clausers and Duntens with the prices we pay over here for American products and of their Japanese counterparts. You may have inflation in the USA but we wouldn't mind buying at that price again. The locals of course give us that short personal glimpse into the daily happenings at home. I suspect I scan and read (and read aloud about half of the articles) the paper three or four times before it eventually goes the way of all old newspapers.

We've been in Yokohama for nearly a year. It doesn't seem that this is possible yet but that is the way time gets to acting after one gets past the college age. Work here in the Mission Office never seems to end. I just get one job completed and something else comes demanding attention. Tomorrow is 'Income-tax' day here in this land. By virtue of the office I hold in the mission group I'm the "expert" and have been helping the rest of the folks get their tax returns ready for filing. I've not been doing so well, about half of the people I've helped have ended up paying more than my estimates. Income tax here is gradually going higher and higher, after we pay the national tax the prefectural and city offices come around and take another big cut. Enough about the tax blues, we aren't suffering yet.

These past few weeks I've been looking around the industrial city of Kawasaki which lies between Tokyo and Yokohama to find a place to begin preaching services and a Sunday school. When the proper location is available a seminary student and myself will begin conducting Evangelistic services. We have a small Sunday school in that city now but in an undesirable location therefore the need to move.

It is getting late and time to draw this epistle to a close. . .

Extend our greetings to all the folks around home.

Sincerely,
Bill and Doris Billow

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday-School Lessons

BY DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

Background Scripture: Matthew 21:1-11; 27:11-54.

Devotional Reading: Hebrews 2:9-18.

THE SHOUTERS

Lesson for April 14, 1957

It was an exciting week in Jerusalem. There was shouting on Sunday; there was shouting on Friday; all about the same Visitor, one Jesus of Nazareth. Only the shouting was different . On Sunday he rode into the city preceded by a guard of honor, disorderly to be sure, but wildly enthusiastic. They called him King ("Son of David"); they said with loud voices that he came in the name of the Lord; the Hosannas must have been heard for miles. Friday morning the Visitor was mostly out of sight. The Roman police had him, and they did not disgorge prisoners easily. The crowd milled about in the streets outside the governor's castle, and they kept yelling "Crucify him!" Nothing can be more thrilling than to be hailed as King, nothing can be more dreadful than the sound of a mob hungry for torture.

The Same Voices

Now the strange thing is that some of the same people who were shouting "Hosanna" on Sunday were shouting "Crucify him" on Friday. Didn't they know their own minds? Well, they didn't. Shouters seldom do. There are always shouters about, they emerge from every crack when anything exciting goes on. They shout in crowds; solo shouters are rare. If you had taken many (maybe most) members of that Sunday crowd aside and asked each one in private: "Do you really think this Jesus is a King ", it is a fair guess that some of them would have replied, "Well . . . I don't know, of course. But he might be. Good idea to get on the band-wagon, I hear . . . " and so forth. Further, if you had been able to get private interviews with the bloody-sounding shouters on Friday morning, and asked, "Do you really think that this Jesus is guilty—and if he is, of what, exactly? Do you personally want to see him crucified by the Romans?", you might have gotten some answers like —"Was I saying 'crucify'? Well, that's a little strong. Of course I hate to see anybody in Roman hands. No, I don't know the man personally, but I was told . . . " and so forth. I have heard—I was told—They say . . . Your shouter has no mind, all he has is a voice.

We Should Know

It is not such a dark mystery why the same people could yell Hosanna and Crucify about the same person within a week. Remember what was lined up against Jesus — intrenched interests, selfishness, indifference, pride, hatred, greed, prejudice. For him there was only truth, and truth has short shrift when the shouters are going strong. We may be shouters ourselves. How is it that on Sunday we can sing the most devoted songs about Jesus, we can even offer prayers in His name, and then on Monday (not waiting till Friday) our actions, which speak louder than our words always, "crucify the Son of God afresh", we sing come from poems which better Christians wrote; we just sing along with others, we don't think much about what the words mean. Then on Monday we fall into the ways of the world. We don't connect what we are doing (which can be pretty devilish and still legal) with what we said on Sunday; and we don't (maybe) intentionally mean anything against Jesus. But we do what "everybody" does and says, and don't stop to think (it's too much trouble for a shouter to think) that what we are doing, or failing to do, says louder than words — "Jesus? Who's he? Nobody that makes any difference with me, nobody I'd care to be like!"

If They Had Known Him

There were some who shouted on Sunday who were silent on Friday. The Eleven forsook Him and fled, we know; but we may be sure they did not yell "Crucify Him!" and perhaps the Mother Mary took no voice in the shouting any time. The star of her love shone steadily through the storm. Those who really know Jesus, not by hearsay, rumor or tradition, but know him as a living inner Friend, and Saviour, do not change their minds about Him overnight. And sometimes those who love Him most deeply are not to be found among the Shouters, but among those who serve.

SERVICES HELD FOR COUNTY AUDITOR WHO DIES SUDDENLY

DeKalb County auditor Harry M. Kirkpatrick suffered a sudden fatal heart attack at 1 p. m. Monday while walking with his wife to his office in the DeKalb County courthouse in Auburn. They had just returned from their noon meal and had parked in the county parking lot behind the county jail. They were walking near the heating plant when Mr. Kirkpatrick was stricken and collapsed, dying immediately.

Mr. Kirkpatrick was born August 21, 1892, in Colorado Springs, Colo., the son of the late James and Nancy Kirkpatrick. He and Stella Redman were married July 15, 1916, at Sturgis, Mich.

Surviving, in addition to the widow, are a son, Archie Kirkpatrick, of R1, Grabill; 2 grandchildren; and two brothers, Roy of Fruitland Park, Fla., and Archie of Manitowok, Wis.

Mr. Kirkpatrick was employed by the Northern Indiana Fuel and Light Company in Auburn for 13 years and for 13 years owned the ice plant in Auburn. He sought public office for the first time during the 1954 campaign. He was elected auditor on November 2, 1954, on the Republican ticket to a four-year term.

Services will be conducted Thursday at the Auburn Presbyterian Chuch with Rev. Miles Freeman officiating. Burial will be in Woodlawn Cemetery at Sturgis, Mich.

Of all of the different types of material that we have had in the corner, we have had more appreciative comments on this type than any other. So here again is a prayer from the stimulating mind of the late Peter Marshall, of whom the late Senator Arthur Vandenburg said, "To me he was the embodiment of 'Onward Christian Soldiers' - the personification of purposeful religion."

PRAYER

Forgive us, Lord Jesus, for doing the things that make us uncomfortable and guilty when we pray.

We say that we believe in God, and yet we doubt God's promises.

We say that in God we trust, yet we worry and try to manage our own affairs.

We say that we love Thee, O Lord, and yet do not obey Thee.

We believe that Thou hast the answer to all our problems, and yet we do not consult Thee.

Forgive us, Lord, for our lack of faith and the wilful pride that ignores the way, the truth and the life.

Wilt Thou reach down and change the gears within us that we may go forward with Thee. Amen.

THE HOSPITAL

The hospital is a place where nurses grand,
Come to your bedside and gently hold your hand.
They take your pulse and your temperature they read,
And then at mealtime, they bring you a feed.
Each and every morning a bath you will get,
And many other things they do to aid and abet.
You lay in your bed, looking toward the sky,
And sometimes you are dreaming of the sweet bye and bye.
A minister will come to your bedside and pray,
And will read a scripture to you before he goes away.
You are always looking forward
When homeward you may go.

The meeting was opened by the president, Ellen Fetters, and 18 members responded to roll call. Devotions were given by Katy Crow and the song, "The Old Rugged Cross," was led by Ruth Shilling.

Special leaders reported as follows: Gertrude Reinhart on gardening; Norma Diederich on the newest fashions.

Lorraine Murphy and Ruth Shilling gave the lesson on a "basic dress."

Marcia Sible gave a report on program planning for next year. The meeting closed with all repeating the home demonstration creed.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Ann Beebe.

Around the Town

With the Editor

Milt Ritenour has buttonholed me a couple of times on my omitting his bowling team from mention in these pages. I didn't know he had a team until long after we had a big story about local bowling participants.

But even if they didn't get any publicity, they didn't let that bother 'em. Milt said a few weeks ago that they had run up a string of 16 or 18 straight.

—Better not leave Betty out of this . . . she's president of the league.

C. Ray Davis stopped in last week to pay up his subscription. He's from Auburn - know him?

He left a complaint - and a compliment.

"The ohly complaint I have is that sometimes we don't get the paper until Monday and I like that Sunday School lesson you have."

"You have some pretty good editorials."

There were a lot of laughs to be had at the Junior play last week end. Generally speaking the play smelled. — Much of the action revolved about the purchase and use of some perfume.

There were three essences —"First Kiss," "June Wedding" and "One Man's Family."

Esther had insisted on taking along every garment she owned and they arrived at the station loaded with baggage. "I wish," said Ted thoughtfully, "that we'd brought our piano."

"Oh, quit trying to be so funny," came Esther's fr-r-r-rigid reply.

"I'm not trying to be funny," said Ted wistfully. "I left the tickets on it."

"How do you like my hat?" asked Violette innocently as she preemed herself before the mirror.

"It looks silly," said Maurie. "Why don't you take it back?"

Said Violette, "Oh, but I can't take it back. You see, it's my old one. But I can go buy another."

To Conduct Easter Sunrise Service At Six

Combined sunrise services on Easter Sunday are being planned by the Methodist and Lutheran churches of this area. Rev. Henry Weber, pastor of the Methodist churches at Concord and Spencerville, is directing preparations for the early service to be held at 6:00 a.m. Sunday morning, April 21, in St. Peter's Lutheran Church at Spencerville.

Following the early service, a breakfast will be served at the Spencerville Methodist Church by the ladies of the participating churches. The early service and breakfast have been observed by the churches in past years with the Spencerville and St. Joe communities alternating in the use of the churches for the Easter observance.

The service will be conducted by Rev. Weber. Usually the pastor of the Lutheran churches also participates. But the Lutheran pulpit is vacant at present, thus necessitating the sole services of Rev. Weber.

Rev. Weber stated this week, "In thus meeting, these churches seek to express their belief in the universality of God's love as exemplified through the Resurrection. The program will consist of two special numbers by the combined choir, a congregational hymn, Scripture reading, brief meditative words and prayer."

Those singing in the choir are:

Soprano — Shirley Smith, Mary Wisel, Nancy Brown, Kathy Anthony, Tillie Monroe, Avis Staman, Elsie Fisher, Betty Rediger, Louise Zimmerman, Ann Weber, Velda Brown, Fara Lee Baidinger, Donzella Graham and Pat Vendrely.

Alto — Helen Koch, Peggy Koch, Dorothy Smith, Sharon Smith, Joy McNabb, Esther Haberkorn, Betty Bevington, Gaylon Markle, Marvel Kesler, Lois Fisher, Manguerite Fish and Karen Fish.

Bass—Harvey Hull, William Staman, Arthur Kesler, Joe Baidinger and Vaughn Allen.

Accompanist is Pauline Baumgartner.

An invitation has been extended to the community to attend the sunrise service on Easter morning at 6:00 a.m and thereafter enjoy the followship of the Easter breakfast.

Cubs To Take Part In Circus

The Anthony Wayne Council of the Boy Scouts of America is planning something different this year in showing the progress and activities of the scouting movement. In the past a "jamboree" has been held at Fort Wayne at the Coliseum with exhibits on display in stationary booths. This year in May, to be exact, the district will present a Boy Scout Circus in which all scout troops in the council are invited to prepare and present a skit or demonstration to be seen on stage by all who atend the affair.

The Spencerville Cub Scout Pack is preparing its part for the show with the Cub leaders and boys who will participate. A skit about robots is the project of the local pack and appropriate costumes are being constructed. Those who will take part in the circus include Billy Brookfield, John Stiver, Lee Impton, Nick [illegible], Mike Haberkorn, Jerry Steele, Tommy Studebaker and other Cubs as yet unnamed. Norb Sordelet is chairman of the circus skit being prepared by the local pack.

The circus will be given Saturday, May 18, at 2:00 and 7:30 p.m.

Softball Meeting Postponed To April 26

Churches which will participate in the league are reminded to have representatives at the re-scheduled meeting next Friday evening, April 26. It will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Cy Gustin at the northwest edge of St. Joe at 7:30 p.m.

Spencerville Post Office Hours Given

Closed Sundays

If you have been reading the Fort Wayne papers lately, you have seen that a chain store system is now staying open for business on Sunday. The explanation for the action is that competition must be met, there are several other stores in the city and surrounding territory which have been opening for business on Sunday.

You have also probably noted the "project" then undertaken by one of the civic organizations in that city. The project is to re-establish Sunday as a non-working day in the stores which are competing in their particular field, the grocery business. A cash donation has been offered by the chain, recently forced to open on Sunday, to anyone who finds a solution to the problem of getting all the stores closed on Sunday.

Still further you may have noted the reaction of many people in that city to the move. Letters to the editor printed in the daily newspapers in that city have shown a wide variation of opinion in some respects, but the general thought in most seems to be agreement that it would be better if the stores were closed; the method of doing it, however, is subject to controversy.

We do not intend to pass judgment on the merits of the program to close the stores. For the same problem is present in all communities and it is the problem of the individuals involved, to be solved by them. One may subject the business man to criticism for opening his place of business on Sunday, but as in the above case in Fort Wayne, where there are many employees involved, the pressure and responsibility may be great enough to force undesired actions. Certainly a store could remain closed and observe Sunday as a day of rest; it would take a strong will to meet the possible loss of income and the possible loss of employees because of it. But then that is for each one to decide for himself as the occasion arises. It would not be so unfortunate if it were not for the fact that it isn't the other stores that are "forcing" Sunday hours on an unwilling businessman but the people who patronize the stores. It is a simple fact that if, in this nation of Christian ideals, more people would take it upon themselves to practice those ideals, the stores wouldn't be open on Sunday because those people would have provided for their needs during the remaining portion of the week.

Remaining open on Sunday is not an exclusive problem of the big city, however. For in St. Joe the same situation has prevailed, wherein the habits of the public have prompted Sunday hours where they are not desired. Action has been taken in a different manner in our town. The local grocery which has been open for business for four hours on Sunday (it formerly was for eight hours) in the past week has posted notice in the store that beginning Easter Sunday, there will no longer be Sunday shopping hours. There is no big to-do about the action; just a simple posted notice in the store of the new policy.

Most of the effort expended in attempting to keep stores closed on Sunday comes quite naturally from religious groups and the clergy. But there are these same people, who belong to these groups or subscribe to their religious philosophy, who yet patronize the establishments which do remain open on Sunday. In St. Joe, for instance, in the past you need only drop in at the grocery formerly open on Sunday, say at a little after noon, to find the store filled with those who have just come from church. Thus, the businessman is not the evil one; evil shows in all of us. But in St. Joe this businessman has taken a step to make it more of a cooperative effort to make the Sabbath respected as a day of rest. This would seem to be more effective than to offer a form of reward in return for someone's forcing him to do what he knows he should do in the first place.

It doesn't take much effort to get involved in a deep and perhaps heated discussion about this matter of business on Sunday. For, as mentioned previously, the demands of the public often are the deciding factors, even though much of the public is supposedly opposed to Sunday business because of their religious beliefs. It is necessary for business as well as individuals to adjust with the times and likewise it is necessary in some degree for religion to adjust also with the times. Today, in an age of travel-consciousness, where a hundred or so miles of pleasure driving is not unusual, a Sunday drive can mean "we need some gas." And when we need some gas, we go to a service station. There is a Sunday business established. While we are on that drive, on Sunday, our bodies need nourishment. So we stop at a drive-in or a restaurant. There is a Sunday business established. We go to the lake for a swim and relaxation at the beach, boating, snacks, etc. There are more Sunday businesses established. So our day of rest for some becomes a day of labor for others.

Perhaps there could be more understanding of one side for the other in this matter of you-should-close vs. we - gotta - stay - open. There are some exceptions, but it is almost universal that Sunday morning is observed as the time for worship services within the many churches. Could not business then respect the desires of the church and remain closed in the morning hours? And could not then the church be less critical of business on Sunday if business went this half-way to respect the church? And could not the church members themselves show a little more backbone and provide for their Sunday needs on Saturday, except perhaps for those needs which may arise in our modern Sunday "relaxation" as mentioned above?

It is interesting to note that this writing began as a matter of business and is evolving to a matter of church, which brings to mind a significant observation. In the above-mentioned big-city seeking of an answer to the Sunday business problem, supposedly inspired by Christian ideals and including the advertised offer of monetary reward for a solution and the advertised acceptance of the challenge by a civic organization, in pot one instance was God mentioned. Sought after is the answer to establishing Sunday as a day of rest, but no mention is made as to why it is a day of rest.

Two questions:

Who established Sunday as a day of rest?

Whose day is it?

FLORIDA IN THE SPRING

Today is cold and wet and drear
For it has come that time of year
When weather is just in between
A sudden shower or a warm sunbeam
And us damyanks who are here for fun
Begin to pack for our northern run
And most of us begin to say
It can't be worse up that way.

We've put off going day by day
There's something here that seems to say
Just wait a while and maybe next week
You'll find the thing for which you seek
But I'll be darned if I can tell
Just what it is for which I've fell
It surely can't be this rain today
Just what it is I cannot say.

There is one thing that I do know
I've missed a lot of ice and snow
And hail and sleet and nasty rain
That caused my rheumatiz to pain
And I'm as thankful as I can be
That Uncle Sam was good to me
And I can now sit in the sun
And truthfully say "Ain't we got fun."

It must be just this life of ease
For we can do just as we please
To go and come when one does will
To listen to the mocking bird trill
To watch the tide go in and out
To fish and sleep without a doubt
That tomorrow is another day
That I can swim or loaf or play.

I'm trying to tell you folks up home
Who think you can't afford to roam
To pack your duds for one full season
Come on down south without a reason
Other than to break away
From the humdrum life of your everyday
And see how much is your reward
For the thing you thought you couldn't afford.

We are coming home in a week or so
Just when twill be I still don't know
But we'll be back to stay a while
To dream of things that made us smile
And happy and gay in the sunshine state
And then next fall if its not too late
We'll pack our bags to start the trek
Where the January sun burns the back of your neck.

SHE'S PROVED THAT BEAUTY BREEDS BEAUTY

Something wonderful has happened in run-down sections of Philadelphia. In the last four years almost 100 blocks once distinguished only by dingy, ramshackle buildings and trash-filled alleys have been transformed by flowering window boxes, shrubbery, trees and creeping vines. Vacant lots, cleared of rubbish, have become neighborhood gardens. Curbstones have been whitewashed, and doorways and window frames have been painted—at the tenants' expense.

The people, too, have changed. There's a new neighborliness and a community pride. The neighborhood kids, who were once destructive hellions, are now proud members of the "garden patrol."

All this change was inspired by Louise Bush-Brown, an alert little woman in her 60's, who retired in 1952 as director of the Pennsylvania School of Horticulture for Women. But Mrs. Bush-Brown insists that credit belongs to the neighborhood people who did the job and who now cherish the results. "The seed was always there," she says. "It only needed nurturing."

For years, traveling from her home in nearby Ambler Louise Bush-Brown had been saddened by the increasing squalor of the city's depressed areas. The drabness of the dilapidated dwellings and littered streets was reflected in the people's faces. "Some flowers and trees would do more than brighten these places," she told her husband one day. "They might even change the people's lives."

James Bush-Brown, landscape architect, agreed. But it would be a hopeless job, he said, to sell the city fathers such a utopian idea.

APRIL

L928

"We won't ask the city government," she said. "The people will do it theselves."

Mrs. Bush-Brown talked with the people in charge of settlement houses and community centers. They were skeptical. The neighborhoods would be apathetic or even hostile, they said. Vandals would uproot the planting. "Gardens are hardly the answer," one social worker said. "What we need is modern housing."

Mrs. Bush-Brown pointed to a new block of low-cost apartments. Already it was a cheerless place with open areas littered and unkempt. It was plain, she said, that new housing projects needed gardens almost as badly as the unimproved sections.

The first "pilot" gardens made their debut in the spring of 1953. Settlement workers introduced the idea to families on seven selected blocks. The men and boys of these blocks constructed 427 window boxes, using settlement-house facilities but buying their own lumber. The seeds, bulbs, plants and cuttings were donated by cooperating garden clubs in the Philadelphia area.

One morning in May, for example, a small truck pulled up on the dismal 1700 block of North Beechwood Street. Women came out to select flowers and learn how to plant window boxes. By noon 72 boxes had been installed and planted, and the neighbors went from house to house admiring each other's flowers.

Then the miracle happened on Beechwood Street. For the first time the people seemed aware of the block's squalor. By midafternoon they had cleared the trash and garbage from the gutters. Sidewalks and doorsteps were scrubbed. A woman went from door to door taking up a collection to have the curbstones painted white.

The transformation was no one-day affair. During that summer sagging fences were propped up and whitewashed. Several families painted their doors and window frames, and the vogue spread.

But something else happened on that May morning to justify Louise Bush-Brown's faith in people. Twelve women from adjoining Norwood Street came to learn how they could join the program. And late in June, when window boxes were installed in Norwood Street, a committee of Beechwood neighbors (now experienced gardeners!) was on hand to supervise the job.

From this modest beginning in 1953 the idea spread. The following year 2000 boxes were installed on 34 "garden blocks." By 1956 there were 93 blocks in the program, with each block having its own garden club or committee and striving to outdo the neighboring blocks in imaginative planting. Now there are porch boxes and fence boxes, and backyard and dooryard gardens. One street introduced "sidewalk boxes" — concrete troughs set against the houses and planted with climbing roses to brighten the formerly drab facades.

"Beauty breeds beauty—and goodness," says Louise Bush-Brown. Just as the first flowers prompted the people to clear the littered streets, so has the new spirit moved into their homes and their lives. The colorful window box inspires neat curtains. Curtains emphasize the drabness of a room that needs brightening—and the room gets it. "You have to go inside these homes to realize how far-reaching this idea is," a social worker said to me.

During the summer of 1954, residents of Beechwood's 1700 block held parties and rummage sales to raise money for neighborhood improvement. They cleaned up a vacant lot and installed playground equipment for the children. There are several of these improvised playgrounds in Philadelphia now. But none is more inspiring than the "Secret Garden" on Rodman Street in South Philadelphia.

Behind a high board fence in the 1500 block of Rodman Street was a vacant lot buried under trash. In 1954 the block leader, Mrs. Mattie Burton, looked up the owner and outlined a project. Working nights, she and a little group of friends spent most of the winter of 1954-1955 carting away the debris in baby buggies and bushel baskets. As spring approached, they hauled in topsoil and laid brick walks.

Not until flowers had been planted and homemade benches installed did they knock down the old high fence and put up a low white picket fence. "We planned it as a surprise," Mrs. Burton says. "That's why we named it the Secret Garden." The garden is now the center of community life on the block.

In 1956, when she received Philadelphia's Gimbel Award "for outstanding contribution to humanity," Louise Bush-Brown recalled that no one was more surprised by what has happened than Philadelphia's police. "The day we planted the geraniums, petunias and zinnias in Ken-Watt Court," she says, "a police car drew up. 'Lady, you're just wasting your time,' the officer said. 'There won't be a flower left in 24 hours.'

"Well, the officer was wrong—not only about Ken-Watt Court but about all the boxes and gardens that have sprung up in the city. People just don't destroy things they love."

—Lois Mattox Miller (Reader's Digest, condensed from Christian Herald).

CHALLENGE TO CONGRESS

The President of the United States has sent to Congress a Budget which would require a total of $73.3 million for Federal spending in the 12 months ending July 1, the biggest peacetime budget in history. The President has not said so directly but he has implied that it ought to be considerably smaller. Many Senators and Representatives in Congress have outspokenly said the same thing. The Director of the Budget agrees, and Treasury Secretary Humphrey says that unless the Federal government quits spending so much the nation is headed for serious trouble.

From all these governmental quarters comes this one question, repeated over and over: "But who will say specifically where the cuts could and should be made?" One man in Washington, as has been his custom through 24 years of distinguished service in the U.S. Senate, does not ask the question but replies to it. He is Senator Harry F. Byrd of Virginia. When the 1958 Budget was submitted, Senator Byrd, as usual put his entire staff to work studying it, its recommendations, the funds involved, and the genuine needs behind the recommendations.

No one in Washington calls Senator Byrd an obstructionist. The highest officials in government, the leaders of both parties in Congress, and most students and observers of our American government have a high respect for his intelligence, his unusual knowledge of governmental fiscal affairs, and his integrity. One thing has set him apart in Washington over the past 24 years: year after year, he tells Congress, the President and the People of America exactly where, and by how much, the Federal budget can and should be trimmed.

He says the $73.3 billion Eisenhower Budget can be reduced by $6.5 billion and our national security and economic strength be much stronger than it would be should the full $733 billion be appropriated and spent. Here are his recommended cuts and his comments:

1. National Security Activities, $1.5 billion reduction. "This reduction is less than 5 per cent. It simply contemplates squeezing out waste. It does not contemplate curtailment of any essential activity or procurement. The reduction would leave $39.6 billion in new appropriations for these programs. Together with $40.1 billion in unexpended balances or prior appropriations and $67 million in foreign currencies, this group of activities would have $79.8 billion for expenditure."

2. Foreign Aid and International Affairs, $2 billion. "The reduction contemplates military assistance at this year's $2 billion level, at a saving of $0.5 billion; and $1.5 billion cut in economic aid. After this cut, military assistance will will have $2 billion in new appropriations, $4 billion in unexpended balances in prior appropriations, and $70 million in foreign currencies, for a total of $6.1 billion After this cut economnc aid would have $400 million in new appropriations, $2.2 billion in unexpended balances in prior appropriations, and $728 million in foreign currencies, for a total of $3.3 billion."

3. Domestic Civilian Activities, $3 billion. "This includes remaining federal activities. Appropriations to these activities are up 36 per cent since 1954. The budget contains 37 proposals for new and expanding activities in this category with 1958 requests totaling $2 billion. These include 14 new federal grants-to-states programs, bringing the total to 67, and among these is the public-school-construction program with a first year appropriation of 451 million. Among the hundreds of old current accounts, the budget proposes increases in three out of every four. After this cut, domestic civilian programs, exclusive of highways, will have $23.8 billion in new authorizations plus $24 billion in unexpended balances . . . for a total of nearly $48 billion."

In a major Senate speech presenting the "Byrd" Budget, the Virginian said the $73.3 billion budget was dangerous to the future prosperity and security of every American citizen. His recommendations command the serious consideration of Congress and the President.

SAMMY WRITES TO FERN AGAIN
(as interpreted by Merwin J. Place)

Fern, I am just as naughty as I can be,
Because I have no one to play with me.
If I had a boy, that could play and run,
I'll bet we would have lots of fun.
But you know Merwin, he is getting old,
And all he wants to do is scold.
If you were home, I would come in to you,
I would sit down and we would say "howdy do"
On your cheek I would place a juicy kiss,
I am not kidding, Fern, I mean this.

GOD'S D-DAY

Lesson for April 21, 1957

One of the most famous of Easter hymns begins: "The strife is o'er, the battle is done, The Victory of life is won . . ." Among the many true meanings of Christ's death and resurrection is this: Christ has conquered sin and death. All that death and sin could do to him was done; yet he "rose a victor o'er the dark domain," as another familiar hymn goes. The last word of Jesus to his disciples, as Matthew reports it, begins — "All authority has been given me. . ." Easter is not a season for puzzles; and yet all this does raise a question in the minds of both Christians and unbelievers. If it is true that Christ has won for us the victory over sin and death, if it is true that it is He who has the true authority over man and history, how is it that the world racks along in such a slow, painful frustrated sort of way? Looking at a slum or a battlefield or a cemetery or a jail, looking at life as it is lived on this planet, would we guess that God had won a tremendous victory over the powers of evil?

D-Day Is not V-Day

A theologian of our time, Oscar Cullman, has given an answer to this in the simplest terms. We live, he says, in the interval, so to speak, between D-Day and V-Day. All who can remember back to June 6, 1944, remember the tremendous victory of that hard-fought D-Day. But the war went on for nearly a year after that. Was D-Day, then, a failure? By no means. With D-Day the war was virtually won. The enemy had little chance, after that; but it took a lot of fighting, and some of it, like the Battle of the Bulge, costly and disheartening. So we are living, in the time between Christ's ascension and his coming again in glory, as it were between D-Day and V-Day.

What God Has Done

What has been accomplished by God's D-Day? One thing is that God's power has been shown, once and for all. Over and over in the New Testament, especially in the letters of Paul, the power with which God raised Christ from the dead is called the same power that works in Christians. The victory over sin and death which we see in Christ can be the hope and to an increasing degree the experience of our own lives. There really is a difference between living in the world before Christ and after. All that Christ was and did and said, climaxed by the resurrection, are ever before our minds if we only think. Before Christ, no one on earth really knew what God could do. Since Christ, men of faith do know. The other achievement of D-Day's victory is, for us, sharing in God's certainty of victory which finally shall be complete. One of the easiest and subtlest temptations into which we can fall is to wonder whether God may not at last be overwhelmed by a universe which he created but cannot now control. Realizing what D-Day means, we need never have such fears.

What We Must Do

Calvary and Easter have practical messages for the Christian. They are not mere admiration-days, when we can sing happily about what God has done. They are challenge-days calling us to thought, attitude, action, as befits children of the mighty God. As for death, we can see clear through it. Christ has shown us the glory on the other side. As for sin, Christ bore our sins with Him "to the tree" as Peter said. The power that wrought in Him is available for us in our struggles against evil. But there is something more than this. John Baillie speaks of our era, between the time of Jesus and the end of time, as "the years of grace," that the great task of Christians is just the very thing which Matthew leaves with his readers as the climax of his story of Christ. "All authority has been given me . . . therefore—(sit down and be at ease? wait quietly for the end? spend your time singing my praises? no, none of these.)—therefore, GO, and make disciples." The going winning Christian is the one in whom the victory of Easter moves on toward final triumph.

LADIES LITERARY CLUB

The Ladies Literary Club met for their final regular meeting of the club year at the home of Mrs. Carl Perkins on Wednesday evening, April 10.

Mrs. Maurice Kline, president, called the meeting to order. The collect and pledge to the flag were led by Mrs. Wayne Storer.

This was also musical evenig and Mrs. Allen Haller led the group in singing "America, the Beautiful." A quartet, Mrs. Harold Baker, Mrs. Forest Bevington, Mrs. Robert Musser and Mrs. Wayne Storer, accompanied by Mrs. Omer Hansen, sang "Easter Parade," "Known Only To Him" and "He Bought My Soul At Calvary." A book review on "Lantern In Her Hand" by Bess Streeter Aldrich was very ably presented by Mrs. Frank Shull. Finally, Mrs. Allen Haller accompanied by Miss Betty Boggs led the group in singing "Sweet and Low."

Twenty-two members and three guests, Mrs. Arnold Oetting, Mrs. Omer Hansen and Miss Betty Boggs were present.

Annual reports were given by the secretary and treasurer. A critic's review was given by Mrs. Carl Carpenter.

Mrs. Roy Baker was reinstated as an active member.

After adjournment, light refreshments were served by the hostess.

Biggest Sellers...because they're Biggest Savers!

New Chevrolet trucks stay on the job . . . save on the job!

Ever since way back in 1937 Chevrolet has been America's biggest selling truck. That's pretty strong evidence, we think, that Chevy's been the biggest saver all these years. When truck buyers find a truck that delivers more work per dollar, they stay with it.

They're staying with Chevrolet again this year—because these new Task-Force 57 trucks are the biggest savers on any job. Under their hoods, for instance, you'll find the most advanced and efficient truck engines going. Deep-breathing short-stroke V8's that deliver high horsepower per pound are either standard or optional at extra cost in every model.

All new light-duty models and some medium-duty jobs are powered by the very latest versions of Chevrolet's famous truck 6.

New from Chevrolet! Chevy now offers two new high-capacity Forward Control models, including the industry's biggest, rated up to 18,000 lbs. G.V.W.

Your Chevrolet dealer will show you a model that's practically made to order for your kind of hauling.

You figure it out; the so-called weaker sex is the stronger sex because of the weakness of the stronger sex for the weaker sex.

We've been telling you for several weeks that we were moving all of our maple furniture to our uptown store. Well, that change has been completed now. Also a carload of new pieces has been delivered to us from the factories. We are going to have a formal opening one of these days, but as for you, you can have a quiet preview anytime you want to come in.

What do we have? Here's a partial list: sofas, chairs, rockers, end tables, coffee tables, butterfly tables, desks, desk chairs, book cases, magazine racks, wall racks, lamps, complete dining room suits, complete bedroom suits, all in solid hard rock maple.

See our colonial maple in our uptown maple shop.

VOLUME LXXII ST. JOE, (DeKalb Co.), IND. Thursday, April 25, 1957 NUMBER 17

Around the Town

With the Editor

Lynn Fisher has a little sign posted at the front of his store, left through the courtesy of one of the peanut companies. It says—

"I like my job. It's the work I hate."

It wouldn't be much of a newspaper anywhere if the cooperation of reads wasn't forthcoming to help make the paper. Not only are contributions of local news items appreciated and needed but also helps in other ways. For instance, Pauline Baumgartner called me up a couple of weeks ago to call my attention to the article on beautification in the Reader's Digest which then was quoted in these pages last week. And Edna Amstutz at about the same time called the Ed's attention to a feature article in a Fort Wayne paper concerning community and related problems which appears in this week's issue.

Naturally, it is impossible to promise that every suggested contribution of such a nature can be or will be used. That's where the Editor comes in. And maybe you won't like him too much if he doesn't use your suggestion. But there are some which can be considered more appropriate or related to our community's affairs and they may show that we are not alone in having certain problems and they may have suggestions as to how to cope with these problems from experience gained in other communities.

At any rate, this is a Thanksgiving message—out of season, as far as the calendar is concerned—to all helpers of The News.

This might interest some of the young ladies in these parts but I won't say who for obvious reasons. I got a notice this week of a national Chubby Club which has 175,000 members throughout the country. Membership is open to any girl between the ages of 7 and 14, the only requirement being that the applicant be chubby. The Chubby Club has its own newspaper, sponsors a charitable project now and then, conducts contests for Chubbys only and has a network of Pen Pals all over the world. Information on dieting, good grooming, fashions, etiquette and personality improvement is available to all Chubbys. For membership card and free subscription to the newspaper, interested young ladies should write to Chubby Editor, 465 Fifth Avenue, New York.

More About the School

Several problems are being encountered in considerations now before the Riverdale school board relative to new school construction.

The primary problem is money. The other problems then revolve around the money matter. Before any construction can be started or even contracted for, it must be determined how many rooms will be needed and how extensive or fancy will be the equipment and other appointments. Included in this is the gymnasium and its seating equipment, dressing room facilities, stage, etc. This is in addition to the necessary requirements in each classroom, the desks, bookselves, storage facilities, shop tools, home ec equipment, heating equipment, etc. Not to be forgotten are the costs for a building site and landscaping. But these, it can be seen, all revolve around that primary question of how much money will it take and how much can we obligate ourselves for.

The school board is considering at the present time the problem of how large a construction program we can undertake. The grade school is crowded now to the extent that a much-needed classroom can be available only by some remodeling to make use of the principal's ofice This would be at best only a temporary relief, since it would be a detriment to the efficiency of the school to have a principal without an office. The building used by the grades is in good condition and can be used for a time, at least, to accommodate the lower grades But it just isn't big enough.

With the crowded condition, thoughts of a new school are affected in this way. It is now being considered that new school construction be either for the senior high school, using then the present buildings for the lower grades, or for the upper seven grades. There are several things to be considered in making a decision one way or another. If the new school were to be for only the upper grades (the senior high school) the present buildings in use for junior high and high school would continue in use. It is somewhat of general opinion that the "new" building in use by the upper grades is not too satisfactory, both as to arrangement of rooms and as to safety. The "old" building is, surprisingly, more suitable than the new. Therefore, it is not too desirable to construct only senior high school facilities. From a financial standpoint, however, it would naturally involve a lesser outlay of money at the outset. But here the advantage, if you want to call it that, of lesser construction is subject to question because of rising construction costs which could mean that in a few years the overall and increasing cost of constructing additional facilities to add to the first construction of only senior high school facilities would be great enough to have paid for more extensive construction at the very start of the new building program. This fact was emphasized at a meeting of the board last Monday night.

What seems to be the most satisfactory arrangement is the construction of a school unit similar, for instance, to the unit reported on in this paper recently, located in Florida Township at Rosedale, Indiana. The board visited this new school, and several others in recent months. It is agreed that such a 16-room unit would allow for use by the sixth, seventh and eighth grades and the senior high school. This would relieve the crowded condition at the grade school by releasing two classrooms now used by the sixth grade. The ultimate goal of a complete new school for all grades would then be accomplished later with new class rooms for the lower five grades.

Naturally, everyone would like to have a whole new school for all grades available in the near future. And perhaps this remote possibility should not be overlooked. But the money matter is the important factor. Financing a new school can be done by issuing general obligation bonds up to the limit of 2 per cent of the assessed valuation of taxable property in the school corporation, using the cumulative school building funds, or utilizing non-profit school building corporations through which the construction of school facilities may be financed with private capital, with the buildings then being leased to the school corporation under a plan by which they may be purchased with the rental payments. Further assistance is available through the Indiana Common School Fund financing aid made available by the state under certain conditions for the purchase of bonds of non-profit school building corporations that do not find a ready commercial market for their bonds. There is also emergency school construction fund financing aid available under certain conditions from the state and federal aid for federally-affected areas. But the primary money sources are those from bonding, cumulative funds and holding corporations.

Locally speaking, the amount to be raised from bonds would not be enough to cover new school construction. With an assessed valuation of $4,011,750 for the school corporation, bonding for 2 per cent would bring only $80,235. The cumulative fund under a 50-cent levy yields around $20,000 per year, but it is only in its second year. Unless, therefore, some financing can be obtained through some other source, there remains only the holding corporation to finance the balance of new school construction obligations.

The problem has not been eased in any sense by the relatively low cumulative fund levy of 50 cents. The state allows up to a maximum of $1.25 for such a levy. While it is the desire of all taxpayers to ease their burden, frequently it costs more to pay less. Though our tax rate has been lower under the 50-cent levy than it would have been, say, under a $1.00 levy, a long-range look will show that actually we will pay more tax dollars. In the two years time that the levy has been in effect, we have something like $40,000 accumulated. With a levy of $1.00, we would have had $80,000. Simple arithmetic, to be sure, but it tells a story. For the interest payments on the "lost" $40,000, paid either on bonds or to a holding corporation soon overwhelm any apparent economy found in a low cumulative levy. Money which could mean an extra class room paid for in a new school will instead mean only an interest payment.

The increase in cost of construction since the Florida Township school was contracted for a little over a year ago amounts to 20 to 25 per cent. Cost today of such a unit would be approximately $425,000, subject to change due to the variety in choice of materials in certain phases of construction.

If only a senior high school is constructed, it would be only a half-effort toward relieving not only the shortage of class rooms but also the shortage of facilities needed to present a well-rounded curriculum. If it can be possible to construct a unit similar to the 16-room unit plus gym recently viewed, if we can raise the money necessary for such a building and if its construction has proven substantial in other localities, it appears that this would be the best program to follow.

And it would be hard to take, possibly, to be burdened with higher property taxes, but it would seem a long-range economy to raise that 50-cent cumulative fund levy to $1.00 where it should have been in the first place.

There is an old proverb which might be paraphrased from "a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush" to "a dollar in the cumulative building fund BEFORE you build is worth two in the cumulative building fund AFTER you build."

BETTER LATE THAN NEVER

Our Editor is big and tall,
And he looks rather stout;
But he wasn't quite big enough
To carry his resolution out.

Sometimes we get our paper on Thursday,
And sometimes we have to wait;
When he oversleeps some morning,
Then doesn't get it done till late.

One week he missed entirely,
But he was kind and true,
Then the next week he made it up,
And we all received two.

But bear with him, my neighbor,

CITIES AND TOWNS GET SICK JUST LIKE HUMAN BEINGS

by Alton L. Blakeslee (reprinted from the Fort Wayne Journal Gazette, March 26,1957)

Cities and towns can get emotionally sick, just like humans, a physician said today.

And the town's sickness can adversely affect the mental health of its people.

Some towns are schizoid—clinging to the past yet wanting new and better things, said Dr. Andrew S. Tomb, Victoria, Texas. They won't vote school bonds yet don't like doubled-up school sessions, for example.

Others are psychopathic with no regrets over their past and no worries about their future. Some are in the depressive phase of social and economic decadence. Others are maniac boom towns growing too fast, without enough schools, streets and health facilities.

"Sick communties are partly where we get troublesome things from inhuman behaviour," Dr. Tomb declared in an interview at the annual meeting of the American Academy of General Practice, the organization of family doctors.

He said towns can and must recognize and correct their emotional sickness.

Family doctors, who know and treat the people, should be the first to recognize what is wrong—in school systems, lack of recreational facilities, in bad influences on families and children.

"Even a new bowling alley can be a good and healthy thing," he said. "Husbands and wives, tired irritated and griped after the day's work can take out their hostilities on bowling pins rather than on each other and their children."

Dr. Tomb is chairman of an AAGP committee working with an American Psychiatric Association committee to intensify treatment and prevention of mental illnesses, the nation's most widespread disease.

The joint committee agrees family doctors can and must do far more in treating mental and emotional sickness.

The family doctor is usually the first to see the emotionally disturbed patient. Through his knowledge of the family and the community, he could often nip incipient illness early, or help solve emotional problems, said Drs. Lawrence E. Drewery, Camden, Ark., and E. Irving Baumgartner, Oakland, Md., who are members of the AAGP committee.

"With proper training, the family doctor could treat far more than half of the emotionally disturbed," Dr. Drewery said.

He declared mental illness "is the next great field for the advance of medicine. It is the only remaining vast area not yet chartered."

"THREE PERILS FOR AMERICA"

Senator Harry S. Byrd has just finished a careful detailed study of the $73.3 billion Federal Budget for 1958 as submitted by the President. And in a major Senate speech he has called for specific reductions totaling $6.5 billion. Senator Byrd told Congress, the President and the people of America just where the cuts should be made and why. He set forth "three perils" which he said the country would be accepting if the full $73.3 billion budget were to be approved.

"First," he said, "it is the largest peacetime budget in the history of our country. It is the third largest budget of any kind, considering the war periods — the many wars that we have been in.

"Secondly, it embraces a number of new avenues for spending. It has 14 aids to the States for federal grants. It opens up a Pandora's box in building the public-school buildings . . . We went into foreign aid, the Marshall Plan; we were told that that would last for four years; guaranteed that. Mr. Truman said, 'I guarantee to you that we'll not spend it for more than four years — 15 billion dollars.' We've spent 50 billions of dollars on the Marshall Plan. Whenever you start these things, you can't stop them.

"Thirdly, this budget presents the peril — the fact — that it is not soundly based on a balance of revenue, because it has two unpredictables: one is that there must be an increase in postal rates of 700 million dollars, which the Congress has not yet enacted. Very frankly, it is my expectation to vote for some reasonable increase — that is justified in the postal rates, because I think the Post Office Department should be self-sustaining. But Congress has not enacted that. Yet the budget estimate includes the revenue from this increase of 700 million dollars in order to balance the present budget. Also the budget anticipates an increase in income—that is to say, in the national prosperity — of 6 per cent for the year 1957. I think . . . you will agree with me that that's a very dangerous basis on which to balance the present budget.

"So this budget," continued Senator Byrd, "is not only the largest budget but it mortgages, so to speak, the future prosperity of the country . . . This budget continues entrenched spending and opens up new federal programs . . . I would be unfaithful to my own conscience and to those things that I have stood for during the time that I have been in public life if I did not denounce this budget as one of the most dangerous and one of the most perilous budgets that has ever been presented to us, because it will continue to grow and grow throughout the years to come."

In his Senate speech, Senator Byrd cited an example of how new federal programs continue "to grow and grow." "There is in the budget," he noted, "an item entitled : 'Salaries and expenses, President's Committee on Education Beyond High School,' Department of Health, Education and Welfare. It is shown as an 'old program.' The Committee was given a 1957 appropriation of $150,000 to make a report by December 31, 1957. The original appropriation provided no funds for grants or subsidies.

"The pending budget proposes an additional 1957 supplement of $650,000 in the current year for grants and subsidies. Then it goes further and proposes one 1958 appropriation of $300,000 to enable the Committee to complete its report, and another 1958 appropriation of 2.5 million dollars 'further to assist in developing programs . . to implement recommendatons of the Committee.' Here we have a $150,000 appropriation for a Committee report, which in two years grows to a $8 million appropriation for a grants-and-subsidy program — before the report is made! This is a small example of how these programs grow."

When I was in Washington recently many men on Capitol Hill told me they were getting an almost record-breaking mail demandng curtailment of federal expenditures and lowering of taxes. If this grass roots clamor continues, the "Byrd" budget cutting $6.5 billion from the recommended spending for the next fiscal year will get ever more serious consideration in the Congress and taxes might begin to come down.

Alcohol Tax Big Source Of Revenue

602 cities, towns and counties in Indiana shared in $5,563,748 of alcoholic beverage revenue distributed during 1956, according to an announcement by Noble Ellis, chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Commission, marking on April 7 the 24th anniversary of the return of legal beer and wine.

A total of $3,294,323, or 1-4th of the gallonage taxes levied on beer, wine and liquor, was allocated to every city and town by the auditor of state, and $2,296,424 derived from 2-3rds of the license fees paid by retailers and dealers was returned to the city, town or county in which they are located. An additional $1,106,425, constituting the other 1-3rd of the license fees, was turned into the state school tuition fund used for payment of school teacher salaries.

During the fiscal year the Commission collected $17,862,251 in taxes and fees levied on alcoholic beverages, a sum equal to a 27-cent levy if raised by property taxes. In addition to the distributions made to the cities and towns and the tuition fund $6,369,139 went into the postwar construction fund for the construction and rehabilitation of public institutions, approximately $3,703,326 remained in the state general fund, and $898,543 was earmarked for the administration and enforcement of the alcoholic beverage laws.

The joint distributions made by the commission and the auditor of state in DeKalb County were as follows:

St. Joe—commission, none; auditor $607.24; total $607.24.

Altona — commission, none; auditor $436.08; total $436.08.

Auburn—commission $4,383.35; auditor $7,452.75; total $11,836.10.

GOD MADE US LAST

Lesson for April 28, 1957

The readers of this column will not all read Genesis in the same way. Some will take it pretty literally, others will read the early chapters in it as picture-stories, parables in half poetic form. All readers, it is hoped, can agree on one point: that whether we take these stories literally or as parables, the meaning is the same in any case. We do not have to go grubbing in obscure corners for the meanings and messages of Genesis. The book was not written for people with complicated minds. The meanings it conveys are on the surface, or so near it that the simplest readers can see them.

The Earth Is Man's Home

From the second story of creation which we find in Genesis, in chapter 2, the story which concentrates on man himself, we can select some outstanding impressions which the story makes, and no doubt was intended to make. First of all, this earth is the home of man. That is its principal use. Man came late to the planet; God made us last. We did not make our appearance here till all was ready for us. Some thinkers have thought of man as a sort of homeless creature, dropped into this earth almost by accident, fitting in nowhere. Quite the contrary; man might be lonely and restless on some far galaxy, but not on this green earth. Man, furthermore, being at the top of the ladder of creation, is master of this planet. This does not mean he is master of the universe. It may be discovered some day, as the science-fiction boys have already suggested, that men may some day find themselves on another planet, but as intruders, only to be thrown out or destroyed. But on this earth man has a right to live, and to achieve mastery. In Genesis 1 (where the horizon is wider than in Gen. 2) man is told: replenish the earth and subdue it. Man, in short, is to work together with God in bringing order and completeness to the planet which is his rightful home.

Top of Creation

Let us pursue that thought about the top of creation a little further. This story in Genesis presents man as made from dust, and all other living things, both plants and beast and birds, are likewise sprung from the dust by the power of God. Man has a kind of kinship with all of life, and therefore, as Albert Schweitzer has said, must have a reverence for life. Man cannot give life to himself nor to any other creature; and should be very slow about taking life of any sort. Nevertheless, it is much nearer the truth to say that the creation is made for man, than that man is made for the rest of creation. Not that God intends everything in the world to be used. It is an interesting point that the trees of Eden are not all good for food; some of them are simply beautiful to see. The beauty of the world, sometimes its useless beauty (like a sunset) is for man alone, just as its usefulness—sometimes its unbeautiful usefulness—is appreciated best by man alone. Only man can heat the arctic and cool the tropics; only man can bring his foods from the ends of the earth.

"One Man Is No Man"

The Greeks had a slogan: One man is no man, meaning that we each need the help and companionship of others to live at all, as human beings. The story of the first man as told in Genesis illustrates this in a moving way. God sees that this man is incomplete, though he is set in the midst of great beauty and has work to occupy mind and hands. So God produces all the other animals; but man can only talk about them, not with them. So at last another human being is made. Before, there was only a man alone; now there is a human race. This is not science, not intended to be; but it is a profound truth. Man is made for community. Without it, sinks to the brutes' level. In community a man becomes human. And yet if the only companionship man finds is human, he has still missed his destiny. For man was made for fellowship, above all, with God. Only as friend of God can man become what God intended him to be.

"Golly, Mister, DOES THAT BIG THING REALLY HELP MOM DO THE DISHES?"

"Yes, it does—and it also helps her dry clothes and bake pies. In fact, all the things that use electricity in every home, store and factory around here depend on these circuit breakers.

"It used to be that when lightning struck a high-voltage transmission line, it would cause a short circuit and your electric service might have been off for hours. When lightning strikes a line today, these circuit breakers are designed to take care of the trouble fast by turning the electric power off and on again in only a fraction of a second. You usually can tell when that happens, because your lights give a little blink!

"Years of research went into the development of circuit breakers—and related equipment—and today their operation has nearly reached perfection. But the important thing is that they help us give everyone better service."

TORNADO WARNING in time can spell the difference between heavy loss of life and light casualties when the twisters sweep into populated areas. Under the experimental Weather Bureau program for tornado tracking by radar and telephoned visual reports, adequate warning could be broadcast so that local civil defense, police and firemen could evacuate residents or advise them to seek cover in basements. This drawing shows how such a warning station at Lincoln, Neb., might alert the inhabitants of Dorchester, Neb., in the expected path of a twister. The twin funnels are an unusual phenomenon—most tornadoes occur singly. (Courtesy A. Leydenfrost)

Time of the Twister

Springtime is tornado time.

In the unstable transition from winter cold to summer heat, great masses of cold and warm air collide. When the heavier cold air is forced above the lighter warm air, funnels sometimes form to relieve the topsy-turvy situation. This is the twister.

SOME 800 TORNADOES boil up each year in the United States. When they strike, local civil defense and the Red Cross speed to the rescue.

Spring is the time for a special weather eye to the tornado-spawning southwest. Last year, for instance, every major tornado occurred between February and May. On one day—April 3—four giant twisters killed 30 persons, injured 415 and caused an estimated $12,760,000 damage.

There is no way to prevent a tornado. But early warning, proper precautions and speedy rescue of victims can save lives. In addition, disaster funds administered by the Federal Civil Defense Administration can provide emergency repairs and restoration of vital community facilities when Federal assistance is authorized by the President to augment State and local efforts.

BIRTH OF A TORNADO occurs when a cold and a warm air mass collide, and the heavier cold air is deflected above the lighter warm air. In this topsy-turvy situation, a tongue of cold air dips into the warm air, which in turn moves upward to fill the void thus created. As the warm air rushes upward in a spiral motion, other warm air is sucked upward from lower levels, until the ground is reached. The funnel is made visible by condensing moist air, dirt and debris. As the twister leaves its trail, Red Cross, civil defense and other public services rush in to care for victims, while the Federal Civil Defense Administration stands ready with financial aid to assist in temporary repair of devastated public facilities in a major disaster. (Courtesy A. Leydenfrost and the New York Times Magazine)

What To Do In a Tornado

- People in open country can view the approach of a tornado and move at right angles to its path. If there is no time to escape, lie flat in the nearest depression, such as a ditch or ravine.
- In towns or cities, seek shelter inside, preferably in a substantial building. Stay away from windows.
- The southwest corner of the basement of a frame house is safer than in a brick or stone house. If there is no basement, lie down on the first floor under a table or bed (preferably in the southwest corner).
- Urban schools: Stay inside, away from windows; remain near an inside wall on a lower floor. Avoid auditoriums and gymnasiums.
- Rural schools of frame construction: Teachers should remove children to a ravine or ditch if storm shelter is not available.

TYPICAL TORNADO funnel sweeps across the plains near Manhattan, Kan., located in the worst tornado belt in the world, according to Weather Bureau records. Twisters such as this have figured prominently in the total of 75 major natural disasters in which the Federal Civil Defense Administration has directed relief since FCDA got the job of coordinating Federal assistance in January 1953. (U. S. Weather Photo by H. E. Dale)

ERRATIC TRAIL left by the twister which hit Flint, Mich., on May 12, 1956 is typical of tornadoes as the funnel weaves and bobs over the landscape, generally in a southwest to northeast direction. Civil defense rescue squads, trained to dig persons out of bombed-out buildings in wartime, find their training equally useful in this type of disaster. (Flint Journal Photo by Russ Scott)

No. 1 Most property damage $10,500,000

Worst day—April 3, with 30 dead, 415 injured, $13,760,000 damage

MAJOR TORNADOES of 1956, as compiled from preliminary Weather Bureau data, clearly point to Spring as a time for special watchfulness by residents of the central United States—the world's most dangerous tornado area. Civil defense units are on special call throughout this vast region for possible rescue work. In addition, if a tornado-hit locality is declared a major disaster area by the President, as happened in Numbers 1, 3, 6, and 10 above, the Federal Civil Defense Administration can provide funds to aid communities in temporary repair of public facilities. Tax Reduction Doesn't Mean Tax Reduction

Walter T. Horn, executive secretary of the Indiana Taxpayers Association, explained recently that the reduction of 14 cents in the state property tax levy - authorized by the recent session of the Indiana General Assembly - will bring no immediate relief.

"Theoretically," said Mr. Horn, "this disposition to take the state out of the property taxing field should mean a possible cut of 14 cents in every governmental unit's budget for next year. Actually, there will be no tax relief until 1959, when a cut of 7 cents comes in the teachers' pension fund. The other cut of 7 cents in the school tuition fund does not become effective until 1960.

"When the state gets out of the property tax field, with the exception of a 1 cent levy which remains, the action will not mean an actual reduction in the expenditures for which the 14-cent levy was made. This money will be taken from the general fund in the future and the general fund is made up from money the public provides."

Mr. Horn pointed out that 208 House bills and 153 Senate bills became laws, a total of 361 new statutes. Only 9 of these tended to reduce the cost of government while 115 of them will make governmental costs higher.

"Citizens who work for wages will pay more gross income tax in the future," said Mr. Horn. "Their increase of 50 per cent will apply to the last half of 1957, which will be withheld by their employers. The public also is now paying 2 cents more for each gallon of gasoline and a similar increase was authorized for each gallon of diesel fuel. With an all-time high budget of approximately $791,000,000 authorized for the next two years, additional expenditures for highways will increase spending for the biennium to nearly one billion dollars.

"Government is beset by the inflationary spiral that means a constant demand for more money. This trend positively will mean another increase in property taxes payable in 1958 unless the taxpayers become a great deal more active this year than they have been in the past. Before many months pass the budgets for next year will be prepared and the expenditures they call for will determine the property tax levies in each unit. It is none too early for the taxpayers to begin thinking in terms of their best interests. They must present a solid front against greatly increased governmental expenditures if the line is to be held."

Around the Town

With the Editor

Sure signs that spring IS here: Casey's annual crewcut, acquired last week.

That Model T Ford that Don Keller has had sitting on his lot intrigued me, so I stopped in to see what the story was. The story is — two hundred and twenty-five dollars. The longer you keep your car the more it's worth.

We had a short discussion then about antique cars and Don mentioned another Model T which had an asking price of around six hundred dollars. The Model T conversation brought back memories for Lehr Wilder, who was also in on the discussion about old autos. He recalled experiences in his youth with Old Dobbin's jealousy getting the best of him resulting in a horse-and-buggy and auto race.

Did you notice the comet in the northwest sky Tuesday night around 9 p.m.?

Ordinarily someone's shouting "They're here! They're here!" would seem to indicate a cause for joy. But not now, not now.

They're here! They're here!

— The mosquitoes.

The Bishops had a busy time last week. Tommy had a birthday party and Bruce was found by Don Yeiser enjoying a liesurely resting period — on the railroad tracks!

—Can't get in Merwin Place's weekly poem, and Gertrude Borthwick penned her ideas on the Editor's resolutions—both of which will have to wait 'til next week.

RESOURCEFUL GOD

Lesson for May 5, 1957

The Bible has a plot, take it as a whole, as much as any thriller you ever read. In fact the Bible is more thrilling, because it directly concerns each one of the human race. It is the story of age-long conflict between Good and Evil, portrayed as a personal conflict between God and Satan, a struggle for the control of the earth and of man. The story begins in a sunny, hopeful way. God makes a world, an unfinished world but nevertheless beautiful, and he calls into existence Man and Woman, to live on this earth, to beautify and complete it further. They are to be God's friends and fellow-workers. But before the readers quite knows how it happens, the Serpent appears on the scene and persuades man that God is not his friend but his enemy. So the man rebels against his Maker, is faithless to his divine Friend. Philosophers and theologians have other ways of telling it; but from the simple picture-stories of Genesis shines the same double truth and tragedy: Man is made for fellowship with God and other human beings, but he has broken the fellowship, he has turned against his truest Friend.

God Planning

Mysteries darken our knowledge here. But of some things we can be sure. One is that God does not deal with his world and his creatures haphazard. He is a planning God. Another thing that seems clear is that man has freedom to obey God or to disobey; to fit in with the Plan or to reject it and the Planner. God could, no doubt, have made a race of beings who could not possibly do anything but right, a race of perfect robots; but for some reason God chose to make man free. One suspects that the reason is that God would rather be loved by persons who would love him freely than to be loved by creatures "wound up", so to speak—bound to love him whether or not. (Would that be real love?) Another thing that stands out is that God is resourceful; in one sense his Plan can be broken, when men go contrary to his will. In another sense men do not break his Plan, for God appears in Genesis like a wise general who has more than one plan of strategy—all pointing to victory.

God Rejected

Man is not free unless he is free to do wrong as well as to do right. And if he is free to do wrong, which is a short way of saying free to go against the will and plan of God, then he is free to destroy himself. For the Plan of God for man, born as it is infinite Wisdom and infinite Love, is always for man's best. For man to resist God, to ignore him, scorn him, live by man-made plans, is to choose the way of death. Genesis shows dramatically how the sin of man grows worse as a snowball grows larger—the farther it goes the more rapidly it grows. Adam's sin seemed a rather slight thing—then his son is a murderer, and his descendants so bad that God could scarcely find one good family among them. The story in Genesis is the story of mankind; men prefer their own way to God's way—the way of hate and conflict rather than the way of fellowship and love; and they suffer the judgment of God; namely that those who take their own way must accept the inevitable disaster.

God Undefeated

Many religions know of just and righteous gods who have been rejected by wicked or careless or ignorant men. But the God revealed in the Bible does not act as the "gods of the gentiles" are said to act. For man's sin other gods may have resentment, vengeance, punishment. But these things leave man as he was, an enemy—a conquered enemy perhaps but with rebellion still smoldering in his soul. Other religions provide elaborate methods by which men may pay for their sins—going long pilgrimages, undergoing self-imposed tortures. But the true God is quite different from the gods whom men imagine— a god undefeated, infinitely resourceful. He never gives up his Plan for a people in fellowship with him. Men are changed, saved, made fit to be God's friends, only by steadfast undiscouraged love.

THIRD PARTY FORMED

Opening a vigorous, broadside attack on old political parties, a new, permanent and independent national oolitical movement was activated at Richmond, Virginia, recently around forces which supported T. Coleman Andrews for President of the United States and Thomas H. Werdel for Vice President in 1956.

Pledged to restore and preserve all Constitutional rights for States and the people, the new movement designated itself the Interim Committee for Independent Political Action. Its members condemned both major existing political parties as "in reality but one, left-wing party determined to establish an all-powerful central government in Washington." They announced the Interim Committee program in a basic Declaration of Principles:

" We intend to create a living, vigorous movement to which all those Americans now robbed of political haven - Republicans, Democrats and others - can repair. If in its growing strength this movement should ultimately become a new political party, so be it."

The Interim Committee leaders - members of the Executive Committee of the National Committee backing Andrews and Werdel in the presidential campaign last fall - pledged immediate state-by-state organization. They announced that candidates for President and Vice President will be nominated in 1960, and candidates for Congress who will fight to restore and preserve Constitutional rights will be actively supported.

Members of the Executive Committee who created the new movement and adopted its Declaration of Principles, were the following.

The co-chairmen of the Andrews-Werdel National Committee, Clarence E. Manion of South Bend, Ind., former dean of the Notre Dame Law School and John U. Barr, New Orleans industrialist; former governor Charles E. Edison of New Jersey; George S. Montgomery, Jr., a New York attorney; and Morgan W. Strother, a Richmond business executive.

Dean Manion was elected chairman of the Interim Committee and Mr. Andrews, the Independents' 1958 standard bearer, was made an ex-officio non-voting member and designated as official spokesman. The committee voted to open an Information Office in Washington, D.C., and will launch a national campaign for funds. Overall objectives were laid down broadly in the Declaration of Principles.

Around the Town

With the Editor

It really isn't funny — but it's kinda funny to see people trying to engage in conversation with one another on the street and the flailing of arms and hands that goes along with it, as the mosquitoes become quite a handicap in our social life.

We've got a big crop, but Fred Stemen says they've got bigger mosquitoes down at Spencerville than we have here in St. Joe.

They may be bigger—but I think ours are stronger.

How many folks would be willing to chip into a kitty to purchase one of those foggers for this community—St. Joe and Spencerville? You might give your opinion to Babe Coburn who is sort of an unofficial official head of the Mosquito Department.

Seems like a good idea on the face of it to have a machine ready for use when the conditions are right. A run here and a run down there and we'd be all set.

What do you think?

One boy is sent by each of the clubs in the county.

Time is running short for registering for the camp and interested boys should contact Mr. Haver by Thursday, May 16.

Resident Seeks 'OK' For Tavern

An application for a beer and wine serving and carry-out license is currently being circulated in St. Joe by Harry Loucks who seeks to open a tavern on his property located at the east edge of St. Joe. If the application is approved, the new business will be a climax to the long-sought for tavern in this community. Charles McIntosh a few years ago unsuccessfully applied for a tavern and carry-out license and finally, after months of legal proceedings, was refused a license due to proximity to church property.

Mr. Loucks at present operates an auto parts salvage yard on the proposed tavern premises. He plans to improve the building accordingly if his application is approved. Five signatures of local residents are required in filing the application.

A hearing will be held at some future date when the county liquor board and a representative of the state alcoholic beverage commission hand down their decision.

SERVICES HELD FOR MILDRED SHULL

The deceased was a native of Allen County and was born August 19, 1873, the daughter of the late Benjamin Hamilton and Catherine Houk Hamilton. She was married near St. Joe on August 23, 1899, to Mr. Shull. For the past 40 years, the couple resided west of St. Joe. Last August they observed their 57th wedding anniversary.

May 18 Is 'Clean-Up' Day

Saturday, May 18, has been designated clean-up day for St. Joe by the local town board.

At the board's regular monthly meeting held Monday evening, the date was selected for making a concentrated effort to improve town property, through the cooperation of local homemakers and businessmen, by cleaning up of trash from yards and homes, tidying up where needed and generally making for a better appearance of homes and business establishments. The board has announced that it will provide a truck all day during clean-up day to pick up whatever accumulation St. Joe property owners and residents may have. Such trash should be placed at the street in front of the homes or businesses for hauling away on the truck.

If the one day is not sufficient to accomplish a complete job, the following Saturday will be utilized to put the finishing touches to the job.

St. Joe businessmen indicated their desire at the meeting to support an anticipated program of street improvement in the town. Specifically sought is the paving of the right-of-way along the main street (state road 1) and the erection of uniform curbing. Discussion was held concerning the formation of an organization to promote such a program and the possibility of re-activating the Booster Club which was instrumental in obtaining installation of the water system some ten years ago.

Further investigation is planned both by the board and those individuals who attended Monday's meeting with the request made that townspeople desiring improvement programs be present at the next regular meeting of the town board on Monday, June 3.

Bridge Fire Doused In Time

Vandals were blamed Wednesday for a fire that threatened for a time to destroy one of DeKalb County's landmarks — the Spencerville covered bridge. The sheriff's department reported that vandals evidently placed a pot flare in the center of the old structure yhich spans the St. Joe River just east of Spencerville.

At 6 a.m. a motorist entered the bridge to find the floor burning. The unidentified driver asked a passenger in the car to summon the Spencerville fire department while he carried water in a grease pail from the river below to throw on the flames.

The fire was quickly extinguished by Spencerville firemen. The blaze had burned a hole approximately 2 feet in length and a foot wide through both the top and subflooring.

The fire had apparently started when a motorist knocked over the pot flare permitting the flames to reach the tinder-dry timbers. Discovery of the fire a few minutes later would have been disastrous.

It was reported that motorists had seen the pot flare in the bridge earlier Wednesday morning but apparently believed it had been placed there by the highway department.

The damage was repaired Wednesday and the bridge is open to traffic.

Only four covered bridges remain standing in the county. They are the one at Spencerville, Dilts Bridge between St. Joe and Spencerville, Houlton Bridge east of Hamilton and Cedar Chapel Bridge southwest of Auburn.

Brass Tacks - 5th In A Series

There are always words, phrases, quotations which are associated with an era in history, and one among the few outstanding words associated today with the thoughts of the average person in this country is "rights." Seldom is there a news event relative to social problems, reported by our various means of news dispensation, which does not have some reference to someone's "right" to one thing or another. Indiana is now numbered among the states which have a so-called "right to work" law. It is intended to protect the individual in his seeking out employment and keeping his job by preventing the powers that be from compelling him to belong to some organization as a condition of employment.

Our thinking about "rights" isn't confined, however, only to the matter of employment. We think also in terms of a person's right to better things in life. It might even be such thinking which pushes forward the system of credit buying in this country today, the system which finds the average American family obligating itself for years into the future for things they would like to have. In some cases perhaps this credit buying can be an indication of one's confidence in the future, in one's belief that the economic pattern is a healthy one and that there is little risk involved in placing a heavy combination of debts over the family income over a period of months to years. More often, it seems, this buying is just the result of a general feeling of having a "right" to enjoy such-and-such an item, that it isn't unreasonable to to go ahead and get whatever it is you want because this is a prosperous country and a free country and you have a "right" to have the things you want.

The "right" thinking is given a boost also occasionally from quarters other than the individual. A recent public information release put out by the U. S. government concerning Social Security benefits with respect to disability payments made reference to the fact that those who were qualified to apply for such disability payments should make prompt reports of their disability or they would find they had lost their "rights" to the payments. It seemed somewhat significant that the word "rights" was used rather than the word "eligibility" in describing the conditions under which such benefits are available.

Certainly there are times when a person can make reference to his "rights" as a citizen. But care must be taken not to confuse "rights" with privileges. An undercurrent and unjustified feeling about "rights" today comes in connection with our standing in the world as citizens of the United States. Our freedom, we say, is based upon certain "rights", which means essentially that no one has the authority to interfere with our normal and honest activity. But it takes more than just "rights" to keep freedom. In fact, we don't have freedom because of our "rights", we have "rights" because of our freedom. And freedom has a price.

In a Christian nation, the belief in freedom as the gift from God is basic. But freedom, and the "rights" which go with it, is not something which a Christian can merely sit back and expect to enjoy without some diligent effort on his part to deserve and preserve it. Sometimes it appears we are more concerned with having something given to us than we are with being thankful for what we have. Some people shirk their responsibilities as citizens in a free nation because they feel they have a "right" to expect all of the good things which this country can give them just because they have been born in the physical confines of the United States or are offspring of citizens of this country. There isn't any feeling of obligation to duties as a citizen, there isn't apparently any appreciation of the fact that what Americans have today is the result of sacrifices, of hard work, of following ideals, rather than the result of "rights". In a God-blessed atmosphere, there is little room for mortal beings' concern for "rights" because in such an atmosphere the only proper concern is that of being "right" with the Creator.

One of the reasons why Americans face such huge tax bills resulting from huge budgets which include huge appropriations for so-called welfare programs is this undercurrent feeling of a "right" to something. Whenever we say "something ought to be done" in conection with governmental activities, we are increasing our tax bill. There are, to be sure, many programs which would appear to be of beneficial nature, materially speaking, for all of us. We want security, we want to never suffer from want, we desire to set up a perfect system of life revolving around having no worries about what might happen. Because God created us free, we have a "right" to expect these things, we say. What is often forgotten is that in this thing called freedom, there are obligations to fulfill. Freedom in a nation lasts only so long as the citizens exercise proper concern for the quality of leadership they select, concern for respecting the likes and dislikes of their fellow men, and concern for respecting the will of God.

Lonely Senator?

The death of Senator Joseph McCarthy last week has brought forth many comments. One thought which appears most in those comments and the thought which apparently brings no argument is that he was one of this generations most controversial figures. And from his experiences, we would hazard a guess that he was one of this generation's most lonely persons.

The late Senator's way of doing things was distasteful to many, and certainly if he did those things purposely to be unfair, he deserved criticism. But he also was not one to choose smooth, consoling, non-offensive words when he felt facts should be presented in plain black and white. And though there were those who took issue with the way he said certain things, it often was the case that they agreed with the reason why he made such utterances. But there was little outward show of it. How many of his colleagues in the Senate stood with him when he was subject to criticism of his plain-language disclosures? How many John Q. Publics did you hear positively stating their support of him? Yet when it came to a final analysis opinion, how many persons said something like "McCarthy may not be too nice about the things he says, but by golly I think he's right."

In time public opinion will show how many friends a public servant has and certainly it was an indication of numerous friends that was shown by Senator McCarthy's election to the Senate. But it probably would have been re-assuring to have had some public support in those instances when the Senator felt it necessary to raise a warning voice or present a critical view. As it was he became somewhat of a solitary figure, alone because he did not sympathize with the less startling ways of his colleagues. He chose his way and he stuck to it.

"McCarthy may not be too nice about the things he says, but by golly I think he's right."

RESOLUTIONS! PHOOEY!

Most resolutions I have found,
Just give your neck a pain,
It's well that they are "carried out",
But dumped down in a drain.

So, Ted our "Ed", he made one, huh?
To get the News out early,
And up he got at break of dawn
While grass with dew was pearly.

It's nice to get the News on time,
If it don't get Ted dizzy,
We'll read the paper when it comes
And not get in a "tizzy".

Life goes to fast, we rush about
In chaos and confusion,
No time to finish what we start,
Nor reach the grand conclusion.

No time to watch the rose in bloom -
We plod with downcast eyes,
No time to watch the rainbows shine,
Nor a sunset flame the skies.

So when we get the little News,
Some late, but not too long,
Let's think that Ted was listening to
A thrush or robin's song.

Let's think he slowed along the road,
To see a full blown tree -
Let's think he watched an oriole
And heard her melody.

Life CAN be hum-drum, may be we
Would have good cause to gripe
If Spring's out doors, and we're inside,
Just setting black old type!

Of course we know he's "big and stout",
And also tall and handsome,
But take your resolutions, Ted,
And throw them out the transom!

—Gertrude Borthwick

BEST WISHES TO THE GRADUATES

The Class of Fifty-Seven will graduate next week,
And go out in the world each his job to seek.
We sure hope that each one succeeds
In getting a job to meet his needs.
We hope that your work will be a pleasure,
And bring you happiness beyond measure.
If you take Christ with you, as you go on your way,
He will lighten your burdens day after day.
May God's richest blessings be with each one,
Until your last day's work is done.

—Merwin Place, in behalf of Riverdale community.

ARE WE OR AIN'T WE

The United States is in bad shape, worse off in some respects than any country in the world.

No other country is suffering political and economic problems because of a surplus of food. In no other country do so many people own so many automobiles. In no other country do the people make so much money and in no other country is help so hard to find and harder to keep. In no other country do people take so many holidays or work so few hours in order that they may have time to spend the money that keeps piling up on them.

In no other country is obesity, caused by high living and plenty of everything, one of the chief medical problems.

—Burrows Briefs.

A DISTURBING REPORT

One of the important lessons yet to be learned by many of our citizens is that the great foundation principles and ideals underlying America's unparalleled progress will die - no matter how right and advantageous they may be — unless they are carefully nurtured and taught to each oncoming generation of citizens. The most dramatic confirmation of this fact is the story of what happened to most of the 7,000 American prisoners of war held three years in Communist prison camps in North Korea.

Under relentless, cunningly-handled Communist "brain-washing", most of the 7,000 American prisoners responded in varying degrees to the wishes of their Red captors. The United States Army says they behaved like no other group of Americans had behaved since the founding of our Republic. The failure to hold fast American principles and ideals by a majority of the Americans held prisoners, and their lack of understanding of and respect for basic elements in our American economic and governmental system, deeply disturbed America's military leaders.

It should likewise disturb America's entire citizenry — every adult man and woman. Because the fault lies not with the 7,000 American prisoners but with all of us — with We the People of America. We simply have not been fulfilling the responsibilities of citizenship in a free country. Most important, we haven't been teaching our youth - in the homes and churches and schools - a proper understanding of and respect for the great values, the great truths of life, and the basic principles upon which our nation was founded. Therefore, our professional and civilian soldiers - representing a cross section of our population - are found to be vulnerable to brain-washing.

Major William E. Mayer, the U.S. Army's top authority on Communist brain-washing, came to the National Education Program's 18th Freedom Forum to report on the results of the Army's comprehensive study of the behavior of the 7,000 American prisoners in Korea. Carefully and clearly he described the Communist brain-washing technique for rendering the Americans docile and cooperative. It is something that every American should hear or read. His Freedom Forum address is available at our printing cost - 15 cents per copy. Write the National Education Program, Searcy, Arkansas.

Major Mayer and his corps of psychiatrists in Japan interviewed hundreds of prisoners as they were released. "Case Histories" obtained on 1,000 were studied. Every phase of the three years Communist imprisonment was clearly illuminated, details of events were reconstructed and samples of all of the written "educational" materials used by the young Chinese Communist instructors - educated in American universities - were obtained.

"What we found in use on the prisoners," Major Mayer said, "was a system of indoctrination, of education realy, which was of the very highest order of excellence from the standpoint of the method used and the standpoint of the stewardship shown in the application of this education. It was very much like .... what God said to Moses: they taught them as they woke up and they taught them as they went to bed and they taught them on the way, every day, seven days a week. And with a great deal of evident sincerity.

"It was a procedure, however, which differed from most of our preconceived ideas about the nature of education in that they made an attempt to employ systematically and deliberately a number of perfectly sound and familiar and tested principles of psychology and psychiatry, the same ones we use in the treatment of patients. They used these backwards by our standards .... in an attempt to devalue certain very fundamental values which we hold to be self-evident and important in our kind of social and economic system.

"And they used them to interfere with the basic human relationships without which we would have no commercial credit, without which we would have no free enterprise, no healthy competition; and they did this with a remarkable degree of success."

With their unending "education" process, the Communists succeeded in undermining faith in values, destroyed trust and loyalty between individual prisoners. They halted normal individual and group resistance. Not a single American prisoner engineered an escape from a Communist POW camp!

Storers To End Postal Careers In June

M. E. Storer, postmaster of the St. Joe Post Office, announced last week that he has made application for retirement from the United States Postal Service. The retirement will be effective June 30, 1957.

Mr. Storer took over duties in the local office on January 16, 1934. His service for the following 23½ years gives him the distinction of having the longest period of service of all postmasters in the local office since its establishment. He succeeded A. M. Baker who served as postmaster until 1934.

Also effective on the same date will be the retirement of Mrs. Storer who has been post office clerk for the past 18 years.

An appointment of temporary postmaster, effective July 1, 1957, will be made in the near future after which a competitive examination will be given to determine the new permanent postmaster.

CARS GET SAFETY CHECK

The program of motor vehicle safety inspection is now in progress in the state of Indiana with the Indiana Association of Chiefs of Police, Indiana Sheriffs' Association, Indiana state Police and the Auto Dealers' Association of Indiana co-operaaing with the Indiana Office of Traffic Safety.

10 points are checked in the program, front and rear lights, tires, brakes, steering, exhaust assembly, glass, wipers, mirror and horn. In 1956, 681,000 vehicles were checked and 1 out of every 7 was found to have defects in one or more of the above points. The goal in 1957 is 1 million cars.

A safety check lane was set up in St. Joe last Friday evening by the sheriff's department. 65 cars were checked and 5 were found to have defects.

This official 1957 Indiana sticker will be affixed to the windshield of every car inspected during the annual statewide Vehicle Safety-Check Program. Local authorities and traffic safety officials are appealing to all car owners to visit their nearest safety-check lane for a free 10-point inspection before the end of May in preparation for vacation and summer month driving.

Former Local Pastor Serves At Convention

Rev. Frank Stevenson, former pastor of the local Lutheran parish and now pastor of Holy Trinity Lutheran Church at Muncie, will serve as secretary pro-tem of the annual convention of the Indiana Synod, United Lutheran Church of America. The convention will be held Monday through Wednesday, May 13-15, at Auburn. St. Mark's Lutheran Church of Auburn is host church for the convention under the leadership of Dr. Allan Hauck, pastor of that church.

Rev. Stevenson served the local parish when it was composed of 3 churches, those in St. Joe, Spencerville and Butler. He answered a call to Muncie in 1948 after 10 years of service in this community.

The synod will discuss many proposals during the convention, including the elimination of synodical conferences and the adoption of a budget of almost $400,000.00. This budget represents the effort of the Indiana Synod to participate during 1958 in double apportionment for the ULCA, in order to enable the ULCA to carry on a more progressive program of home missions.

Highlight of the convention will be the Fellowship Banquet at 6:15 p.m. Tuesday, May 14, at the Auburn Presbyterian Church. Dr. Edwin Moll, Lutheran World Action Director for the Middle East, will be the speaker. His address will be of timely interest due to his experience in work in Palestine and with distressed Arab refugees. The Middlesingers, A Cappella Sacred Choir from Middlebury, Indiana, will present choral selections.

Mr. Ralph Sechler of St. Joe is the delegate to the convention, representing the local parish. Mr. Clifford Billow is serving as alternate. St. Mark's of St. Joe will be represented at the Fellowship Banquet by 14 members of the congregation.

Boy Scouts Have Charter Review

Members of the St. Joe Boy Scout Troop, parents and Scout leaders held a charter review Tuesday evening in the basement of St. Mark's Lutheran Church.

The evening's program began with a pot luck supper at 6:00 p.m. under the supervision of Mrs. Francis Sible, Mrs. Robert Musser and Mrs. Hearsel Shockley. Before the supper was served, Scoutmaster Frank Sechler called the troop to order for the pledge to the flag and Frank Kessler led the prayer.

Following the supper Bud Shockley introduced Mr. Sechler who welcomed the parents and other guests. Joe Smith, neighborhood commissioner, then introduced Howard Hill, district representative of the Anthony Wayne Council, BSA, who presented the charter for the coming year to Robert Musser. Mr. Smith presented troop awards given for having all Scouts receiving Boys Life magazine and for timely registration with the area office. Mr. Sechler received a Scoutmaster award for having attained the goal set up for the troop for the past year of scouting.

Mr. Musser, who serves as troop advancement chairman, then called forward the boys who earned recognition in activities as Boy Scouts. Tenderfoot badges were awarded to Larry Mason and Allen Amstutz. Advancement to the rank of First Class Scout was awarded to Bill Hablawetz and Gary Sible.

Mr. Sechler commented briefly on the importance of co-operation between the Scouting program and the home with the Scoutmaster needing the assistance of the parents to make Scouting a meaningful part of a boy's life.

The closing ceremony and Scout oath ended the meeting.

There were approximately 45 present for the charter review and supper.

We found this article on behavior that we thought was worth passing on to you:

Be interested—do not try to be interesting.

Be pleasing—don't expect to be pleased.

Be entertaining—don't wait to be entertained.

Be lovable—don't wait to be loved.

Be helpful—don't ask to be helped.

When we read that, we thought of something we had wanted to do for quite a long time.

Near the rear of our uptown store is a table with 4 chairs around it, sort of a conference table. When we want to rest from our hard labors (who snickered) we gather around for a little gab fest, sort of a coffee break, you know.

Well, here's what we had in mind. Most of the day that table is not used. Frequently you folks are in town and need a place to write a note, visit with a friend, figure out why your balance doesn't square with the bank's balance, meditate (not much chance for that tho' with all the customers around), or just to relax, please feel free to use our table, chairs, rest rooms, water cooler or other facilities at any time.

Procrastination is the thief of time and so is every other big word.

SEEDLINGS DELIVERED FOR WILDLIFE AREAS

The Indiana Department of Conservation, through the Wildlife Habitat Restoration Program, has just completed delivery of over 900,000 seedlings to 581 farmers who have in the last 18 months leased small tracts of their land to the Division of Fish and Game to help provide better homes and food for our wildlife.

There will be broadcast and planted on these areas over 4 tons of Early Amber Sorghum, Millet, Korean Lespedeza, Sericea Lespedeza and Sweet Clover to provide food, nesting sites, travel lanes and escape cover for Indiana's game birds and small animals.

Mr. James Hughes of the Wildlife Habitat Restoration program says that up to now 2,825 farmers have leased over 18,000 acres of their land to be set aside for a period of 10 years to help increase the carrying capacity of wildlife on their farms.

Many areas being turned over to this program are newly constructed farm ponds; small ponds make ideal wildlife areas. The Department will furnish free all trees, vines, shrubs, grain and seeds to properly develop the areas.

There is no hunting or trespassing allowed on the areas and they are all posted with black and white 12"x18" metal signs to identify the boundaries of the areas. No pasturing or burning is permitted on the areas and where fence is needed to prevent grazing, in many cases the Department can pay the owner for the acquisition and construction of the fence.

"This restoration program is one of the answers in having increased number in wildlife," stated Kenneth Marlin, Director of the Indiana Department of Conservation. Landowners who would like more information on this program may write to the Indiana Department of Conservation, 311 West Washington Street, Indianapolis.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
International Uniform Sunday School Lessons
BY DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

Background Scripture: Genesis 12; 15—17; 22.

Devotional Reading: Psalm 105:1-15.

FRIEND OF GOD

Lesson for May 12, 1957

Counted a saint by three religions, Abraham is unique among the great men of the world. The Mohammedan name for him is simply "The Friend," meaning Friend of God. His greatness is not in anything that is especially admired and paid highly for in America, so that his reputation among us is not what he deserves. He was not a noted business man, executive, or popular novelist; no oil was ever discovered on his property. However, he might be introduced to an American audience as a successful cattleman. Even small boys might be interested to know that he was extra good as a deputy sheriff. But these facts were not the main point about him.

Faith That Works

The big fact about Abraham was his religious genius. To some persons God seems very dim. Even Abraham's father worshipped "other gods"—we have no idea how many. But Abraham, out of an idolatrous home, came forth a man for whom God was his closest and most real Friend. To use the Bible word, Abraham was a man of FAITH. In one book of the New Testament (Romans) Paul says that Abraham was "justified"—that is, God looked with approval on him—for his faith.

Belief

"Abraham believed God," it is said. No living man now knows how God spoke to Abraham. Long ago Saint Augustine debated, but did not decide, the question whether God spoke in tones that the ear could catch, or in a voice audible only in the soul. The point is that when Abraham knew it for God's direction, or God's promise, he believed that what God said was true. God made some pretty unlikely promises to him: that he would have a son at all was very unlikely; that this son's descendants would be more numerous than the stars was equally unlikely; that they would live in and own the countryside where Abraham was a landless nomad was still more improbable; but most incredible of all was that through Abraham's descendants the whole earth should be blessed. Yet we are told that Abraham believed all these things; and indeed they all came true.

Obedience

It is one thing to believe that what God says is true; it is another thing to set about living by that truth. Many a person will stand up for the proposition that the Bible is the inspired Word of God, but simply won't act and live in accordance with what the Bible plainly teaches. Such "faith" as James said is "vain" — Abraham's faith was not vain. He took God at his word; when God said "Go," he went, and he went all the way. "Whate'er my God ordains is right" is a song Abraham could well have sung.

Patience

Abraham's faith was shown also by his patience. Most of us are like small children, whose clocks show only two times, Now and NEVER. If Father has promised a ride, or Mother a lollipop, the child wants it right this minute. If it's not to be had, tears fall and wails arise. If I can't have it now, I'll never get it! So we pray and expect an answer as if it were by return mail. We can't trust God to time his blessings. Abraham knew better. He was willing to wait. Indeed some of the promises God made to him he never lived to see. But he did not think that God had cheated him.

Sacrifice

The story of Abraham's sacrifice (or near-sacrifice) of Isaac shows the endless lengths to which Abraham's faith would go. Psychologically and morally impossible for a sane American today, the act of child-sacrifice was not so impossible for Abraham, living as he did among people for whom human sacrifices were all too common. But it is impossible to exaggerate the meaning of this sacrifice to Abraham. It meant cutting off, so far as he could see, all the promises of God. Indeed, it may well have seemed to him that God had changed his mind and was taking back all he had promised for the future. All this added to the deep love Abraham had for this child of faith, the child for whom he had waited so many years, made the act seem especially terrible. But Abraham's faith went the last mile.

Electric generating unit operated above critical steam pressure, March, 1957

ALL THESE ACHIEVEMENTS
WERE THOUGHT IMPOSSIBLE ONLY A FEW YEARS AGO

A rocket zooming 250 miles into space; man flying faster than the speed of sound; a submarine that travels over 50,000 miles without refueling—all were thought impossible only a few years ago. So, too, was an electric generating unit that could operate above the critical steam pressure of 3206 pounds per square inch.

In March, 1957, at the American Gas and Electric System's Philo Plant in Ohio, a new electric generating unit operating at 4500 pounds not only became a reality but also the world's most efficient electric producer. Thus another big step was made by this company and the rest of the AGE System to continue giving the best possible electric service at the lowest possible cost to help you live better electrically.

Around the Town

With the Editor

No matter what may be one's manner of toiling in this world, we always like to hear something good about those labors once in a while.

So, it is gratifying to hear about, for instance, the enjoyment our servicemen get out of this paper. Mrs. Morr stopped in this week to give an item for this week's issue. She commented that son Sammy passes his News around to his buddies occasionally who, though they don't live in this territory, get a kick out of reading the hometown paper. And as a result of reading Sammy's and Lloyd Dixon's address in the paper, Jack Hart recently made a trip to see them on a short leave.

Esther's brother, Carl Hauke, was discharged just this week, and he said he had posted the short-timer's letter, sent in by Albert McMaken several weeks ago, at his base and the boys got a bang out of it.

Once again we repeat our "standing offer" to send The News free to any and all servicemen who want to receive it.

Mrs. Borthwick claims kinship to the Boy Scouts and I guess she deserves it for her good deed as a result of her poem.

Someone told her that he was getting "sore" at not getting the News when he wanted it and he had intended to stop taking it. Then he read Mrs. Borthwick's poem last week and he changed his mind! He'll wait for it now.

Two quotations come to mind—

"Never underestimate the power of a woman" —and

"The pen is mightier than the sword."

Cliff Ward had an appropriate column from his pen in Wednesday's News-Sentinel that yours truly fully appreciates. I think I'll borrow it for next week's paper.

Mothers and Fathers of the younger set probably have a mutual understanding of the unconscious psychological actions and remarks of their offspring which come at just the right time.

Did you have those days when the kids have been so unintentionally irritating, when they just seem to be making more noise than usual and it's more than you can stand. And just about the time you're ready to blow, they, or one of 'em, pull their angelic act or whatever it is and you are left hanging.

Monday night I was getting ready for Lions Club. As the razor called "timber" to the stubble on my face, it was evident that for Esther this had been "one of those days." She had called the boys once or twice, but they, concentrating on their indoor-cowboy adventures or the high finance of a game of Monopoly, had intentionally or otherwise chosen to take their own sweet time. As Mom then raised her voice quite audibly for what was obviously the last time before fur would fly, I decided to go into action myself to get their response. As I took those last couple of swipes down the side of my face—you know, I'll finish this side and then go after 'em—I could hear the galloping Phil make his appearance in the kitchen. Because Dad wouldn't be home for supper, the evening meal was going to be one of those quick convenient ones, sort of a snack menu, you might say. Well, as Phil came into the kitchen on the gallop, he stopped short and exclaimed,

"OH BOY!!! RAVIOLI!!!"

I looked into the mirror and said to the perplexed countenance therein, "Now how can you go in there and blow your stack after such an enthusiastic exclamation of appreciation, Hard Nose?"

Answer: Hard Nose couldn't.

May 18 Is 'Clean-Up' Day

The weatherman often holds the key to success for many a venture. Such is the case of the approaching weekend when a Clean-Up Day will be held in St. Joe, Saturday, May 18, has been designated Clean-Up Day by the local town board. Board members Derwood Ridgway, Lester Pugsley and Orville Coburn set up plans at the May board meeting for providing trucking facilities to haul trash and junk from in front of St. Joe homes as it is collected and placed there by residents.

The board has asked all townspeople to cooperate in the clean-up effort by gathering up useless articles and objects which may be lying about the home, business establishments and yards. Pick-ups of these accumulations will be made all day Saturday. If more time is needed, or if the weather should prove to be unsuitable, the clean-up will be extended to the following Saturday, May 25.

Bible Schools To Open Monday For 2 Weeks

With school coming to an end this week, there follows right on its heels the sessions of the annual Vacation Bible Schools of the various churches in the community.

Included in those reported ready for activity is that of the St. Joe Church of Christ. Donald Foust, pastor of the church, has announced that the theme will be "Jesus Calls." Every child, 3 years old and over, is invited to enjoy the creative activities and Bible lessons which are inspiring and unique under the above-mentioned theme.

All sessions and classes will be held at the house of worship beginning Monday, May 20, from 9 to 11:15 a.m. every week day. The closing program will be given on Friday evening, May 31.

Those needing transportation should notify Mrs. Loretta Musser, who is serving as co-director with Mr. Foust.

Teachers are Mrs. Markle, Mrs. Musser, Mrs. Noragon and Mrs. Shafer. Creative activity directors are Mrs. Taylor, Mrs. Foust, Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Yeiser and Mrs. Carr.

Mrs. Elizabeth Shull, director of St. Mark's Lutheran Vacation Bible School, has announced that daily classes will be held beginning Monday, May 20, from 9:00 to 11:00 a.m. The two-week school will be for children in nursery class in Sunday School through the 6th grade, including those entering 7th grade next fall. All children in these age groups are invited to attend.

Bible Stories For Three-Year Olds is the title of the nursery course. These stories, told in a manner to appeal to the youngest group, are made even more meaningful by enlisting the aid of the parents. The book includes figure dolls to be completed by the pupil and used during the course of the lesson. Beverly Mansfield, Barbara Bishop, Neva Hursh and Carol Baker are the teachers.

Tell Me a Bible Story is the title of the kindergarten course. Pupils will soon identify themselves with Bible people during the course of the ten lessons. Activities include the preparation of a big scrapbook. Each book includes ten worksheets of attractive projects. Marcia Sible and Cheryl Collins are the teachers.

A Bible Storybook is the title of the primary course. By means of "fly swatter puppets" and "play acting", primary children become Ruth, Queen Esther, David or a child who knew Peter. Daily use of a miniature comic book brings evangelism right into their daily life. Ruth Collins and Maxine Fry are the teachers.

Bible Stories That Help Us Live is the title of the Junior Course. Discussion, dramatization and activity material help pupils in this age group consider deeper meanings and application of Bible stories. Robert Stiver, Violet Kline, Esther Haberkorn and Billie Mason are the teachers.

A pot luck dinner will be held at the church on Friday, May 24, at 11:30 a.m. The closing program will be given Friday night, May 31, at 7:30 p.m.

Mrs. Lela Northrup is the Bible School pianist.

Rev. Carl Thompson has announced that the Newville E. U.B. Daily Vacation Bible School will begin also on May 20 and continue through May 31. Classes will be held from 8:30 to 11:00 a.m. five days a week, Monday through Friday.

Children living in the vicinity of the church are invited to enroll in the Bible School. Parents are urged to take advantage of this opportunity to have their children attend this Christian school of learning and fellowship for the two weeks.

Put Words Into Action

The mosquito population locally and elsewhere is having one of its "best" years. Weather conditions have been such that the insects have had an ideal oportunity to multiply. In the past several years, local men - and boys - have donated their time and labor to help apply oil and insect killing chemicals on the lowlands along the St. Joe River east of St. Joe. Additional time, labor and materials was donated a few years ago to build a spraying outfit to make the job of oil application an easier one. The result of using oil and chemical insect killer seemed to bear fruit as St. Joe has enjoyed more freedom from the harassing biters in the same recent years than was enjoyed before.

Another step taken to combat the invasion of our community by mosquitoes is the contracting for services of fogging equipment. Cost of such contracting has been paid for by public donations and now is paid for by appropriations each year in the town budget. Results of the fogging are dependent almost entirely upon the weather conditions at the time of fogging and following the fogging. There have been times when the atmosphere was ideal and the fog has hung low for many minutes along the town streets. A slight breeze is needed, just enough to spread the fog into and through the trees and shrubbery along the streets and in yards. However, there are times when conditions are not too good, when the breeze is a little too strong and the fog is dispersed to quickly, when there has been a rainfall just before the fogging, when the atmosphere causes the fog to rise rather than spread, when rain has fallen just after fogging. These times give little relief and the expense has been for naught. But when you have someone coming in from outside to do the job for you, it is necessary to contract for their services ahead of time and at their convenience. The Garrett Fire Department has been fogging St. Joe for the past two years on this basis.

These reasons are the background for pointing out the need of acquiring a fogging machine for the town. Many residents have indicated their willingness to donate to a fund solicited for the purpose of purchasing a fogging machine. The advantages are obvious - when the evening comes with suitable weather conditions, the machine goes to work. If weather conditions suddenly change, as they often do in a matter of minutes, the machine is through for the night and the only expense is for the materials used. The amount of money now appropriated for mosquito control would in a few years pay for one of the machines. The price is quoted of something around thirteen hundred dollars. If the machine were bought, the appropriation in the town budget would need to be only for the materials needed to operate the machine plus the materials used in operating the spraying outfit each spring.

Many homemakers have unscreened porches doing them little good when there are so many mosquitoes. Many townspeople have youngsters who want to play outside daily and who oftentimes are "eaten up" by the insects. Almost everyone is outside at one time or another and knows the discomfort that comes with so many mosquitoes in the air. As a result there has been suggested the starting of a fund to be applied to the purchase of a fogging machine. This is an opportunity for each citizen of the town to "do something for the town" and themselves. And the town board has indicated willingness to cooperate. If such public donations reach a minimum of $600 enabling the machine to be contracted for and obtained for use yet this summer, the board will appropriate the balance in the budget for next year.

This sounds like a good program and The News offers its support. That there may be some way for others to express their desire to help obtain a fogging machine, a coupon is printed herewith. The News suggests filling in the coupon as indicated to be given or mailed to Mr. Orville Coburn, member of the town board who is in charge of the mosquito control program for the town.

It is often heard when a community problem arises that "I'd be willing to give something to help out." Here is the chance to do just that.

Will you send in the coupon? We have.

Mr. Orville Coburn
St. Joe, Indiana

CAN A SCIENTIST BELIEVE IN GOD?

Remove the tinsel from the somewhat over-decorated term "science" and you will find that it is nothing more than knowledge that has been and is being accumulated by human beings in an effort to satisfy their natural curiosities about phenomena which play an important part in their lives. Those closest to the frontiers of science know that we have only scratched the surface of the reservoir of knowledge that still lies beyond, far beyond, the grasp of the combined intellectual facilities of human genius. Each scientific discovery serves as the key to unlock the door to a new and exhaustless realm of intriguing knowledge. Every door that is opened to leads to another, more heavily locked, in its place. All conjectures and theories of man lead ultimately to the dark rim of infinity beyond which man, in his little cleverness, cannot reach.

Contemplate, for example, on the facts that the stars and planets are constantly hovering above us in the daytime when we cannot see them, that the sun brings us refreshing daylight, warmth and health through millions of miles of space, that the earth is no larger than a dust particle floating in the sunlight compared with millions of heavenly bodies. Astronomers can prove for you that the sun which warms our earth is just one of 100,000,000,000 suns in our galaxy alone—and there are at least 1,000,000,000,000 galaxies! These (within the limits of the so-called "observable universe") are somewhere in a band of space which extends outward from the earth 12,000,000,000,000,000,000,000 (12 sextillion) miles.

Whether you may be an amateur astronomer or an expert manipulating the "Big Eye" atop Mount Palomar in California, gazing through a telescope is a spiritual experience in which you seem to be in communion with God, the Creator of the universe. One cannot view the majesty of the heavens and remain an atheist. The order of the star systems is too precise to be the result of mere accident. As Professor Edwin Conklin, the great Princeton University biologist once said, "The probability of life originating from accident is comparable to the probability of the Unabridged Dictionary resulting from an explosion in a printing factory."

Contemplation of the heavens can change your outlook toward the trivialities of your own materialistic world. More people should study the universe in which they live, for it is enlightening and spiritually uplifting. Such reflection will convince you—if you should perchance need convincing—that man is not only a conglomeration of billions of atoms and molecules; he is much more than just matter.

Material things by themselves would still be deposits of stone in the earth's rugged crust, dirty ores at the base of a mountain, of a thousand other unused resources of nature, instead of a Hoover Dam, an Empire

State Building, a highway, a park with monuments, or a house but for the guiding Hand of God. But for the soul of man, made to the image and likeness of his Creator, the material speck of dust to which the human body could be reduced would not make sense.

For example, picture the dark world of one who does not believe in God. In the words of the late Gretta Palmer, "He lives in a universe without direction. It has no Heaven and no hell. It has no stable compass points; North and South and East and West are apt to change and merge and disappear entirely whenever a new book is issued from the press. The unbeliever's is a world without goals, in which man has evolved from primeval slime only to return to eternal slime; a life in which kindness and love are senseless reflexes, in which our thinking is merely the noise made by the wheels of a locomotive plunging into the night without engineer or destination, along rails which sheer coincidence has created out of nothingness and mud."

The truly great and the unquestionably famous men of history stand out in retrospect all too clearly in the light of what they said about God. Benjamin Franklin, for instance, wrote: "God governs in the affairs of men; and if a sparrow cannot fall to the ground without His notice, neither can a kingdom rise without His aid." Benito Mussolini, on the other hand, scoffed shallowly in a speech at Lausanne in 1904: "Religion is a species of mental disease. It has always had a pathological reaction on mankind." Compare Joseph Stalin's 1929 declaration, "We guarantee the right of every citizen to combat by argument, propaganda and agitation, any and all religion" with Thomas Jefferson's in the "Note On Virginia": "Indeed I tremble for my country when I reflect that God is just." On another occasion, referring to the founding of this nation, he said, "The God who gave us life, gave us liberty at the same time."

Abraham Lincoln, in his unique verbal simplicity exclaimed his unequivocable belief in God many times, but never more impressively than when he concluded briefly, "There is a God governing the world."

And contrary to the all-too-popular idea, scientists are often the first to profess their belief in God. "Blessed is he," said Louis Pasteur, "who carries within himself a God, an ideal and who obeys it—ideal of art, ideal of science, ideal of gospel virtues; therein lie the springs of great thought and great actions; they all reflect light from the infinite."

Dr. George Washington Carver, the world-famed scientist in Tuskegee Institute, who came up out of slavery, discovered that 150 products can be gotten out of the common sweet potato, and 300 products from the humble peanut. When asked how he came to make all those discoveries, the devout scientist replied, "One day I asked God what could be made out of a peanut. God said to me, 'You have brains; find out for yourself'."

An engineer working on a project for the Atomic Energy Commission told me recently: "Up in the pile we see mass disappearing and becoming energy, but nowhere can we add to or subtract from the total of mass and energy. Where did mass and energy come from?

"We have found laws to prove we can't make it. It must come from somewhere. There must be a Higher Power Who can make it."

A humble but very prominent expert on heredity had this to say: "When we think we know a lot, we're agnostic. When we learn how insignificant our knowledge is—we have no alternative but to bend our knees and gratefully acknowledge God."

Indeed, I believe that there is a Power — greater than ourselves and beyond ourselves who is the Cause behind all the Effects. It is He Who is, as Thomas Aquinas first wrote, "the uncaused First Cause that possesses in itself the reason for its existence."

"There are no atheists in foxholes" is a popular quotation that should also have a spiritual impact in peacetime. No, the laws which control the orderly movement of your world and mine are not economic materialism. Study those you love and you will feel the stimulus of a Divine Spark within you, for God is Love personified. You will not, mortal man, see Him with your eyes, hear Him with your ears as you might hear a child's laughter or a loved one's voice. God cannot be taken apart in mathematical equations or examined under a microscope like a rose petal. You can only feel His reality in your heart, take assurance in the knowledge that He must be, that without Him man and our universe with its scientifically proven endless boundaries remain insoluble mysteries, hopelessly jumbled and utter farces!

—Dr. O. A. Battista in "The Lion," May, 1957.

"BRAIN-WASHING" TECHNIQUES

The Communist "brain-washing" technique was so successful with the 7,000 American soldier held prisoners in North Korea that in one typical prison camp only six guards were necessary to keep 600 prisoners under perfect control. And there were no efforts to escape in spite of the fact that the prison camp had no barbed wire fence, no electric fence, no machine gun towers, no searchlights, no guard dogs.

This situation dramatizes the incredible control which the Communists achieved over the American prisoners. Such control was the primary goal of the "brain-washing." These facts and others were related by Major William E. Mayer, the U.S. Army's chief phychiatrist-expert on "brain-washing", in a report to the 18th Freedom Forum at Searcy.

The three basic steps used by the Communists to gain control of the 7,000 prisoners and render them helpless were described by Major Mayer as: (1) making each prisoner an informer on his fellow prisoners; (2) developing an abnormal desire for self-criticism among all prisoners; and (3) controlling the soldiers' mail. "If you are to understand anything about Communism,' said the psychiatrist, "you must understand this: informing as it is done in the Communist state can only be done when you reject our basic premise that the individual is an entity, that he has dignity and worth . ."

As a result of the breakdown of the American concept of individual dignity and worth, the American POW's ceased to trust each other, ceased to band together in brotherhood as Americans under adverse circumstances had been doing throughout our history. This kept them from working together in small groups to escape, as American soldiers always before had done when captured. The Communists rewarded each act of informing; and yet they were able to obtain meek "confessions" from those informed-upon through the technique of self-criticism.

"Confession," Major Mayer noted, "is terribly important in the Communst state." A young English-speaking Chinese Communist "instructor would throw his arms about the shoulders of the informed-upon soldier and say: "Confess that what you did is wrong, and analyze your confession and analyze why it's wrong, why it's destructive. Assert your determination not to do it again in the future. And preferably write this down and sign it. And if you do this, that's all we want." And it was.

Later 10 informed-upon soldier-prisoners would be brought together and asked by the "instructor" to talk about their wrong-doing in a discussion group atmosphere. "When these 10 men would walk out of a self-criticism group," Major Mayer said, "they'd walk in ten separate directions, distrustful of each other, divided, like those sticks in the well-known parable that you can break so easily when they're apart, and that are so strong if they're together."

Sooner or later nearly everybody had been informed-upon. In addition to this dividing technique, the Communists intercepted all prisoner mail from home which expressed love and spoke of anything which might have encouraged the prisoner. They delivered all mail which contained depressing substance—notices from collection agencies, complaining letters from loved ones, or the notice of illness in the family. This further isolated the Americans from loved ones and country, and made them vulnerable to the undermining "brain-washing" program.

"This program," Major Mayer said, "did everything the Communists wanted it to do. It didn't turn anybody into a Communst because it wasn't designed for that. A small percentage of the people in the Communist world are Communists. The great majority are acquiescers. The great majority are simply cowed and somehow pushed along by this system which doesn't look like something you can fight. It's not very dangerous-appearing. It just controls you! You don't have to be a coward to give in to it." The majority of American prisoners in a sense did give in to it. Major Mayer feels that this exposes a weakness in America—that we are not adequately teaching our great religious, moral and social principles — the values which can make men immunne to "brain-washing." I agree.

—Dr. George S. Benson, Director, National Education Program, Searcy, Arkansas.

FRIENDLY ADVICE

My neighbors and friends are very nice,
They come and give me friendly advice.
And they say, if I were you,
I'll tell you just what I would do;
I would have a sale and sell those cows,
And quit climbing up in those hay mows.
Don't you know that you could fall,
Or get hurt in an old cow's stall?
I would like to know, what you would do,
With no one to come out to you.
But I go on with the work each day,
And sing and whistle along the way;
Sometimes, I take time out to cry,
When thinking of the days gone by;
And then, "The Master" comes to me,
And I go on quite happily.

$11,500 AT STAKE IN SPEEDWAY TRIALS

With the Indianapolis Motor Speedway offering $11,500 in qualifying money this year—an increase of $4,000 over 1956—the battle for starting positions in the 41st annual 500-mile race will get under way during time trials this week-end.

Although 54 entries have been received for the 1957 Classic, only the fastest 33 qualifiers will be eligible for the "flying start" behind the powerful Mercury pace car on May 30. The high-speed struggle for starting positions, consequently, is expected to result in record-breaking performances.

At least half of the field probably will attempt to qualify this week-end, with the other entrants waiting until the final qualifying days, May 25 and 26.

The five fastest qualifiers on each of the four days will receive cash awards of $1,000, $750, $500, $250 and $125, respectively, from the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. Tony Hulman, Speedway president, also has announced that the fastest qualifier, regardless of the day on which he runs, will receive another $1,000 cash award.

Many merchandise awards and cash accessory prizes, including one of $1,000 for the fastest qualifier if Mobiloil products are used, also are at stake.

Winner of the pole position will receive the Robert Bowes Memorial trophy; and a new award this year—the Motor Age trophy—will be presented to the driver who turns in the fastest single lap during an official qualifying attempt.

Most veteran drivers agree that Pat Flaherty's one-lap and four-lap records of 146.056 and 145.596 miles an hour are sure to be broken if weather conditions are favorable. Predictions range up to 147.5 miles an hour.

Among the favorites for front-row positions this year are nine drivers who have earned that distinction on one or more previous occasions. They are Freddie Agabashian, Jim Rathman, Pat O'Connor, Tony Bettenhausen, Jimmy Daywalt, Jim Bryan, Andy Linden, Paul Russo and Sam Hanks. Johnny Thompson, Don Freeland, Dick Rathman and two former "500" winners, Troy Ruttman and Johnnie Parsons, are other strong contenders for the pole position.

Saturday's schedule calls for the gates to open at 8 a.m., with the track available for practice at 9 a.m. and time trials starting at 11 a.m. On Sunday, the gates will be open at 9 a.m. and trials will start at noon.

Admission on all four time trial days will be $1.50, with free parking in the infield. Admission on practice days is 50 cents.

IN A BAD WORLD

Lesson for May 19, 1957

This world we're in may be a bad one, but it never gets so bad we can't pray. The worse it is, the more reason to pray. There is a story in the Bible which shows a good man at prayer in an evil world. There are many such stories in the Bible, to be sure, The one which has been selected for our study is that of Abraham pleading for the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah. No man of his time was better than Abraham. No city of those times was worse than Sodom and Gomorrah. Yet this good man prayed for those wicked cities. There have always been puzzlers in this story, but they are not the main point. That point has nothing to do with such questions as "How can God eat hot bread and veal roast?" or "How could Abraham see God if it is true (see John 1:18) that no man has seen God at any time? The point of the story, for us, is the kind of prayer a good man can offer, in and for an evil world.

Realistic

First of all, Abraham's prayer shows that he had no illusions about Sodom and Gomorrah. They were cities which he preferred to stay away from, cities notorious for wickedness unashamed. We do not know how many thousand persons there may have been in Sodom, but Abraham ventures to think that in the whole city there may perhaps be 50 righteous persons. Abraham's series of prayers in which he begs the Lord to spare the city for the sake of fifty - then 45 - 40 - 30 - 20 - 10 good people, is often taken as a sign of Abraham's growing faith in God. But it can just as well stand for Abraham's decreasing faith in Sodom. At the end, he would not dare ask God to spare the city for "twenty's sake"—it is plain that he is very doubtful that there might be even that number of good citizens. Children may pray as if there were no evil in the world; but, grown men even in their prayers must realize what kind of world they live in. Our Lord's Prayer mentions temptation and evil as real and dangerous, even for good men.

Generous

Abraham's prayer is not only realistic, it is generous. Readers of the Bible will remember Jesus' story of the Pharisee who in his prayer recalled the publican—no model citizen. But to the Pharisee the publican was not a man to be prayed for, only a man to be despised. Now Abraham was far better than the citizens of Sodom, if they were good at all, which seems doubtful; and he was better too than his relative, Lot, for whose sake he was chiefly praying. But he prays for them all the same. His prayer is of the highest sort—not for himself at all, but for others. The reader can test his religion by the kind of prayer he offers. One can ask oneself: How often do I pray for myself and how often for others? When I do pray for others, is it for good people only? Are my prayers an expression of selfishness, or can I offer generous prayers? How long has it been since I prayed for any one I didn't really like?

Daring

Abraham's prayer is humble; but it is also daring. Most of our prayers are safe; Abraham realizes that his is risky. It almost involves throwing a challenge to God: Shall not the judge of all the earth do right? This man realizes that he may actually be praying against God's will. He may be praying for the wrong thing entirely. But that does not stop him. He dares to believe that God was interested in a very small minority of good people. He dares to pray beyond his hopes, beyond his knowledge . . . but not beyond God. The God in whom Abraham believed, the God Abraham knew, was not like men. He did not—and he does not—share man's prejudices, man pride. A man, even a good man, prides himself on not helping the unworthy; but God's mercy is untainted by conceit. Do we dare believe that God is just? Do we dare believe he will do the fair thing, or do we try to argue him into doing what we want even if it is not quite fair? Do we dare believe that God is merciful, or to pray for those who do not pray for themselves? Do we pray only for sure things, or do we dare go so far as to pray even when we fear that we may be asking too much? Can we stand and take God's No (as Abraham had to) and still hold our faith in Him?

WEE HAVEN SCHOOL
(Sponsored by DeKalb County Association for Retarded Children)
by "A. Parent"

The site of Wee Haven School - the school for retarded children, located in Garrett - is beginning to show activity these days. Since old man winter decided to give up and the water accumulated in the holes around the working area is draining off and evaporating (the foundation was done last fall), things can begin to move - and are.

The president of the board of directors, Dr. F. B. Kantzer, the contractor-overseer, K. P. Sithen, and members of the building committee have been meeting; materials are being ordered, some already delivered. It looks as if the building will begin to take shape in a short time.

This building started as a dream. Dreams are necessary but are not quite enough. So we started construction with a lot of faith and, we know, a lot of prayers. The faith has not been misplaced and the prayers are being answered.

There has been considerable interest shown in the progress of this undertaking and through the courtesy of this newspaper we hope to reach and inform you at intervals of what is happening. You will be told the trials and tribulations as well as the good things that happen.

Keep reading - we'll keep writing.

Men are like trains — they are at their best when on the level.

Remember, last week we were taking a quickie tour of the store and we left you at the water cooler near the rear of the store. Let's take a look into the back room. We can see all the models of refrigerators, ranges and laundry equipment made by Westinghouse. Also, you can see that we have added the good quality, long wearing Sandran to our already complete line of Armstrong linoleum.

Let us start back toward the front of the store in the south aisle. Over there on our left you can see our complete service department with George and Vincent in charge. They say that whenever we sell anything, they'll service it.

As we walk further toward the front we find a very complete department of dinnerware. The range is from a 45-piece service for 8 at $9.95 to the finest imported china at $15.60 per place setting.

Well, what do you know, we are now in the jewelry store. Well, you all know what is usually carried in a jewelry store so we'll stop. The only difference is that we have the unusual instead of the usual. See you next week.

VOLUME LXXII ST. JOE, (DeKalb Co.), IND. Thursday, May 23, 1957 NUMBER 21

Indiana State Library

Mr. Orville Coburn
St. Joe, Indiana

Dear Sir:

I wish to help purchase a fogging machine for the town of St. Joe, to be under the supervision of the town board which will provide the materials necessary for its yearly use.

I enclose $..... as my contribution. You will send me a receipt.

OR:

I wish to contribute $.....
which may be called for on or before (date)

Around the Town

With the Editor

I had to make a call to the Joe Smith residence last week about some school business, graduation or something, and when a voice, a little voice, said, "Hello," I said, "Hello, is Joe there?"

"Who?"

"Is Joe there?"

"Who? - - Joe Smith?"

"Yeah."

"Yeah, - - - he's my Dad."

And then Tuesday noon, after Bible School got out and it was about time for lunch, I thought the little woman might like a vacation from the preparing of lunch. So we piled in the car and headed for Chaney's.

Well, you know how it is when you order sometimes, and there are several people ordering . . . you give your order and a few moments later somebody's else's order sounds better so you add to yours or change it? Well, that's the way we went. One by one, Margaret had to call to the kitchen for a side of baked beans or a side of potato salad or another side of baked beans to go with our earlier sandwich orders. Finally there came from the kitchen as the third of fourth side order went in, "Tell 'em to make up their minds!"

A few minutes later when Margaret went to get the orders she came back laughing. We got Rose so flustered with those orders and extra orders that when she made my bacon sandwich, she made it without the bacon. The sandwich was all set to go, cut in two and everything - and the bacon was still on the griddle.

Harriett Oberlin sent a letter to the Guilfords for publication in the paper. See it in next week's issue.

Fogger Fund Reaches $235; Still Rising

Orville Coburn reported Wednesday evening that he has received $235 in donations and pledges since last week's announcement of the establishment of a fund to purchase a fogging machine for the town of St. Joe.

Mr. Coburn reported that he has received checks, cash and coupon pledges to make up the total and there are more contributions to be collected. A house to house solicitation is planned beginning Thursday night of this week.

The donations have been in amounts varving from $1 to $25. One of the donations came from the local Boy Scout Troop which turned over $25 to the fogger fund.

Enthusiasm for obtaining a fogging machine is reflected in the offer of several contributors to donate further if more funds were needed in the future.

The coupon published in last week's edition of The News is reprinted herewith in case some local residents may have forgotten or overlooked last week's request for donations. The goal has been set of at least $600 by this public solicitation. The balance of the twelve or thirteen hundred dollars necessary will be appropriated by the town board in next year's budget.

It has been pointed out that the sooner sufficient funds are collected to obtain the fogger, the sooner its benefits will be available to townspeople. The rain and cool weather subdued mosquitoes to some extent last week. But the warming trend earlier this week brought the biters back little by little and it is fairly certain that there is a pretty good crop in the territory.

Father & Son Fishing Derby Coming June 22

The local American Legion Post and the St. Joe Boy Scout Troop announced plans this week for a Father-and-Son Fishing Derby to be held next month. Frank Sechler, Scoutmaster of the local Boy Scout Troop, outlined plans Tuesday evening for the derby which will be held in the St. Joe community along the St. Joe River. Mr. Sechler and Robert Musser are serving as co-chairmen of the event, representing the Scouts and the Legion.

Tentative plans call for an opening time of 4 a.m. on Saturday, June 22, when fathers and sons will test their fishing skills and try to land the biggest catch. The derby will end at 4 p.m. at which time a dinner will be served. Tickets for the derby will be sold on a non-profit basis with the proceeds to be used to pay for the dinner and prizes to be awarded derby winners.

Committee appointments have been made with the following chairmen serving:

Joe Smith—publicity.
Roy Reidenbach—food.
Walter Ervin—tickets.
Price Brookfield—prizes.
Forrest Bevington—rules.

Rain Hampers Clean-Up; Try Again Saturday

The weather put a damper on St. Joe clean-up activities last Saturday. Kenny Ridgway, Bob Honaker and Steve Harts made several trips on town streets during the morning hours gathering the fruits of St. Joe residents' clean-up efforts. But the afternoon rains came and the boys had to take their truck out of service.

As was announced previously, a second clean-up day will be held this coming Saturday due to the rain-out. Derwood Ridgway, president of the town board, said this week that a truck will again pick up trash if residents will gather it together at the street in front of the homes.

What if it rains again?

We'll just have to wait and see.

Spencerville News

Janice Hollabaugh, Reporter

The beautification committee met at the home of Mrs. C. R. Baumgartner early Tuesday morning and distributed almost 275 dozen petunias to the people of Spencerville. Mrs. Karl Hart had supplied us with about 32 flats of which most are red in color. So Spencerville should be quite colorful in the next few weeks with all the flowers and the balance of the lights installed. Then quite a large attendance was on hand at the fire hall for the pot luck supper and business meeting of the club. Important items discussed were the mosquito problem, improving the hillside and fence at the cemetery, and a money making project was approved. The June meeting will be held June 18 starting with a pot luck supper at 6:-15.

Mrs. F. A. Ruder of Hawaii, who came to be with her family during the illness and death of her mother, Mrs. Frank Beams, will leave Thursday with her sister, Mrs. W. L. Peck and her father to visit in the former's home at Anderson, before returning to her home Sunday. Mr. Beams will remain with his daughter and family in Anderson indefinitely.

Rev. Henry Weber of the local Methodist Church left Wednesday morning for conference at Wabash.

Mrs. Minnie Lake of Fort Wayne visited a couple of days with her aunt, Mrs. Carrie Ransom, in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Clarence Rediger last week. On Wednesday Mrs. Clarence Smith of Spencerville joined them and the three enjoyed the day living over the good times spent in days gone by.

On Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Brendel had as supper guests Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Norris, Mrs. Alice Claymiller of Rome City, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Brendel and daughter, Mary, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Norris and daughter, Cheryl, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Blaising and son, Brian, Mrs. Carl Stout, Mrs. Wiladean Puff and Mrs. Clarence Norris of Fort Wayne and Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Hollabaugh and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Norris and Jeanie and Jim of Spencerville.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Henderson of Newago, Mich., Mr. Allen Royer, Rev. Isiah Royer, Mr. Solly King and Mr. Ralph Eshelman of Orville, Ohio, were guests in the Frank Beams home on Sunday and attended the funeral services for Mrs. Beams.

Mr. Joe Sommer and Mrs. Mary Hawk are visiting in the M. D. Furnish home.

The Dan Ransoms entertained following their son, Eddie's, graduation last Friday the following guests: Mrs. Bertha Bartell and son, Jerry, Mr. Martin Bartell of Spencerville, Mrs. Mildred Sarvell and Miss Pat Sarvell of Hamilton, Mrs. Helen Kees and daughters, Madeline and Sue, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Smith and sons, Mrs. Freida Springer and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Cook and daughters of Harlan.

On Sunday Mrs. Carrie Ransom joined old friends, Mrs. Hattie Rothgeb of Gar Creek and Mrs. Dora Notestine in the home of Mrs. Notestine's son, John, west of Leo.

Mrs. Metta Furnish is a patient at St. Joseph Hospital in Fort Wayne where she had a cataract removed last Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Ball of Indianapolis, Miss Carolyn Peck of Arlington Heights, Ill., Don Peck of Bloomington, Ind., Mrs. Curtis McCoy of Huntsville, Ala., Miss Anne Beams of Cleveland and Mrs. Sara Banks of Montpelier, Ohio, spent the week end in the Frank Beams home and attended services for their grandmother on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Jones spent Tuesday and Wednesday with her parents, the J. S. Hollabaughs.

Mr. and Mrs. Vern Webster of Mishawaka visited Mrs. George Beams a few days last week. We are happy to report that Mr. Beams continues to improve and hopes to be home soon.

Of Miracles - And Men

There were probably many prayers being spoken consicously and unconsciously last week as the nation heard of the plight of a 7 year old boy trapped at the bottom of a 21-foot hole. Periodically we read about these incidents in the passing scene which give encouragement to a spiritual-minded nation which yet appears to have occasion to doubt its beliefs. To be sure, there are those who over-play the sentimentality of these incidents and make more of the story than is really there. But still, in this case there is the fact that a boy only 7 years old was trapped underground for almost a whole day, unable to move, surrounded by darkness except for the light from a flashlight aimed downward from many feet above. And there is the fact that one of his rescuers, compelled by a feeling that "God was calling" him to help in the rescue work, did work until the boy was lifted, apparently dead, from the earthly trap. And there is the fact that the boy was not dead but was alive and is now recovering.

The news reports quoted the father's exclamation of "My God, what have I done to deserve this," shortly after the lad had fallen into the small hole and dropped to its bottom. It would not be out of place for him to ask now, after his son's rescue, that same question. For many times our answered prayers go unrecognized and we take for granted the rewards that come our way. Or perhaps the question could be changed somewhat to, "My God, what can I do to deserve this reward." This is a thought directed not particularly toward this father alone, but toward the many in this nation and this world who believe in God. This father's exclamation is representative of the conflict which besets all people,

To some the miracle of the boy's rescue and recovery is just a matter of "one of those things." To them there are the exhaustive efforts to be considered, the efforts made to keep a supply of air and oxygen in the hole for the boy to breath, the hours and hours of careful digging in an excavation parallel to the well-hole he fell in, these things which can be credited with saving the boy's life. But the God-minded has other thoughts. Certainly men were at work trying to save the boy's life. But what kept him from panic? How did it happen that the sides of the hole, which caved in somewhat, did not cave in further? How can we discount one man's compelling feeling that he must go rescue the boy? And his wife, how can we discount her prayerful vigil in the church while her husband aided in the rescue?

One of the basic truths of the Christian faith is that God works through men. We often are not able to understand this truth, for we see human beings doing things and we associate human feelings with these doings and stop there. But a man compelled to rescue a boy got that feeling from somewhere other than just the human brain. The toil and sacrifice that followed is an exact example of the toil and sacrifice that illustrates our idea of Christian love of man for his fellow men. This, says the Christian, is God's will.

We often hear, "God helps those who help themselves." When we do all we can, in faith, God helps us, says the Christian. And the miracles that follow, a boy rescued after hours and hours alone in a deep confining hole, become more understandable and more believable. They almost cease to be miracles, for they show what work in faith will do. But there are then other factors which we may not be able to understand and these may indeed be the miracles only possible through the Almighty Hand of the Creator. What held back the soil? What steadied the nerves of this 7 year old boy?

THIS OLD GENERATION

It just seems to me,
We make an awful fuss,
About the young generations,
That have grown up since us.

We mumble and we grumble
And we say, My! Oh! My!
We didn't do this or that,
In the days gone by.

Of course we are getting old,
And our memories are bad;
It has been a long time,
Since grandpa was a lad.

But I have just been wondering,
(If boys and girls were so afraid)
Why it was our grandmas,
Didn't die "an Old Maid."

—Merwin J. Place

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following composition can be taken as a description not only of writing a daily column - but also of publishing a weekly newspaper.)

A chronological report on the coming into being of a daily piece such as this, with all of its interruptions, would be interesting, I think.

After having disposed of the flood of mail which comes in presenting all points of view about many things, but all of which usually have a commercial or a political angle, you dictate replies to them and sit down in front of a typewriter.

You just about have an idea, when the phone rings and some dear soul wants to know what you think about McCarthy's death. You have written a column on that subject which, judging from the response to it, you thought was read by everyone from Washington to Indianapolis, but you're polite and say, "I noticed that he died and it was too bad."

You turn to the typewriter again and there is a salesman who wants to sell you a brand new feature, without which your newspaper may not survive in these days of intense readership. You dispose of him, turn to the typewriter again and the phone rings. It is long distance from a far distant point. A picture news service has a new idea for a picture feature, without which you'll be a back number journalistically, but you get rid of him and turn to the typewriter again.

The phone rings and there is a lady on the phone who has a municipal problem, consisting of a barking dog in the neighborhood, concerning which the City Hall isn't doing anything.

After disposing of that matter, you again turn to the typewriter, but a very important fellow, the News Editor, wants to know about a play for a certain story and sounds off on the lack of room he has on today's inside pages. The advertising department has grabbed off all the reading space on pages two and three and the make-up editor is holding out three or four features, because classified advertising has jumped up again.

You try to straighten that out and the Telegraph Editor comes in with a layout of page one and a summary of the day's wire news as of now. He is convinced there is no news and that unless the President says something startling at the morning press conference, there will be eight blank columns on page one. You kid him once again about putting an epitaph over his grave reading, "It Doesn't Look Good," his favorite comment on the day's news budget and then get rid of him.

Then comes in the cartoonist with a pencil sketch of tomorrow's cartoon. His idea isn't bad you tell him and he leaves to ink it and send it to the engraver.

By that time the editorial writer comes in for an idea on this, that or the other thing, and you arrive at some conclusion about something of seemingly earth shaking importance, but which will be of little importance tomorrow.

You turn again to the typewriter and by this time, the swivel is getting hot from turning, but the phone rings again and it's a publicity chairman wanting to know if he can have a cartoon, an editorial and a feature story on the new disease that is decim-ating the nation's thousands of Myrtle Warblers. You tell him, "No," and you know you've made another enemy for life. You hang up on him and there is an amiable soul on the phone who wants to know if you would care to attend a luncheon club meeting a year from next Michaelmass Day as his guest. You duck out of that and there's another person on the phone wanting to know what you did with his letter to the editor written two years ago last Halloween and which never saw the light of day because he called the town banker a crook and didn't want his name signed.

You are just about to start the column again and a coup of the reporters walk in to throw some minor problems in your lap about stories they are covering. This goes on all day long, but most of the time, you get a daily column out. But this is one of the days you didn't. You wonder what it was you had in mind to write about hours ago.

This is one of those days.

HUMPHREY'S 'HAIR-CURLER' GOT TWISTED

Secretary of the Treasury George Humphrey has been bearing the brunt of a good deal of criticism lately throughout the country. Some accuse him of "attacking the President's budget." Others say he predicted a depression that "will curl your hair" unless the 1958 budget recommended by the President is cut by many billions of dollars. Partisans on Capitol Hill have been twitting the Administration and seeking to exploit the alleged contradictions.

But, if ever a man in public life was misquoted or quoted out of context, misunderstood and misrepresented, it is the present Secretary of the Treasury in relation to his comments at a press conference of Jan. 16 last.

Fortunately, a stenographic record was kept and was issued to the press that same day.

The correspondent has just completed a study of what was distributed by the various wire services and what was printed in most of the newspapers immediately after the press conference of Jan. 16.

The only conclusion that can be reached is that the text of what the Secretary really said and the impression conveyed by some of the wire services is considerably different. Here is the exact text of the question that drew the response about "hair curling":

"Mr. Secetary, isn't nearly all the talk here today about cutting spending and cutting taxes largely academic, as long as the world sitaution remains what it is? Looking at this budget, I find that the lion's share of the increased expenditures is for mutual security and defense. Is there any hope anywhere in the world situation that you can do any cutting in defense spending in the next few years?"

It is to be noted that the questioner inquired about "any hope anywhere in the world situation" and referred specifically to the "increased expenditures for mutual security and defense." Here is the exact text of Humphrey's answer:

"I think there is, yes, I do. I think there is some hope you can reduce expenditures all along the line. I would certainly deplore the day that we thought we couldn't ever reduce expenditures of this terrific amount, the terrific tax take we are taking out of this country. If we don't over a long period of time, I will predict that you will have a depression that will curl your hair, because we are just taking too much money out of this economy that we need to make the jobs that you have to have as time goes on."

Humphrey spoke not of this year's budget but of what has to be done "over a long period of time." He was talking directly about reducing expenses for armament. So are Prime Minister Macmillan and Premier Mollet and Chancellor Adenauer. All over the world statesmen are talking of the back-breaking burdens of armament.

None of the dispatches written on Jan. 16 that this correspondent saw emphasized sufficiently the difference between Humphrey's comments on the long-range prospects due to the armament burden arising out of the world situation and the particular budget submitted that week by the President.

The public didn't get the impression at all that Humphrey was really supporting the exisiting budget but that he was differing with the President. Yet in the text of the transcript occurs the following comment by the Secretary:

"I think this budget as now drawn has been prepared with the very greatest care, and I think it is the best that we can possibly do right now. Now, my whole point is this: That it is 18 monthst before we get through living under this budget, and I think there are a lot of economies and a lot of savings that we ought to be able to make if we pay strict attention to our business and work at them hard enough during the next 18 months. I don't think there is anything in sight at the moment that can be done better than is now proposed in his budget, but I think we ought to improve it as time goes on."

Asked whether the Secretary and the President differed about the budget, Humphrey said in that same press conference:

"There is no division or difficulty in the Administration at all on this subject. This is a thing that we all are in accord on. This budget was made up, as I say, with the very greatest care and a great deal of time spent on it, and this is apparently the best we can do at the present time. But I just believe that over 18 months we ought to keep doing better."

The improvement process has already been begun. The agitation has, therefore, in some respects been salutary, but some of the talk and criticism is going to extremes and could harm the effectiveness of America's international influence in a critical period in history if appropriations for necessary programs are curtailed or abandoned through mistaken acts of Congress.

Partisans have been able to distort and twist what Humphrey did say. A complicated subject, such as the budget really is, has been made a football of politics. Unless corrected by an informed public opinion, the momentum of the entire economy can be slowed down and a recession precipitated.

EXAMINING OUR WEAKNESSES

A nation can be only as strong as its people. If its people are weak in the basic character virtues or weak in an understanding of the great values and truths of life, then that nation will be a weak nation and sooner or later it will crumble. A significant "laboratory" study has been made of a cross section of American character. The results seem to indicate serious defects in the upbringing of a generation of Americans, from infancy, through childhood, and into youthful maturity. The results constitute a challenge to our three great institutions — the home, the school, the church.

The study was made by U.S. Army psychiatrists. It was a study of the actions and reactions of 7,000 American soldiers captured and imprisoned for nearly three years by the Chinese Communists in North Korea. When the results were all in, President Eisenhower and the leaders of our nation's internal security and national defense were so disturbed that a new Code of Conduct for the armed services was adopted, and in an unprecedented move it was announced to the nation by the President himself.

President Eisenhower said: "This is a statement of first principles which every male and every female in our society should know." Major William E. Mayer, the Army's chief psychiatrist on the Korean prisoner study, commented on the principles underlying the requirements of the Code: "I think a great many parents and teachers somehow believe that children get such principles by osmosis or simply by being exposed to them in some vague way that doesn't require any direct conscious attention." This is a mistaken belief. The Code demands five attitude requirements:

1. If you're ever captured — resist. Keep alive the spirit of resistance. Your life depends upon it. Three thousand of the 7,000 American prisoners in Korea died. The Army is convinced that an important factor in this amazing death rate was a breakdown in the spirit of resistance. The same breakdown rendered the 4,000 surviving prisoners incredibly non-resistant to their Communist captors. The characteristic which broke down was perseverance.

2. Try to escape. "This country exists because of an impulse to freedom," Major Mayer emphasizes. "Violations of this freedom have always in the past stimulated the most violent reaction on the part of Americans. And yet, out of the 7,000 men captured, the 4,000 survivors were three years in captivity, and at no time did a single American ever succeed in an engineered escape from an established POW camp. Ever!" The attitude which broke down here was the traditional high evaluation of freedom.

3. Don't make a "deal" with the enemy. Most of the Korean prisoners, Major Mayer and his staff found, accepted a "deal" from the Communist captors. He said: "It seems that in talking about compromise and getting along with people today, and being non-aggressive, and everything being quiet, and nobody raising his voice if possible, we've gotten compromise on a minor level mixed up with compromise on the level of principle." The character principles weakened here were honesty and courage.

4. Don't do anything to hurt your fellow-American. Love thy neighbor — God's commandment. Major Mayer described the "Gallagher incident." A domineering soldier, Gallagher, forced some soldiers ill with dysentery from a hut in a prison compound, into 30-below-zero weather. They died within hours. Other soldiers in the hut testified at Gallagher's trial that they didn't try to stop this brutal action. Typical reason given: "I just didn't feel it was any of my business to interfere." Yet they knew the sick men would die. The characteristic broken here was brotherly love.

5. Establish a command, and support the command. The attitude of many prisoners toward command was, "You may be a captain or a sergeant but in this prison camp you don't rank." No one asserted leadership, and that's exactly what the Communists wanted. "We had to put this terribly obvious statement in the Code," Major Mayer explained, "because somehow we are not teaching about the attiture of leadership, the willingness to take this responsibility, the willingness to be other than merely popular." This was a breakdown of the characteristic that made America a great nation.

The Army's findings are disturbing. In our homes, our churches and schools we must heed the challenges which they pose. Everything we cherish is at stake.

ROOKIES CHALLENGE VETERANS IN INDIANAPOLIS "500"

Drivers without previous experience in a 500-mile race will be challenging some of the popular veterans for starting positions in the 41st annual Memorial Day Classic when time trials are resumed at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Saturday and Sunday.

Only the 33 fastest qualifiers will be eligible for starting positions behind the Mercury Pace Car on May 30 and Speedway President Tony Hulman believes the "bumping" process will provide an exciting climax to the trials this week-end.

Gates will open Saturday at 8 o'clock, with trials from 11 a. m. to 6 p. m. Sunday's schedule calls for gates to open at 9 o'clock with trials from noon until 6 p. m. Admission is $1.50 with free parking facilities in the infield.

Five cash awards, ranging in size from $1,000 to $125, are at stake on each time trial day with the fastest over-all qualifier on any day assured of a Speedway bonus amounting to another $1,000. Cash accessory prizes totalling more than $1,500 also can be won by the fastest qualifier.

"Bumping" will start after 33 of the 54 entries complete an official qualifying attempt. As soon as a car is not one of the 33 fastest qualifiers, it is eliminated automatically. The driver of any car eliminated in this manner, however, may attempt to regain a starting position in another car which has not yet been qualified. Several last-minute changes in driver assignments, consequently, are expected.

Highly-regarded rookies, selected to drive brand new cars this year, probably will surpass the efforts of some veterans assigned to older cars.

The Speedway museum, near the main gate, will be open on time trial days and reserved seat tickets for race day will be on sale at the ticket counter in the museum lobby.

MAN OF PEACE

Lesson for May 26, 1957

In a hospital for the insane, the patients may think the doctors are crazy. In a land of three-legged men, a man with only two legs would look deformed. Maybe that is why in the world today people who speak a good word for Peace are looked on as somewhat "touched in the head." This is a warring world. It is a fact that the heathen ancestors of most readers of this column followed a religion in which heaven was thought to be a place where fighting went on all day and drinking all night. But north-Europeans are not the only fighters of the world. Wars and fights, large and small, have been going on in all parts of the world since cave-man times. This Twentieth Century is the bloodiest of all, with fewer wars than formerly, but far more serious ones.

Surrender

Isaac, second son of Abraham, is known as a man of peace. But he must have seemed to be a rather odd man, around Gerar where he lived. He did not seem quite normal. He was willing, even eager, to make peace; but what lesson he endured in the making of peace? In the famous story of the Wells of Gerar, which is in our Scripture this week, we see Isaac giving up his comforts, his profits and even his rights, in order to keep peace. He moved farther and farther into the wilderness; he got no return on all the labor put in on the wells; and he actually gave up what he had a perfect right to keep —the wells themselves. It is very likely that a man or a nation that is going to stay at peace with the rest of the world, will, like Isaac, have to surrender some comforts, some profits, even some rights. A nation, or an individual, unwilling to make any concessions, yield any points or lower their profits, is headed for a fight. And the fight will cost more than what they fought to keep.

Sons of God

Nevertheless, peacemakers shall be called sons of God. So Jesus tells us; let it be noted that he said PEACE-MAKERS, not peace-wishers, peace-praisers. This means that peacemakers are like God, they belong to his family. It means that the peacemaker is in line with the purposes of God. Consider Isaac again. What became of all the nations whose battles reddened the earth, whose wars were the big news, whose generals were famous men, whose conquests made history? The nations of that day are now dead, so dead that until recently—we know better now — there were some who thought the Bible's references to them must be fiction. Only university professors know about the Girgashites, the Philistines and all the rest, and they don't much care. But what became of Isaac? His name is immortal: the family descended from him is found everywhere in the world. The sons of Isaac are the most indestructible folk of history. When God sent his Son into the world, it was to the sons of Isaac that he first came, not to the children of the Philistines.

Witness of History

Sometimes the most peaceful men or nations are forced to fight. But the truly great are not those who keep the fight going on for years and years, but those who bind up the wounds they have made. Germany, at the time these lines are being written, shows an example. That nation was conquered by America and Russia, along with other nations. Today America and Russia are the two principal powers occupying Germany with their armies. But the part controlled by Russia is being systematically bled. The great Russian war memorial in east Berlin is lined with inscriptions (quoted from Stalin) insulting the German people; most prominent in East Berlin are great ruined empty buildings. In the west zone, controlled by the United States, there is comparative prosperity; this country is devoting immense sums to the upbuilding of our former enemies; most prominent in West Berlin is the rising new city built on the ruins of the old. It cannot be said that Germans love to be occupied by foreign armies. But they know the vast difference between a former enemy who turns as quickly as possible to the ways of peace, and an enemy that never knows the war is over.

Theft Of Hogs Reported By Wayne Fogle

The sheriff's department reported Tuesday afternoon the theft of 7 purebred hogs, valued at approximately $250, from the Wayne Fogle farm located north of St. Joe.

Mr. Fogle, in reporting the theft, said he discovered the hogs were missing when he counted them Tuesday morning. He had last counted the hogs on May 16.

Mr. Fogle said the 7 hogs were purebred Hampshires weighing between 160 and 170 pounds. They were penned in a barn lot which opens into a field west of the Fogle barn.

There apparently was no evidence that the missing hogs escaped on their own. The owner checked farmers in a 2-mile radius and none reported seeing the hogs.

The man who rows the boat generally doesn't have time to rock it!

I have just read about Dr. Albert Schweitzer, who achieved fame in many fields as one of the best of modern biographers, as the first concert organist of Europe, and as one of the most eminent Bible scholars in the world. His books on philosophy profoundly influenced university teaching everywhere. Yet Schweitzer, musician, philosopher, biographer and theologian, has also become one of the world's great surgeans, as well as the pre-eminent Christian missionary of his time. In the midst of his European career, he renounced fame and income in order to study medicine and devote his life to helping the natives of Africa.

What is your "second" job? You, too, can watch for little helpful things that you can do. Without a doubt your church could use all of your spare time to good advantage. Volunteer now!

Fogger Fund Tops $800 In Two Weeks; Machine Purchased, Put In Immediate Use

An avalanche of contributions from St. Joe residents plus a $100 contribution from the local Lions Club swelled the fund for purchasing a fogging machine to over the $800 mark, according to a financial report from Orville Coburn Thursday evening of this week. After reaching a total of $235 toward the end of last week, the fund jumped to its high mark through the efforts of solicitors and the voluntary contributions of many local citizens.

As a result of the response early this week, a call was placed Wednesday morning to the Hammond, Indiana, firm which sells the Dyna-Jet fogger. A representative immediately came to St. Joe with one of the machines and other necessary equipment and chemicals. Mr. Coburn, who has been in charge of the collection of funds for the machine, and Mr. Derwood Ridgway, president of the town board, were on hand Wednesday afternoon to complete the arrangements for obtaining the machine. The town board had indicated its willingness to appropriate approximately one-half of the cost of the machine in next year's budget if public solicitations of at least $600 could be obtained.

The machine was put into immediate use when on Wednesday evening, Andy Monroe, Orville Coburn, Harold Yeiser and Mose Yeiser, members of the St. Joe Volunteer Fire Department, fogged St. Joe for two hours. The fire department has taken the responsibility of operating the machine. Care and caution are necessary in using the machine as the fog is produced through generation of extremely high temperatures.

Mr. Coburn, in commenting on the remarkable response which has come from St. Joe residents in the past two weeks, said that all homes in town were contacted. Almost 100 per cent response resulted.

The machine arrived at an opportune time Wednesday. The evening breeze was just right for a fogging and the dense clouds hung low throughout the streets for many minutes. Future foggings can be expected as mosquitoes become evident and it becomes necessary to counteract their presence.

Big Oaks . . .

Congratulations, Mr. St. Joe.

Getting that $800 in just a couple of weeks is something to pat yourself on the back for. It shows that you CAN do something when you want to.

It may not seem like very much to other folks; they may think we're harping too much about it when we go on at seeming length about just a little machine that makes a lot of noise and spouts a dense layer of insect-killing chemicals. But then maybe they haven't been around OUR mosquitoes very much.

A lot of people have helped to make it possible for you to enjoy the benefits of this machine. But then, you aren't the only one who will enjoy its benefits. Just because you live in the city limits doesn't mean that only you will notice the difference it can bring. Lots of folks who watch the youngsters - and older-sters - play ball evenings at the ball diamond will be more comfortable, no matter where they may live. Others who just come "calling" in town will know the difference, too. And some of the money that bought the machine came from a few miles out in the country.

But you, Mr. St. Joe, got things rolling and began giving to this fogger fund a couple of weeks ago. Then there were others who joined in by giving voluntarily and by responding to solicitors who gave their time to call house to house for contributions. And the money that the Scouts and the Lions gave came in might handy, too. All of which shows that things can be done, and they can be done so quickly when we start doing something ourselves rather than waiting for the other fellow to do something.

But this isn't the end of it. The fogger isn't the only thing necessary to improve community living. There are more possibilities, and you have shown some interest in the past few weeks in these other possibilities. Don't forget that the town board meets again next Monday evening, June 3. And you've said that you're interested in a program of street improvement, starting with completely paving the main street and constructing a uniform curb. This would be the beginning of a long-range program of improving all the streets in the town. You've seen from visits to other towns how just one item like good streets can add to the appearance and the value of the property in that town. And you'd like to make your home town more worth while, too.

Yes, congratulations are in order, Mr. St. Joe, and we give them to you for what you have done in just two weeks. But now set your sights on another target, our streets. And let the town board know your willingness to cooperate by coming to the board meeting next Monday evening and telling them about it.

Who Said That

From time to time as opinions are expressed in these editorial columns, a reader will ask if the comments or opinions in such-and-such an issue "are yours". We suppose they may think that the ideas expressed may have been inspired or influenced by the persons who are frequently involved in those expressions of opinion.

Yes, they are inspired, but no influence of the presurized or "pay-off" variety do we yield to. If someone wants something said, you know who it is.

It is not a very commendable attribute of a newspaper to say something which someone else has said and not give credit where credit is due - or allow the blame to fall where blame is due. Nor is it commendable to offer an opinion based on facts or statistics compiled by someone else without giving due credit therefore. From time to time what you read on these editorial pages may suit you or unsuit you to a greater extent than usual. And if readers "wonder if it's the editor's opinion", they can be assured that it is unless otherwise specified.

You have probably noted that the editorials follow a pattern of appearance. That is, the editor has his say first in an editorial or two and then other articles are presented following his efforts. This may not always be the pattern; and when the pattern does change, credit for the article is given at its conclusion.

Everyone is influenced by the things they hear from their contemporaries. And the editor is included in this group (editors ARE human). What he hears sometimes pleases him, sometimes displeases him. And often this pleasure or displeasure prompts an effort on his own to say something significant - he hopes. Whether the writing is good or bad, right or wrong, pleasant or unpleasant or what have you, depends upon the ideas and opinions of the reader. What we read we pass on to you usually because it reflects our feelings. There may be times when an opposite view is given to show what the "other side" is, and we believe this a necessary practice. But frankly speaking, usually we pass on what others have said because they have said it so well and they say what we want to say.

Editors, as anyone else, like to read writings which coincide with their ideas. It's rather reassuring to see where someone "bigger" feels the way you do. Sometimes - oftentimes - what someone "bigger" has said is said so much better that there is no alternative but to use the whole thing and tell you who said it. But when we take to the typewriter and you read something like this little bit and it appears at the begining of the editorial page and there is no name credit at its conclusion, you can mentally picture the signature of - "the Editor."

DECORATION DAY

This is May the thirtieth,
And it is Decoration Day,
When to our war dead,
Our respects we pay.

They left their father and mother,
Their sweetheart and friend,
That our United States' freedom,
They all could defend.

Today, memorial songs will be sung,
And many addresses made;
And on the graves of our war dead,
Many flowers will be laid.

Dear Lord, we sure hope,
You may hasten the day,
When our dear boys, at home,
With their parents may stay.

—Merwin J. Place, A.E.F.

Here's how INDIANA & MICHIGAN Electric Company's $12,727,704.00 Tax Bill was spent last year.....

Federal Income Tax $8,753,859.00

To help run our federal government, provide better roads, aid in national defense and all the other federal-supported projects, I&M's share of the tax load was nearly 9 million dollars. Like any other citizen, I&M is carrying its share of the federal tax load.

State Income and Personal Property Tax $3,270,851.00

Part of the tax money paid by I&M was used for the improvement and maintenance of school systems, welfare programs, public safety and highways, state parks and recreational facilities, colleges and universities. The balance went for other activities in connection with the administration and operation of state government.

Other State and Local Taxes $702,994.00

From inoculation of children to aid for the needy, I&M's tax dollars were working for all the people in this area. Without the taxes paid by such private enterprises as I&M, your own personal taxes would be higher in order to build bridges, airports, provide for public safety and administer the functions of government.

ROOTS OF HATRED

Lesson for June 2, 1957

If the hatred between Arabs and Jews today threatens to wreck the peace of the world, this is made worse by the fact that it has been going on for a long time. There is no hatred more bitter than that between brothers. The Bible shows that from ancient times, the most implacable enemies of Israel were among those people closely related to them by race. Indeed, the stories in Genesis trace this intra-family feud to two brothers, Jacob and Esau. In the story of how these two brothers became enemies, we can see some of the same roots of hatred which may be found anywhere in the world where one man or class or nation hates another.

Inherited Quarrels

As Jacob and Esau grew up, the hatred seemed to be all on one side. Jacob may have despised his brother, or feared him; but there is no evidence that Jacob ever hated Esau as Esau for a time hated Jacob. It takes two to make a quarrel, but only one to make a hate . . . Or is that quite true? The roots of hatred are not always in the hater; they may be in the one who is hated, or they may not be in either one. Part of the reason why Jacob and Esau, though brothers, were not brotherly was not their fault at all. In their home, father and mother were at odds. Isaac their father and Rebekah their mother had different, even clashing, temperatments. The boys being quite different from each other, their parents at once took sides. The mother played Jacob as her favorite while old Isaac did his best for the other brother, Esau. It can be said that humanly speaking, coming up in a divided home, Jacob and Esau could never have grown up in peace. They inherited the quarrels of their parents. And inherited quarrels never grow less bitter—usually more so.

Low-Down and Crooked

If one root of the hatred which Esau bore to his brother can be traced to their parents, another certainly must be traced to Jacob himself. He was hated because he was hateful. As Billy Sunday once said, Jacob in his younger days was so low-down he had to climb a tree to look a snake in the eye, and so crooked he could hide behind a corkscrew. The famous sale of the birthright has something decidedly fishy about it. Some historians believe that Esau could not legally (as laws went at that time) dispose of his birthright, it was inalienable. In that case Jacob was promoting a criminal act. In any event, legal or not, the trade was not a fair one. Indeed it was grotesquely, monstrously out of line. One bowl of stew for a birthright! Considering the power and (in this case) wealth which a birthright carried with it, the bargain was a bare-faced theft on Jacob's part. Then the theft of the blessing was even worse. It could not have been managed, one is inclined to say, if Isaac had been the least bit bright. Jacob need not have been surprised if, after that, Esau had murderous thoughts. When a man finds himself the object of another's hate, the first thing he should ask is, what have I been doing?

The Jealous Heart

But hatred grows also from roots in the heart of the hater. It is fairly clear that Esau never forgave Jacob for that birthright- business. Strictly speaking, while Jacob was mean enough, Esau had only himself to blame for losing his birthright. He was so much the victim of his appetite that a bowl of stew looked bigger and more important than all the power and responsibilty of a great birthright. He was by no means as near death as he said, and he had no right to lay all the blame for the bad bargain on his brother. But he did, and the thing rankled in his heart and he never, for years, forgot or forgave. So hatred may be partly the result of inherited quarrels, it may be partly rooted in a hateful attitude on the part of the one who is hated; but these other roots will wither in time unless they receive strength from the root that goes deep into the hater's soul. Conceit brings forth jealousy, and jealousy, long nourished, brings forth hate. And then not even murder is far away.

ST. JOE VALLEY HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB

The St. Joe Valley Home Demonstration Club met Friday afternoon, May 17, at the home of Iva Yeiser.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Doris Yeiser. The club collect was repeated in unison. History of the song of the month, "Carry Me Back To Ole Virginny," was read by Elizabeth Shull, then all joined in singing the song.

The project lesson on freezing was given by Laura Washler and Nancy Coburn. Meat boats and lima dill salad were demonstrated by Mrs. Washler and the apple-orange frost by Mrs. Coburn. Food prepared in the lesson was later served by the refreshment committee.

Response to roll call, favorite birds, was given by 12 members and 4 children.

After the business session, the meeting closed with singing of the prayer song. During the social hour, Marilyn Funk read several short poems. A seed and plant exchange was held. Lunch was served by the hostess assisted by co-hostesses Cora Curie and Laura Washler.

The next regular meeting will be held June 21 at the Lutheran Church in St. Joe with Emma Strombeck as hostess. Keyser Township Home Demonstration Club will be guests at this meeting.

Letters to the Editor

Spencerville, Indiana

Dear Rural Patron:

Again the spring season is here when people are repairing, cleaning and beautifying their home.

The Post Office Department has asked us all to join in this movement and has set the first and second week of June for Rural Mail Box Improvement Week, so that our mail boxes will add to the good appearance of our home; (and also be better and more convenient to use, both for the owner and rural carrier).

It is the desire of the department that serviceable mail boxes that will protect the mail from the weather and not injure the carrier should be erected on strong posts and properly supported. The boxes should be readily accessible to the carrier and be painted white with the name of the owner inscribed in black letters on the side visible to the carrier as he approaches the box. Where neighbors live close together, the boxes should be grouped, preferably on a shelf-like board attached on two or more strong posts and 3 1-2 to 4 ft. above the ground. All Mail Boxes should be erected on the right side of the road as traveled by the carrier.

A well placed and painted rural mailbox is a credit to every member of the community for Rural America is often judged by her millions of rural mail boxes which can with little effort present a pleasing monument to a great postal service.

We did a GOOD job last year, let's do BETTER this year and make our community BEST.

Your carrier and I will be glad to help you any way possible. Please help us to send a good report.

Your Rural Carrier
and Acting Postmaster
Josephine A. Crowl

Postmaster Ed Storer at St. Joe adds his request to the above letter for cooperation by the rural patrons in keeping mail boxes in good repair. —Ed.

Dear Friends,

Just to get the word to all of you at home that I'll soon be heading back to the U. S. once more for a few weeks.

I'll be in Colorado for Barbara's graduation on June 7th and on to Indiana about the middle of the month. My return date is for mid-July so I'll see you sometime in between.

This year's more than ever busy schedule has cut my personal correspondence to a minimum, but I surely do think of you often and hope to see you soon.

Best regards,
Harriet Oberlin

A feature article about Mrs. Oberlin appeared in the May 1 issue of "fourthmanship," publication of the Air Force, a copy of which was sent to Merl and Freida Guilford. — Ed.

Confusion Brought By Tax Change

A number of questions need to be answered regarding the $7 million voted by the 1957 Indiana Legislature for local "property tax relief funds," according to Dr. Marion McGhehey, executive-secretary of the Indiana School Boards Association.

Since the adjournment of the 90th session of the General Assembly, Dr. McGhehey said, there has been considerable discussion concerning the state distribution for public schools, particularly as it relates to the probable effect upon teachers' salaries. This discussion, he said, has been attended by publicity which has tended to create the impression that the General Assembly provided "plenty of money for local boards to raise teacher salaries," as quoted by one of the Indianapolis newspapers, with the plain implication that failure to grant substantial raises is due solely to obstinate school boards and superintendents.

One of the prime sources of difficulty has been the interpretation placed upon the establishment of the "Local Property Tax Relief Fund" with an appropriation of $7,000,000 for the biennium. This action has produced a number of questions due to the language used in this section of the budget bill. In order to protect local school officials it will be necessary to secure an official statement by responsible state officials as to the following questions:

1. Did the General Assembly intend to establish a new fund, separate and distinct from all presently existing funds?

2. If not, in which fund or funds should the distribution from this source be placed?

3. For what purposes may these funds be expended?

4. To what funds can the money received for the "local property tax relief fund" be transferred, and for what puproses may they be expended once transferred?

It is unfortunate that there has been some publicity which gives the impression that there will be $120 available in September of 1957 for each teacher in the State of Indiana. This $120 figure is an estimate of the effect of the $7 million appropriation upon the average minimum foundation unit. Some corporations will get considerably less per classroom unit, and some corporations will get more.

There has been some confusion concerning the repeal of the state property tax. In order to clarify this situation there are two things which should be noted:

1. The repeal of the state property tax is not effective this year. That is, the tax rates for 1957 taxes payable in 1958 will include the full 15c state property tax levy. In 1958 (payable in 1959) the state rate will be reduced to 8c and in 1959 (payable in 1960) the rate will be reduced to 1c.

2. Once this repeal becomes fully effective in 1959, it should be noted that local school corporations will have to compete with the needs of other taxing units of government for this 14c of taxing power.

Therefore, local school units will not be able to use any part of this state property tax rate during the coming school year for meeting increases in the cost of school operation, including teachers' salaries.

Dr. John A. Schindler, M. D., in his book "How to Live 365 Days a Year" makes these pertinent remarks, "If you are going to limp through year after year of anxious, troubled misery; 100 years, or 75, or 50, is an interminable hell on earth; the shorter life is, under such conditions, the better; none at all would be best.

But once you learn the trick of striding along, eyes calm with equanimity; head up with determination; chest out with courage; a pleasant word for fellow travelers, and resignation on meeting rough, rocky roads; your years will beg repetition, and your living will be a fascinating enterprise that you would welcome for a hundred years.

The choice of whether to limp or to stride is yours — RIGHT NOW!"

We feel, here at Ort's, that we can assist you in your feeling of well-being in two very important ways. We are of the opinion that we can make your surroundings so pleasant with suitable furnishings in your home and your personal appearance so improved with just the right piece of jewelry that you'll want to go "singing along" thru the years.

VOLUME LXXII — ST. JOE, (DeKalb Co.), IND. — Thursday, June 6, 1957 — NUMBER 23

Around the Town

With the Editor

I feel old.

An item in the county daily the other day noted that it has been 20 years - think of it, 20 years - since Amelia Earhart disappeared on her round-the-world flight.

Seems like only yesterday.

For somebody who hasn't been around here long, Bob Miller is sure getting himself in the middle of things. He's a pretty busy fella what with all the help he's been giving the baseball and softball leagues with his umpiring.

It kinda puts him on the spot, though, when he gets a game like Monday's when he had to call the balls and strikes of brother Don's pitching.

The post office had it in for yours truly this week. I think it was a test of my vanity - or something. One morning I spun the combination on the lock box, opened the little door and pulled out the mail and there on top was an envelope addressed to "The Most Important Music Teacher In Town." I said, "Hey, you got this in the wrong box," and told Ford Jackson and Harvey Hull, who were in the post office lobby also, what was on the envelope. They laughted and from behind the boxes came Ed's chuckle and Paul's laugh and I think it was a put-up job.

Boy, you just never know from how far an item may come just to get in the St. Joe News. The local about Mrs. Bishop came clear from Rocky River, Ohio, from Mrs. H. Russell Hathaway.

That's a coupla hundred miles, isn't it?

Mr. Rinehart from the Rinehart Manufacturing Co., now building a new factory west of Spencerville, says production of livestock and poultry feeder equipment at the site will probably get underway this summer with 6 to 8 people employed.

They need some office help, as you can see by the ads.

A reader who prefers to remain anonymous sends in a reminder of the broadcasts of Billy Graham from Madison Square Garden the next three Saturday nights on the ABC network. You can get the time and station, can't you?

From our Spencerville correspondent:

"Ted:

"Do you remember the man - Carl Meehan - that wrote you a note from Dallas, Texas? He always enjoyed the St. Joe News after Midge and Dave read it. Well, it was quite a shock to them when Carl was killed in a jet crash near Dallas a week ago. He was a Marine Lt. and from Mass. He was buried in Arlington National Cemetery.

"Thought you mould like to know about it.

Janice."

Mr. Meehan sent a letter to the News some months ago about the enjoyment he got from the poems written by Merwin Place.

As Jack Parr says, "- - and so it goes."

Rec'n Program Starts Monday

The summer program of 1957 begins next Monday, June 10, and will include daily recreational activity. On Mondays baseball practice and instruction will be given at St. Joe from 9 a.m. to noon. Church League games are played Monday evenings beginning at 7:30 p.m.

On Tuesdays the gym will be open at St. Joe from 9 to 11 a.m. Little League baseball games are played at 6:30 p.m. Recreational activities for girls will be led from 10 to 11 a.m.

On Wednesdays a trip to Hamilton Lake for swimming will be made with a bus leaving Spencerville at 9 a.m. to stop then at St. Joe before continuing on to the lake. The bus will return at 4 p.m. Pony League baseball games are played at 8 p.m.

On Thursdays the St. Joe gym will be open from 9 to 11 a.m. with Little League games played at 6:30 p.m.

Fridays' activities will include baseball practice and instruction at Spencerville from 9 a.m. to noon. Church League games are played at the St. Joe diamond starting at 7:30 p.m.

This weekly schedule will continue through the summer months with possible changes to fit the needs of the community.

Coach Brokfield also announced that high school baseball home games will be played Wednesday at 6 p.m. or practice at 6 p.m. with some games scheduled on Monday and Friday. Away games will be played on Tuesday or Thursday.

Invitation To Be Father For A Day

Members of the St. Joe American Legion Post and the St. Joe Boy Scout Troop are now conducting a campaign to sell tickets to the Father and Son Fishing Derby which both organizations are sponsoring and which will be held later this month. The date announced for the derby is Saturday, June 22.

All men an boys are eligible to enter the contest, the only requirement being that they enter in pairs, as "father and son." Since some families have more than one son and there may be some men who wish to be a "father" for a day, sponsors of the contest have announced that pairings of the extra boys and dads is planned so that more may take part in the event. Pairings will be made by the sponsors if desired if these surplus entrants will notify Frank Sechler, Bob Musser or the News Office.

The entry fee has been set at $1.25. This covers entry of both the father and son in the fishing contest plus food to be served at the closing time of the contest, 4.30 p.m. The contest begins at 4:30 a.m.

Fishing must be done within the boundaries as designated by the sponsors, on the St. Joe River between the Orangeville dam and Dills Bridge near St. Joe. Prizes will be awarded at the conclusion of the day's fishing. Fishing will be done from the river bank; no boats will be allowed.

If weather should be unfavorable for the contest on the scheduled Saturday, a rain-out date has been set for the following Saturday, June 29.

All men and boys are urged and invited to participate in this non-profit venture.

An Important Decision

In two weeks a hearing will be held on the application of a local resident for a license to operate a tavern. A few years ago a similar hearing was held which led to subsequent hearings relative to physical measurements between church and tavern, hearings which were strung out over a period of many months. But much of the controversy which arises in any community over the possibility of the opening of a tavern, particularly in a community in which no tavern has been operated for some time, arises over the injection of morals into the situation. It makes a man or a group of men become judge or judges in something in which they are not qualified to judge. It happens in St. Joe.

The question of drinking comes up so often when people speak of the troubles of the world. And it is not to be denied that the act of drinking does contribute to the complexity of modern living. There is a difference, however, between drinking and excessive drinking and often the two are spoken of as one and the same. Opinions opposing a tavern in St. Joe in this instance as in the past refer to the drunkenness of some who hang out in taverns and waste their money on excessive drinking. The hurt they cause their families because of their wastefulness is pointed out as a reason for not having a tavern. Indeed, their excessive use of alcohol appears to make anyone who drinks a drunkard. So, because of the excessive use of alcohol by some, the considerate use of it by others is to be denied.

If we choose to turn to the Bible for backing up our reasoning, be it for one "side" or the other, we will find that the men and women who are held in high esteem for their contribution to the spreading of the Christian religion were, despite their final high standing in the minds of men, also quite sinful on occasion. And we also will find many references to the sin of drunkenness. But also within the same pages of the Bible there are words which refer to the overall conduct of mankind, words which have to do with temperance. What is temperance? Isn't that the use of something wisely, considerately? And what about others acts of sinfulness? Are there not some stories within the Bible of the illicit relationships between men and women? Is this not sinful? Are we then to prohibit men and women, boys and girls from talking with one another and associating with one another because it might lead to something worse? It would seem so if we are to prevent a tavern from opening because of the excesses of a few.

What about the beloved American automobile? It is used abusively by those who are drunk with drink. They are a menace to society. An honest look at the overall picture will show, however, that there are also sober men, including those who haven't had a drink lately and those who "never touch the stuff", who are just as much a menace on the highway as the drunk. Indeed, the average driver is a menace because of his human frailties. Do we then deny the automobile to all because of the misuse by the few?

The manner in which a tavern is operated has much, if not all, to do with the effect the presence of a tavern has on a community. It is up to the proprietor to select his way of doing business, just as it is up to any other businessman to select his manner of conducting his business. A tavern is somewhat different, to be sure, but ethics apply to it as all other business ventures. As long as the state of Indiana has set up laws regarding the operation of a tavern and those laws are complied with, a tavern can be operated. There is no provision in those laws for the question of morals in reference to the use of alcoholic bevarages.

Local conditions have their influence on the operation of a tavern. St. Joe is without local law enforcement facilities. This may be reason to oppose the presence of a tavern in this community, it may be sufficient reason to prevent opening a tavern here. But here there enters that manner in which such a business is conducted and we may feel that the power of public opinion would be or not be sufficient to control the tavern's method of operation.

Personal feelings determine the individual stand concerning the presence of a tavern in St. Joe. And it is necessary to look at all possibilities before determining whether or not there should be one here. Such "possibilities", however, do not include the question of immorality of drinking.

PRO BUDGET PROPAGANDA

In their zeal to defend President Eisenhower and his 72 billion dollar budget certain newspaper columnsists are resorting to dubious propaganda techniques, discredited years ago. They brand the opposition as isolationists or aiders of the Communists.

In a column a few days ago, one of America's leading women journalists, Marguerite Higgins, whose writings I normally greatly admire, wrote a long piece headlined: "An Isolationist By Any Other Name."

Her thesis was a simple one: anyone who proposes cutting Ike's big budget is an isolationist, especially if he advocates cutting foreign aid.

Drew Pearson grew even more eloquent in his May 18 column, written at 3 a.m. in Washington in the form of a letter to his three-year-old grandson.

With tears in his eyes and a lump in his throat, Drew pictured his little grandson being killed in World War III as a result of the selfishness of today's adults who don't want to pay taxes sufficient to finance 72 billion dollar Federal budgets.

David Lawrence, the elder statesman among America's newspaper columnists, and one of the staunchest defenders of the Republic, warned in a recent column that those opposing Ike's huge budget are unwittingly aiding the Communists. He viewed with the deepest alarm any budget cutting.

Having spent nearly all the past seven years living in Europe, it is with astonishment that I return on a visit and discover such reputedly conservative writers as Higgins and Lawrence blindly defending super multi-billion dollar budgets in peacetime and trying to label those who criticize such budgets as "isolationists" or "aiding the Communists."

It is no doubt true that the handful of isolationists in Congress are in favor of reduced foreign aid appropriations. But for every isolationist in favor of reduced foreign aid spending and a cut in Ike's budget there are a dozen "internationalists" who favor such reductions.

As a former Government economist and adviser who spent from 1946 until 1950 studying our foreign aid program in Europe, making on the spot investigations in each leading European country year by year, I want to go on record as saying that, in my opinion, the valuable results of our Marshall Plan foreign aid program could have been achieved with appropriations 25 per cent smaller. In other words, Uncle Sam spent 17 billions when 12 or 13 would have been sufficient.

The time to have begun cutting the volume of our foreign aid was in 1951 when most of the countries in western Europe had recovered economically and with only one or two exceptions were producing well above pre-war levels. Today some of the nations are producing 50 per cent and more above pre-war levels and their standards of living are highest in history.

To me, the comprehensive, logical arguments being advanced by scores of American newspaper editors, Republican, Democrat and independent, supporting a reduction in the 72 billion dollar budget, are far more convincing than those of the columnists who predict disaster if we cut the budget by as little as five or six per cent.

No Executive Department should be treated as a sacred cow, neither the State Department nor the Department of National Defense. All requested appropriations should be gone over with a fine tooth comb, something which Congress has apparently neglected for some years to do until this year.

When I was in the U.S. Department of Commerce a few years ago, it was standard operating pratice each year for Section and Division Chiefs to submit estimates of our next year's financial requirements which were 30 to 40 per cent above what we reasonably expected to get. If Congress gave us as much as they had the preceding year we considered ourselves fortunate.

—John B. Crane, May, 1957.

QUESTIONS FOR YOU!

In recent weeks we have been discussing the U. S. Army's careful study of Communist "brain-washing" of American prisoners of war in North Korea and the significant findings. Of the 7,000 prisoners, constituting a cross-section of healthy young adult Americans, 3,000 died. This was an unprecedented percentage of deaths attributable to "a lack of determination to survive." Most of the 4,000 survivors, the Army study indicated, succumbed in some degree to the Communist "brain-washing."

The Communists found the Americans weak in many fundamental characteristics. The Army is inclined to charge this weakness not to the men but to a partial breakdown of responsibilities in the American home, and school, and church. In summation the Army seems to say that we haven't been doing an adequate job of teaching the oncoming generation in these three pivot-points of education, the home. the school and the church. Our American young men in the Communist POW camps simply had not been taught strongly enough the basic human, spiritual, economic and political values which form the substance of our American way of life.

What can we citizens do about this grave omission which, unless corrected, can generate a fatal weakness? The home is the first area where improvement can be made. Up through the generations of America's progress by example and with every other educational means parents have inculcated in their children the great virtues of honesty, loyalty, love of God and fellow man, discipline, self-sacrifice, self-reliance, resourcefulness. This has been a responsibility of parenthood.

In our present generation, have we let it slip, have we put it off until "tomorrow"—day after day after day? In the hurly-burly of "modern life." have we parents subordinated the important responsibilties, have we been lured away from the genuine values by a set of synthetic false values? Many signs indicate that too many of us have. But each citizen must answer for himself.

In what way are we defaulting our responsibilities in American schools and colleges? Many schools and colleges in recent years have begun a positive program of teaching the advantages of the American political and economic system, of inculcating character virtues and love of God and country. But a far greater number are not yet participating in this basic responsibility. The institution of education in American life is an indispensable instrument for building strong resistance against Communist and Socialist propaganda.

Every school child should be taught American history, the incomparable value of Constitutional government, the comparative advantages of the private ownership, free enterprise economic system. Children from the eighth grade up should be constantly reminded—yes, in school—that the American living standard is three times better than that achieved by any Socialist system in the world, and from five to ten times better than ever produced by Communism anywhere. This is a responsibility of the citizen-patron as well as the teacher, the administrator and the school board member. Are we fulfilling it? Not enough of us are.

A third area for strengthening is the church. Men with abiding faith in God and the character that grows from such conviction did not succumb to the Communist "brain-washing." They had basic values to cling to, principles to which they were dedicated. A church that is fulfilling its high commission equips young men and women with a set of inner disciplines and with challenging responsibilties. It inspires them toward Christian living, toward self-reliance, toward out-giving.

Along with the Christian home, the church constructs and constantly revitalizes the spiritual foundations upon which the school and the college can build. If the church fails in its mission the home and the school cannot survive. The church is eternal but its mission is the responsibility of each new generation of mankind. Are we as individuals adequately responding to this challenge? Each must answer for himself. The Communists believe that we are not. They expect to win the world for atheism. They already have taken nearly half of it.

SECRET REPORT 'INDICTS' INDUSTRY FOR INFLATION

In the locked files of Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey), the largest oil corporation in the entire world, there is a secret report—one of the most exhaustive studies ever made by any private concern of the reasons why the cost of living in our land has been climbing almost without interruption since the end of World War II.

The report, as I understand it, shows dramatically which has been most responsible for our creeping inflation—industry's price boosts year after year, or labor's wage demands year after year.

The study is finished, ready for publication. But it hasn't been released by Standard Oil and the odds are it won't be.

"Why?" I bluntly asked Monroe J. Rathbone, Standard Oil's president, when he disclosed the existence of the study in a private talk. "Does it 'indict' people you don't want to see 'indicted'?"

The tall, worldly, highly articulate man who runs this oil colossus shrugged his shoulders expressively .

"It is an indictment,' he said. And after a bit more prodding, he added, "Yes, it is an indictment of some in industry."

I didn't have to press Rathbone any further. The industrial giants of our land don't make a hobby of tossing bricks at each other in public. Rathbone's reticence told the tale.

Standard Oil's unpublished report must reveal that despite the fact that labor is getting most of the blame for the postwar inflation, the pricing practices of some of our basic industries have been the more important reason for the cost-of-living spiral.

The top brass of Standard Oil threw a party a few days ago in the city and I stopped by. It was billed as a "no-work" affair, but — well, if you had a chance to chat privately with the head of Jersey Standard, would you waste the time talking about the weather?

Here is how Rathbone answered my questions on matters of deep bread-and-butter interest to you.

Is there any possibility of a reduction in the prices of gasoline and fuel oil in the foreseeable future?

No. There will be price wars here and there. There will be seasonal dips and competitive clashes which will give buyers temporary bargains. "But assuming economic conditions remain as they are, I can't see general price cuts. Rising costs are eliminating this trend."

Is the future then one of higher and higher prices?

There won't be any more price hikes "this year." The oil firms are having trouble enough making the January boosts stick.

"But over the longer term, prices of gas and oil are going up. Rising prices of materials we must buy, rising wages in our industry and others, the needs for us to finance enormous expansion and research programs at increasing costs are putting constant pressure on prices. As the costs of doing business go up, gas and oil prices will go up too."

In view of your record earnings ($808 million net in 1956, $237 million in the first quarter of 1957), isn't this price trend hard to justify?

As far as Rathbone is concerned, it isn't: he makes "no apologies" for price hikes or peak profits. Instead, he insists Standard Oil must make the profits so it has the cash to finance its huge expansion—set at $1.2 billion for 1957 alone. He sees the demand for oil growing at a fantastic rate, doubling by 1975. "It's better to have higher prices and sufficient oil than lower prices and oil shortages that will stop the economic machine in its tracks."

But where will this price trend end?

"I don't know. That's what scares me more than anything else. I just don't know the answers."

And this admission of impotence - or at least failure on the part of a man of Rathbone's power to see how the spiral can be stopped - is the grimmest part of this grim report.

If neither giant business nor giant labor nor giant government will take positive action to curb it, where does it end?

—Sylvia Porter, May 1957.

JUST NEIGHBORS

Along about this time of year,
When haymaking time is drawing near;
We get out the wagons, the chopper and mower,
And at the silo, we set up the blower.
Then we fill the silo with grass nice and green,
And that makes silage fit for a queen.
And then haymaking, gee but it's fun,
To see Leonard's John Deere make that hay chopper run;
And fill the wagons with hay nice and sweet,
That our jersey cows just love to eat.
Then Bob (that's Jarrett's boy) and I,
We blow the hay into the mow so high,
Till Bob comes down and says, "Hey! Stop!"
The mow is full, clear up to the top."
We dairy men don't make much "mon",
But making the hay is lots of fun.

Roy C. Abel, St. Joe, Ind., to T. E. Habercorn: send Greeting:

Find enclosed P.O. money order for 2.00 two dollars and no cents to be added on to my expired date, one year therefrom.

I will need no reading material after that, as I am now in the last stage of cancer of the nervous system and as the disease has for some time into my brain mounted, I can read now only at periods of brightness, and I will soon be an idiot, and next death. I feel that I have much to live for, but in the stage this world is in now, and the evil it's Satanic course by geometrical progression until the battle of Armagedon. And the sooner I am out of it the better. The medical title of my affliction is multiple sclerosis. I am past 80 years.

Very sincerely,

Dear Sir:

Will you please start my yearly subscription to your paper with your next issue and also send me the back copies which contain the obituaries of Merritt Butler and Mrs. Frank Beams and send me bill for the same. I will mail you a check at once.

So many of my Spencerville friends write and say "You no doubt heard about - - -" and do not write particulars.

Remember me to Ann Sechler - I knew her in Seymour, Ind. before she was married to Ralph Sechler.

Dear Mr. Haberkorn:

Just noted in tearing wrapper of copy of the News that the digits 1-57 appear after my name. This is evidence that I have not paid for the 1957 subscription. This is a poor way for an ex-publisher of a newspaper. Had any of the subscribers failed to pay up at expiration of subscription, when I was publisher, the mailing clerk would have taken name off the list. It appears that you are somewhat lenient with an old St. Joe community resident. My apologies and thanks for extension of credit.

The total class honored numbered more than 2,700. However, attendance at the exercises was optional for the January and August graduates.

Mr. Gorrell received a degree as bachelor of physical education and Mr. Wilder received his degree of bachelor of science in agriculture.

Among the August graduates was Ronald E. Kruse of Spencerville who received a bachelor of science degree in chemical engineering.

Student Supply HereForSummer

A summer supply pastor has been obtained for the Lutheran parish in the St. Joe and Spencerville communities. He is Mr. Arthur Sziemeister of Buffalo, New York. Mr. Sziemeister arriver from Mt. Airy seminary in Philadelphia Saturday afternoon. After lodging in a Spencerville home for two nights, he moved into the Lutheran parsonage at Spencerville. Members of the Lutheran churches did a quick housecleaning job Saturday afternoon to assist the student pastor in getting settled in his "summer home."

The young student pastor will be a senior at Mt. Airy in the fall and will be ordained in the spring of 1958. As summer supply for St. Mark's in St. Joe and St. Peter's in Spencerville, he will perform many pastoral duties within the parish.

Four To Be Confirmed

St. Mark's Lutheran Church of St. Joe has announced plans for its observance of Pentecost or Whitsunday on Sunday, June 9, at morning worship services and administering of the Rite of Confirmation in the afternoon at 2 p.m.

The Christian Pentecost had its origin when the Christian community of Jerusalem (120 people) gathered together, 50 days after the resurrection, to celebrate an age-old religious festival. At that time, according to the second chapter of the Book of Acts, the Holy Spirit which Jesus had promised His followers descended upon them, and some 3000 converts were made to faith in Christ. Many historians date from that event the beginning of the Christian Church, and in particular its sense of world-wide mission and responsibility. It is a time of renewal and revitalization, a time of promise fulfilled and of setting out to share this good news with all one's fellow-men, even in the furtherest parts of the earth.

In the early Church, Pentecost ranked with Christmas and Easter as the third great festival of the Christian year. It was considered one of the most joyous times of the church calendar and was celebrated with songs and festivals.

At St. Mark's the Rite of Confirmation will be administered at a special 2:00 p.m. service to Carol Jean Baker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton A. Baker, Jerry and James Kline, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Kline, and John R. Baker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton E. Baker.

These four young people have completed satisfactorily a one-year course of catechetical study under the direction of Dr. Allan Hauck, pastor of St. Mark's Lutheran Church of Auburn. Their classes met for two hours each Saturday morning during the school year. They have studied the life of Christ, the history of the Christian Church, the Ten Commandments, The Lord's Prayer, the Apostle's Creed and other information of religious value.

At confirmation these young people will confirm or accept for themselves the promises made at their baptisms by their parents in the Lord. By this rite they will be received into the congregation as adult members and will be extended the privilege of receiving the Sacrament of Holy Communion.

Following the afternoon service a reception for the four young people will be held in the lower church. Refreshments will be served by the Women of the Church.

A copy of the new church hymnal will be presented to the members of the confirmation class upon publication of the hymnal in the spring of 1958.

Neighbors and friends of the confirmands are welcome to attend this service and to share this significant event in the lives of the confirmands.

... Chevrolet with Turboglide!

Chevy's come up with the newest, sweetest, smoothest automatic drive—Turboglide. It's the first and only triple-turbine transmission!

Turboglide is something really new and different in automatic drives. In the first place, there's only one forward-speed position on the control panel. There's no "Low" needed.

Turboglide handles everything with the oil-smooth action of triple turbines. You travel from a standstill to top cruising speeds with never a lurch or lag to mar your motion.

When you see a steep downhill stretch ahead, you set the selector at "GR" (Grade Retarder) and Turboglide helps slow you down.

Try Chevy's new, nothing-like-it automatic drive. It's optional at extra cost—and worth it.

RECONCILED

Lesson for June 9, 1957

At the heart and beginning of the Christian life there is not a theory, or a set of propositions, but an experience. It is the experience which is sometimes called healing, for the broken tissues of life are made whole again. It is sometimes called conversion, literally a turning-around, for in it the direction and course of life is changed. It is sometimes called forgiveness, so that the church is called the fellowship of the forgiven. But there is another word still which sums up and expresses this central experience: Reconciliation. What this means can be seen in the story of a man who never really found himself — as no one does — short of being reconciled both with God and with man.

Peace With God

There are two meanings (and more) of this word Reconciliation, and at the risk of insulting some readers intelligence the difference between these meanings must be pointed out. In one meaning of the word, we say we are reconciled to something we can't help, as a cripple becomes reconciled to the loss of his legs or a man is reconciled to his old age. Some people are "reconciled to God" only in this sense: they recognize his power and they bow to it—but they still don't like it and they do not love him. This is not true reconciliation in the Bible sense. True reconciliation means restoring a lost harmony, it means meeting with God in such a way that all the resentment, all the hostility and fear in our hearts is burned away by his Presence, and we feel ourselves at home with him. This is what happened, essentially, to Jacob at the brook where he wrestled with the mysterious stranger. Whatever we make of that story, it is plain what Jacob thought about it. "I have seen the face of God," he said. Before that day, Jacob had had only one center of his interest: himself. After that day, he was God's man. He was really born again. He had been at cross-purposes with God, now he was reconciled. God's will was his will. Thinking correct thoughts about God is never enough. One must personally meet him, personally yield to him, be personally reconciled.

Peace With Man

Right along with reconciliation with God comes reconciliation with man. In Jacob's case, as with most persons, there was one particular man to whom he had to be reconciled—his brother, Esau. When a man is converted, there is usually some particular person with whom he needs to become a brother again. It is an interesting fact that Jacob knew this well before his all-night meeting with God. But his idea of being reconciled with Esau was to buy him off, pay him to be friendly, by sending him large presents of fine cattle. After Jacob met with God, he somehow knew that this was not the way. The only thing was to meet his brother in person. What happened between them had to happen in their hearts, it was nothing that could be measured in money. And Jacob said a startling thing, something he could not have thought of saying 20 years before: "To see your face is like seeing the face of God."

Neither Without the Other

Peace with God and with man—they cannot be separated. No one can be really reconciled to God who cherishes hate or envy or anger toward his fellow-men. And no one can be heart-reconciled with other persons who is a stranger to the love of God. The New Testament makes it quite clear who needs to be reconciled to whom. It is never said there that God needs to be reconciled to man; but always that man must be reconciled to God. It is man's heart that needs to be changed, not God's. Jesus put both of these reconciliations inseparably together. Matt. 5:23, 24. If you are offering your gift at the altar—and this was a token of reconciliation with God—and at that very moment remember that your brother has something against you, stop right there. Leave your gift, and go. Be reconciled to your brother first, and then come and offer your gift to God. God desires the gift of man's heart; but he does not desire the gift of a heart which is unreconciled to a brother-man.

Get in the fine-car swim at the low Ford price!

There's no need to pay a "fancy price" to enjoy fine-car luxury. Ford is lowest priced of the low-price three, yet offers values you'd expect only in cars costing far more!*

To start with, you can easily pay twice the money, and not find lines that can hold a candle to Ford's for lowness, loveliness, or just plain good taste.

But step inside. That's when you'll find the real evidence of Ford's quality!

And, on the way in, note that Ford offers door checks that hold doors open in either of two positions—for easy entrance or exit. A little thing. But, in a fine car, why not? Then, inside, notice how comfortable those plush, foam-rubber seats are. They'll stay that way. And on long trips. For they're scientifically contoured over non-sag springs. Your rear-seat passengers are treated extra kindly, too—with spring assists to help them open and close the doors—with the most leg room in Ford's field!

Fine cars are smooth—and that's another place Ford really shows its stuff!

Ford delivers its famous V-8 power smooth as a whisper. That's because only Ford takes the pains to electronically balance each engine while running under its own power. Not even the makers of the most expensive automobiles go this far to bring you super-smooth performance.

Ford rides fine-car smooth and quiet, too. You can thank the new "Inner Ford" for that. Ford, for instance, has a swept-back front suspension that actually "rolls with the punch" of every road bump.

Ford's rear springs automatically adjust to give the right ride for every road. And Ford keeps things quiet, with the most sound insulation in its field.

Fine cars are built to stay solid. So's Ford!

Ford has the only frame in its field to make use of rugged tubular steel beams. No car at the price offers so many roof-strengthening beams. Expensive cars aren't built of thicker body steel or with sounder engineering skill. Then, of course, in Ford you can have all the power assists and other conveniences found in fine cars. And they cost far less in Ford.* Yes sir! In every feature, every part, Ford is the fine car at half the fine-car price. Come in and see!

Joe Laurie, Jr., tells about a friend of his who made the mistake of leaving her baby daughter in her husband's care while she closeted herself in the library to pay bills.

He buried himself behind his newspaper and forgot about the baby until he heard a series of thumps, followed by a horrendous wail. Clearly, baby had fallen down the stairs.

"Martha," called the father excitedly. "Come quick! Our little girl just took her first 24 steps!"

We, here at Ort's feel that such neglect is rather rough on baby. Rather, we'd suggest any of the many items that we have in our baby goods department, such as strollers, walkers, jumpers, carriages, swings, baby brigs, play pens, etc. Please see this equipment so your babies can take their steps in stride. Byron said of a baby, "A rose with all its sweetest leaves yet folded.'

Around the Town

With the Editor

This could happen in the future:

Planning a vacation stay in Florida, the retired railroader didn't know what to do with his dog. He decided to write the hotel and ask if dogs were allowed.

Promptly, the hotel manager wrote back: "Dear Mr. Ewell. I've been in this business for thirty years. Never have I called on police to eject a disorderly dog. Never has a dog set fire to a bed with a cigarette. I have never found a hotel towel or blanket in a dog's suitcase. Nor a whiskey ring on a dresser. Sure the dog is welcome." And the manager added a postscript: "If the dog will vouch for you, come along too!"

This might happen:

It was a slow day at the garage and Jiggs and Ben were preparing to play a few hands of poker when they discovered that they didn't have any cash with them.

"We'll have to substitute something for money," said Jiggs. "I think the logical thing would be for us to play for tools."

"OK," said Ben, "but if we play for tools, will it take jacks or better to open?"

Did you notice that quote of Byron's in Ort's "Corner" last week? I thought it was a nice one.

About a baby: ". . .a rose with all its sweetest leaves yet folded."

Some fellows sure know how to put words together.

Mary Krise, one of the News' subscribers from way back, stopped in last week to pay up and commented on her enjoying the paper—which The News greatly appreciates.

His wife lay on her death bed. She pleaded: "John, I want you to make me a promise. Will you ride in the same car with mother to the funeral?"

He sighed: "OK, but it's going to spoil my whole day."

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank friends and neighbors and the Walter Funeral Home for their kindness and helpfulness at the death of Grover Boger.

Heart Attack Fatal To Former Resident

A former resident of St. Joe, Garford A. Smith, died suddenly of a heart attack last Thursday while working in the yards of the B&O Railroad. He had begun employment only a week before, having hired out as a fireman on May 29.

Mr. Smith was a member of a crew preparing to take an engine out into the Willard, O., yards. The engine was standing still on the ready track and Mr. Smith had thrown a few shovels full of doal into the fire box and was standing by watching the fire. Suddenly he slumped over. The engineer, John R. Browning of Willard, helped Mr. Smith to his feet and asked what was wrong. "I don't know," was the reply. Mr. Smith was being helped to his seat when he collapsed a second time. A doctor was called and he was pronounced dead of a heart attack. Mr. Smith was 40 years of age.

St. Joe residents will remember Mr. Smith from his co-proprietorship of the Shamrock Fountain in a portion of the building now occupied by Clauser's Trading Post. Mr. Smith and his wife, Betty, and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elton Howard, operated the soda fountain and drug store for several years until 1951. Mrs. Howard died while a resident of St. Joe prior to the closing of the soda fountain. Mr. Howard and the Smiths then moved to Garrett.

Too Much To Use

One of the peculiar trends of thought in this country today is that the great wealth of material possessions which has become commonplace in the average home is not the result of individual effort but of group endeavor. At first this might not seem a controversial opinion, but a closer look reveals that such a condition is basically what we are supposedly attempting to overcome in our efforts to promote the cause of freedom. What is meant by "freedom" necessarily becomes of primary importance. It is useless and fruitless to be saying one thing while doing another, but that is often the situation in which we find ourselves today. We say we are promoting the cause of individual freedom and at the same time we, to a certain extent, say that the fruits of today's living are not the result of such freedom but of our group activities.

Organizations pop up each day in local, state and national news. Each has a purpose for its beginning, usually a purpose which has a direct bearing upon a certain group within our society. The extent to which these organizations act determines the extent to which we may consider them "good" for society as a whole. It is not fair to say, for insance, that labor is wrong in organizing to protect itself and to promote the welfare of the laborer. But the extent to which labor organizations go in "protecting" their members is subject to question. When it becomes the business of a few to determine what many need or actually want or expect from their employers, the propriety of the group's activities becomes questionable. For they in effect then say that the average laborer is not capable of taking care of himself and he therefore needs someone to act for him and think for him. This is directly contrary to the basic faith necessary in a free society, that the free individual is also intelligent enough to do his own thinking.

It is not fair to pick on labor to make an example of impropriety of organizational activity. We can look to the other side of the same picture and see management in the collective form of many companies organizing, for instance, in a group such as the National Association of Manufacturers. They do so to protect their interest in the business world and in the labor-management relationship field. It is not fair to them to say they are wrong to organize in this way because much of the efficiency promoted within industry itself may be directly or indirectly connected to the group activity which such an industrial organization carries on, matters of operational efficiency, even relationships with labor, things which are passed from one to another for mutual benefit and which eventually come to benefit the general public. But organized management also exceeds its proper bounds when it thinks and acts only in terms of itself.

That some good comes from such organizational activity is apparent, or there would be no such activity. That there is some bad arising from such activity is also apparent or there would be fewer news reports in the papers of today numbering the times that leaders of such organizations have resorted to the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. While much good has come into our everyday living through organizational activities, it is necessary to use considerable thought to determine when we should say "no" to the group and preserve our necessary rights and privileges and duties as individual citizens. Does it seem proper that millions of dollars should be accumulated in any organizational treasury, leading to ill use by one or a few individuals? Does it seem proper that such funds also can be used to influence the results of an election, an election in which we are supposed to assert our individual preferences according to our own individual good judgment? Is it proper that by sheer numbers, representing the membership lists of these organizations, the affairs of our national living can be influenced at the discretion of a few leaders?

The unfortunate aspect of the whole thing is that sometimes people feel compelled to resort to their group affiliation in order to gain what appears to be a justified goal. It is unfortunate but true that, despite our word-of-mouth belief in individual freedom, we feel we must organize in order to advance ourselves. Many of the groups prevalent in our nation today came as a matter of retaliation or as a matter of reaction to a previous action. If, for instance, labor is going to have its union, we are going to have our organization of manufacturers, says the industrialist. And if one has a lobby group in the state or national capitol, the other also has a lobby group in the same place. And on it goes down the line until we have not a free individual society but a society of suposed free individuals who are yet working and thinking as a group or groups. Such group acting and thinking can sometimes - not always - promote results which are not for the good of all society. Thus it is necessary to use discretion as to the extent to which organizational activity should go.

The extent to which such group acting and thinking goes today cannot be given in so many numbers or such and such a percentage. But the fact remains that there are millions of dollars at the command of a few and millions of names on membership lists, also at the command of a few, which are being used to the detriment of our free society.

RECOGNITION FOR A LEADER

(Editor's note: Glenn A Green, Associate Director of the National Education Program, has persuaded Dr. Benson to let him write this week's column so that an event in Dr. Benson's life might be shared with readers of this series.)

Dr. Benson, as many of this column's readers know, is President of Harding College as well as Director of the National Education Program. Harding is unique. It has pioneered in developing educational courses and materials on the American way of life. Hundreds of public school and college educators from throughout the nation have come to Harding during recent years to observe its methods and obtain its materials.

The Year Book of the 1957 Graduating Class contained a dedication requiring nine pages of beautiful color photography and presenting an inspiring text written by the Senior Class, which said:

"Dedicated to building a greater trust in God and appreciation for our nation, Harding College has founded an educational program that has merited nation-wide acknowledgement. Harding views the American way of life as having its anchorage in God's laws. She stressed recognition of the worth and dignity of self-reliance and freedom, thus generating a dynamic force advancing the welfare of all mankind.

"Hard work has been a major factor in building the United States from a few scattered colonies to the most influential nation of the world in less than two centuries. The pioneer farmer toiled long hours with crude tools, while the average laborer today works forty hours a week under ideal conditions with precision tools and equipment. However, it still takes the catalyst of human effort to change raw materials, technical know-how and inventive genius into useful products. The productive capacity of the free American labor force is by far the greatest the world has ever known. Even though there is a tendency in some quarters to regard work as menial and degrading, Harding teaches her students to apprecate the dignity and honor of honest work.

"One of the outstanding features of our American way of life is the unique educational system that we have developed .... Harding has made a distinct contribution through its program of American Studies which has become a model for similar programs in other colleges and universities. ...

"A man came to Harding College in 1936 with a vision. Today where a dream once existed the reality now stands — because that man placed his trust in God and worked untiringly. Because you have given unselfishly to the service fo youth, because you have given courageosly to the service of your country, because you have given humbly to the service of your God, we dedicate this 1957 Petit Jean to you, George Stuart Benson."

At 58, Dr. Benson is a vigorous, dynamic person with a mission ranging all over the globe: to make freedom secure in America and to help guide all mankind to freedom and a high standard of living. Harding has been the citadel of his vast activities and the "apple of his eye."

—Glenn Green.

PURE WATER is distributed in a typical scene duplicated many times in the flood-ravaged areas of eastern Kentucky, Virginia and West Virginia. To meet the recent flood situation which had cut off 10,000 families from drinking water supplies, four dairy firms put their eight plants to work preparing 60,000 gallons of safe water in cardboard milk cartons and milk tank trucks. It was the first time the Federal Civil Defense Administration's plan for emergency water distribution had been put to practical use in a disaster.

Use Milk Cartons To Pack Safe Water For Flood Area

THAT THEY MAY DRINK

The humble milk carton became an instrument for saving lives in the recently hard-hit flood disaster areas of eastern Kentucky, Virginia and West Virginia.

When the record-breaking floods of January 29 rolled over 31 counties in three states, more than 10,000 families were cut off from pure drinking water. Polluted wells and reservoirs posed special problems in hard hit towns such as Hazard and Pikesville, Ky.; Logan, W.Va.; and Pound, Haysi, St, Paul and Clinchport, Va.

In such a situation, typhoid fever and other diseases can run rampant unless extra-ordinary precautions are taken.

Stepping into the emergency were four dairy firms with 8 plants in areas near the flood. Altogether, they supplied some 60,000 gallons of drinking water in cartons or milk tank trucks in the first major test of a Federal Civil Defense Administration emergency water plan.

The idea of using milk cartons for water containers originated in August 1955 during the widespread floods in the eastern United States following Hurricane Diane.

Stroudsburg, Pa., at the time hard-hit by the rising Delaware River, had sent out an urgent appeal to the Lehigh Valley Cooperative Farmers Dairy at nearby Allentown for milk cartons to be used as water containers. The dairy not only furnished the cartons, but filled them with water and trucked them into the flood area.

The Stroudsburg story, widely publicized by FDCA and the dairy industry, resulted in a nationwide program to supply water by this method for emergency use.

New Warning Network Launched

By the simple act of pushing a single button, 200 warning points throughout the United States can be alerted simultaneously within one minute after the nation is threatened by enemy attack.

This is possible with the Federal Cil Defense Administration's new 28,000-mile telephone warning net, known as the National Warning System (NAWAS), put into service May 1.

Normally activated at FCDA'S National Warning Center in the headquarters of Continental Air Defense Command in Colorado, Springs, Colo., the network carries a voice warning and details of attack to the 200 warning points.

If the communications center at Colorado Springs cannot function, the nationwide warning can be transmitted either from the FCDA Eastern Warning Center at Stewart Air Force Base, N.Y., or the Western Warning Center at Hamilton Air Force Base, Calif.

Nationwide Operation Alert 1957 Scheduled For Next Month, July 8-19

EXERCISE FOURTH IN FCDA SERIES

The fourth nationwide civil defense Operation Alert will be held in mid-July this year.

Operation Alert 1957 differs from the three previous annual training exercises in that details of the simulated attack on the United States will become known at the national civil defense level only as they are reported from local offices.

Civil defense directors in target cities will each receive a sealed envelope on the morning of the "attack," giving them for the first time the number, size and ground-zeros of the simulated bomb strikes in their localities. In past years, the exact attack pattern was known months in advance.

The change was made to simulate more realistically the situation that would exist in an actual attack.

The 1957 Alert, involving simulated nuclear bombs from 20,000 to 20,000,000 tons TNT equivalent, is scheduled in three phases as follows:

July 8-12—preparation and rehearsing of local civil defense "survival" measures to be taken later.

July 12-14—assumed nuclear attacks on the United States beginning at 11 a.m. (EST) on July 12. A period of attack reports and deports of local survival measures taken will continue until 6 p.m. (EST) on July 14.

July 15-19—Federal agencies will follow through to meet demands for help reported during and after the attack period, starting at 8 a.m. (EST) July 15 until noon (EST) of July 19.

Operation Alert 1957 also will differ from last year's exercise by putting on an emergency footing only those Federal agencies which would be directly concerned with national survival. Last year all Federal agencies were involved.

Federal Civil Defense Administration officials emphasize that, as in the past, targets chosen for the hypothetical nuclear attack do not represent either an estimate of enemy capability or a likely national attack pattern.

Civil Defense Man Rescues Drowning Boy, 3, from Ditch

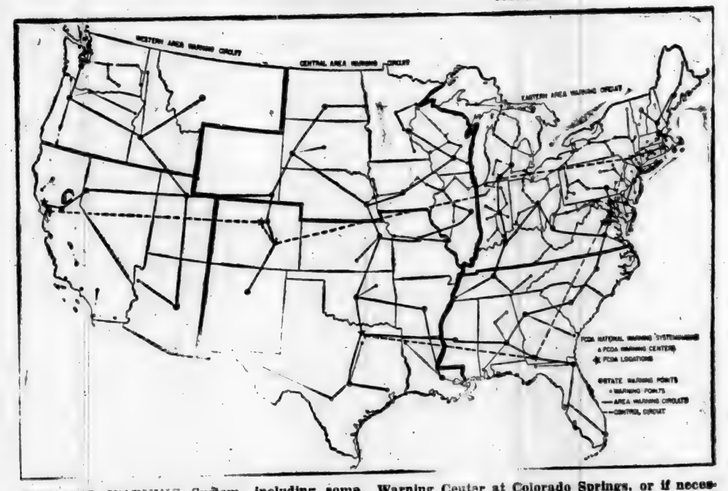
A three-year-old boy in Waterbury, Conn., was saved recently from drowning by the training and quick action of a civil defense worker.

Richard Lawson, a Waterbury civil defense worker, spotted young George McLean as he tumbled while playing into a water-filled, seven-foot-deep sewer excavation.

Lawson

Aided by a friend, Lawson fished the boy out of the ditch and then applied artificial respiration for 10 minutes before he responded to treatment.

In addition to first aid training, Lawson also has taken the basic civil defense rescue training course.



NATIONAL WARNING System, including some 28,000 miles of wire, is shown with its intricate connections to 200 civil defense warning points across the nation. The new network may be used to sound a single national attack alarm from the Federal Civil Defense Administration's National Warning Center at Colorado Springs, or if necessary, from similar warning centers at Stewart Air Force Base, N. Y., or Hamilton Air Force Base, Calif. From the warning points, State and local civil defense hook ups would pass the word along to the people to evacuate or take shelter.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

BY DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

Background Scripture: Genesis 37.

Devotional Reading: Psalm 68:1-6.

FAMILY TENSIONS

Lesson for June 16, 1957

The family is a divine institution. That is to say, God invented it. He thought of it before men did. He intended it. So it should be a success. Yet the family is also a human institution—that is to say, all homes are made up of human beings. Every home therefore suffers from the ailments that nag at all things human. A successful home succeeds in spite of all the human handicaps. A home that does not succeed, fails because these handicaps strain it too much.

Tensions

A favorite modern word for these stresses and strains within a home is "tensions." The word is new but the thing is old. Tension is what makes the teen-ager scream, and her mother feels like screaming, "I can't stand this another minute!" Tensions are what make meal-times regular battle-grounds, what give mothers nervous prostration and fathers peptic ulcers before their time, what may make children remember their childhood with a kind of shudder.

Tensions are what keep juvenile delinquents from going home, tensions may even be the beginning of lost minds. Now the thing is old, as was just said. In the home of Jacob, who was a God-fearing man, there was plenty of it. There was tension between him and his wives, between the wives themselves, between some wives and some sons, between the sons, between him and his sons. The family so to speak was pulled every which way and actually at last broke up.

What Can't Be Helped

Some tensions cannot be helped. They are in the nature of things. In a home there are persons of different ages, sexes and temperaments. This cannot be avoided. Yet the "battle of the sexes" rages from generation to generation; younger people find older people sometimes very hard to get along with, and vice versa. In Jacob's home he was much older than his wives, very much older than his sons. Men and women in those days and times probably differed even more sharply than now, kept separate as they were for much of their lives. And in Jacob's home temperamental differences surely could hardly have been more striking. The thing to remember is that since these strains cannot be helped, something good can be made of them. The man's point of view is different from the woman's, of course; but it takes both of them to make a healthy human point of view. Youth needs the caution and the wisdom of older people; older people need the optimism and and enthusiasm of younger people to keep them from withering on the vine. Different temperatments can balance one another. A home can capitalize on its very handicaps.

What Can Be Helped

Nevertheless, some strains and stresses are just the result of human meanness, human sin. They can be helped, they call for repentance and change. Consider the home of Jacob. His wives did not get along together; but while it was in those times legal enough, it was foolish for a man of his temperament to have married all those four women, especially as he loved only one of them. Some of the trouble arose from young Joseph's 17-year-old conceit. Perhaps he couldn't help his dreams of grandeur; but he did not need to tell those dreams at the breakfast table. And some of the trouble lay in Jacob's playing up his son Joseph.

How To Help It

A foundation-stone for harmony in the home or anywhere else is harmony with God. One who lives close to God will remember that God's will is always for peace, never for strife. The soul conscious of being forgiven by God will be more ready to forgive others. The spirit blessed by the grace of God—and God's grace comes only to the humble—will not be forever standing on its rights and complaining about its wrongs. It would be a good thing for many a family all nervous with many tensions to read together the thirteenth chapter of I Corinthians, the great chapter on love in practice, and then spend a while in silence, each one thinking: Does this describe me? And if not, do I not need God's forgiveness, and a fresh start?

As we come into the horse racing season, we are reminded of the saying that, "No horse can go as fast as the money you bet on him."

We have heard these remarks and so many more of a similar nature that we are passing them along to you for your guidance in buying furniture. Here are a few of them: "We are from Fort Wayne and we have never seen such a varied selection of fine furniture." "I'm sorry I didn't look here before I bought for there are so many styles that I like better than mine."

"I'd like to have you come out and make some suggestions for furnishing my living room. When I bought my carpet, your price was a few dollars more, so we bought elsewhere and have been sorry ever since for now we realize that we got a much lower grade carpet." You all know the line from one of our early American poets, "Of all the sad words of tongue or pen, the saddest are these, 'It might have been.' "

Then there are the satisfactory and satisfying statements from our enthusiastic customers, "Thanks for the fine manner in which you have taken care of our furniture needs. We are so happy with it all."

Phone Book Has Interesting Names

If your name is Smith, and if you live in Butler, St. Joe or the surrounding area, you are among friends.

According to George Bartindale, district manager of the General Telephone Company of Indiana, the new telephone directory delivered recently boasts more subscribers with the name of Smith than any other name in the 72-page directory.

While Smith leads the field with 57 listings, the names of Miller and Johnson are close behind with 42 and 41 listings, respectively. Brown is another favorite name in Steuben and DeKalb counties, with 35 listings in the new book.

The new directory contains 56 pages of alphabetical listings for subscribers in St. Joe, Butler, Angola, Hamilton, Fremont, Orland and Pleasant Lake, plus 12 pages of advertising on the yellow pages.

Featured on the front and back covers of the doe-colored directory are the giant telephone and lineman used by the General Telephone Corporation, of which General Telephone Company of Indiana is a member.

A glance at some of the names in the directory would prove that it is a colorful book, Gray, White, Green, Brown, Golden and Silver are all included.

The automotive industry is represented by Chrysler, Ford and Nash and occupations would include Baker, Doctor, Merchant, Cook and Porter. There is royalty in the new directory, too - Baron, King, Knight, Duke and Master. And geography students would find Holland, Ireland, Glasgow, English and German among the listings. Mr. Livingston is represented but his partner, Stanley, is among the missing. The Martins and McCoys are listed and southerners will be pleased to find a Mason and Dixon although no Line is included.

Animal lovers will be interested to know that Dove, Fawn, Wolf and Thrush are among the subscribers and although there are seven Sundays, the other six days of the week are not listed. Lawyers will be able to find among their clients Fee, Law, Force and Court.

While every effort was made to mail copies to all subscribers, Bartindale stated that anyone not receiving his copy should call the telephone company's business office, 100.

Church Bell Has Meaning

"One of the most inspiring sounds that can be heard rolling out over the country side is that of the pealing church bell. Christian worship has used the voice of the tower bell to call together the flock of God for Divine Worship from earliest times. The joyful tones of the bell herald in the Great Festival Days of the Church Year, proclaiming to all the world that the people of God are giving thanks and praise for the mighty acts of God. It lends its festal note to the solemnizing of a marriage, and announces in somber tones the passing of a member of the Church."

With these words Pastor Arthur Sziemeister of the local Lutheran churches at St. Joe and Spencerville announced this week a schedule for the ringing of the bell at St. Mark's Lutheran Church at St. Joe, to make the church bell more meaningful to the community. The schedule goes into effect beginning Sunday, June 16.

The most important change to be noted is that the bell will be rung during the service at that time in which the assembled congregation is praying the Lord's Prayer. Through this means the church invites all of the sick and shut-ins of the parish and community to join with the congregation in praying the Our Father and lifting their hearts together in supplication and thanksgiving to the Lord our God for all of His tender mercies, Pastor Sziemeister said. He closed the announcement with a verse from Psalm 150: "Praise Him upon the loud sounding cymbals: praise Him upon the high sounding cymbals. Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord: Praise ye the Lord."

A word of commendation and encouragement for most of your editorials. I think they are usually very good, especially when you write about the duties of a Christian and a citizen. Today is the anniversary of D-Day, 13 years ago today. Also the anniversary of my daughter's birth, 12 years ago. You should have a daughter or two - everybody should. Not your fault, I guess.

We have moved in our new home and like living in the city very much. It's been almost 2 yrs. since we left the town of St. Joe, since then, we have missed our friends and the mosquitoes as well as those creepy oats bugs. Glad to hear of the new fogging machine you folks bought. Just in case some people don't know it, after moving from there to this city we were blessed with a girl, which now we have 2 girls 1 boy. Our oldest 2 children will enter Franklin school, last term was at Harmar school. We wish to say hello to the Moore family out Ariz. way and to the Kinseys our Calif. way. I will say so long for now and add our new address.

Around the Town

With the Editor

Well, with the fishing derby coming up this Saturday, there must be a lot of tackle being prepared so that everybody will catch the biggest fish - or the smallest - or the most. Or maybe there will be more like me - at the last minute grab a cane pole wherever you can get ahold of one, dig a few worms or maybe the night before latch onto some juicy night crawlers and go sit on the banks of the St. Joe.

From what I hear, though, maybe there's no use of my going out there at all. I probably would get the smallest fish but, you know, everybody wants the biggest and that's what we try for. But the old pro of these parts, Elwood Savage, is all set to stake himself out at one of those spots where he knows there are 40 and 50 pound carp. So with that kind of competition staring one in the face, it might be hopeless for us amateurs.

It ought to be a lot of fun - go out and fish any time you want to between 4:30 in the morning and 4:30 in the afternoon and get a picnic lunch in the afternoon - all for just a buck and a quarter a father-and-son combination.

I guess the weatherman just can't win. It's been so long for warm weather to get here we were beginning to think there wasn't any such animal any more. Now here, bingo, all of a sudden we're right in the middle of July weatherwise and it's just too hot to be comfortable. It must be a frustrating occupation to be a weatherman and be wrong so many times or be the object of wrath so many times because you can't suit the people. I guess it's better to be a hardware man or a grocer or a garageman or a filling station operator or a pickle packer or a farmer or a newspaper editor where you never make a mistake and nobody ever gets mad at you.

It's good to see the new houses going up around here. Pete Akey and Dale Collins have starts on their new houses, Pete's south of town on Road 1 and Dale's north of town on the same road. And Coach Brookfield has his going up on a lot by the Stewarts at the west end of town.

The Kinseys are interior decorating, etc., on their new home on the main street.

NOTICE

No climbing is allowed on the St. Joe water tower, night or day. All offenders will be prosecuted.

Katie Storer Dies At Age 68

Mrs. Katie D. Storer, 68, wife of the local postmaster, died Tuesday evening at 6:40 p.m. at Sanders Hospital in Auburn as a result of a cerebral hemorrhage which occurred last Thursday. She had been taken to the hospital and showed some improvement for a day or two before suffering a relapse on Tuesday resulting in death.

Funeral services are to be conducted Thursday of this week at the St. Joe Church of Christ with Donald Foust, pastor of the church, officiating. Burial will be in Riverside Cemetery.

Mrs. Storer was born March 14, 1889, at Lawsche, O., the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Landis Lovett. She and Mr. Storer were married at West Union, O., in 1909. The couple resided at St. Joe for 40 years.

Survivors include the husband; four daughters, Mrs. Hazel Simanton of Phoenix, Ariz.; Mrs. Helen Wade of Garrett, Mrs. Beatrice Laub of Butler and Mrs. Beulah Squires of Fort Campbell, Ky.; a son, Wayne Storer, of St. Joe; 12 grandchildren; one great-grandson; a sister, Mrs. Edna Miller, of Dayton, O.; and a brother, Bert Lovett, residing in Illinois.

Mrs. Storer was a member of the St. Joe Church of Christ and the Ladies Literary Club.

The death of Mrs. Storer came less than two weeks from the July 1 date upon which she and Mr. Storer were to retire from the postal service. Her service included 18 years in the St. Joe post office as clerk and Mr. Storer's 23 1-2 years as the local postmaster.

The Jim Dwyers had a baby daughter, Susan Kay, on June 13 at Parkview Hospital in Ft. Wayne, making two girls for the Dwyers.

The Women of St. Peter's Lutheran Church had their June meeting in the church basement on Thursday by sewing in the morning, lunch at noon and business meeting in the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Hellen and sons, Tim, Jon and Tommy, flew their plane from Memphis, Tenn., last week to visit Mrs. Hellen's mother, Mrs. L. O. Wade and brother-in-law and sister, Mrs. Gale Bowser.

Mrs. Flossie Rhoades is not allowed too many visitors as yet, but we are certain your prayers, cards and letters would be most appreciated while she remains in the Lutheran Hospital recovering from her recent operation.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. James Kelley and family and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kelley and family of Fort Wayne, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bowman and family of Butler, Mr. and Mrs. John Kelley and family and Mrs. Minerva Kelley and daughters of Auburn and Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Akey and son of Spencerville.

Kast and daughters, Direnda and Jacque, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Thomas and daughters, Sally, Joyce and Sharon, and sons, Michael and Billy, Mrs. William Thomas and Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Kast and son, Mark, of Fort Wayne; Michael Timmerlin of Auburn; and Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Moore and daughters, Delores and Charyl Sue, and sons, Donald and Robert, and Cheri Howey of Spencerville.

The Spencerville Community Club will have a community picnic for their next meeting which will be announced soon. In the meantime it is hoped that all the lights will be installed by the end of this month. Also, residents are urged to keep their lights burning all night as this was the purpose of the lighting project in Spencerville, to have a town you could see and get around in in the dark as well as an attractive place in which to live. In other words, as the president of the club, Rev. Weber, says, to show the people that go through our town at night that altho we are asleep we are awake!

Mr. M. H. Hollabaugh and son, Tom, and Ray Overmyer enjoyed several days' fishing in Canada this week.

Brass Tacks - 4th In A Series

Man's progress in whatever field of endeavor he may choose can be outlined or described in terms of ups and downs, successes and failures. What motivates his endeavors, the purpose behind his ambitions, influences his measure of his own success or failure, just as it influences the opinion of others in judging whether he has been a success or a failure.

It is important to have some sort of predetermined yardstick to measure by to have a consistent method of determining success or failure. A person cannot be conducting himself or his affairs according to one set of ideas or standards, then change his methods and still measure his efforts by the first set. Since this series has dealt with the relationship between Christianity and Americanism, the example shall be made of a non-Christian individual who lives to some extent according to certain moral codes - he doesn't kill, he doesn't cheat (when someone is watching), he doesn't cause anyone any visible amount of trouble. He enjoys a rather high degree of success, according to worldly standards of measure. As a businessman, he is well-to-do, or as an employee, he has advanced to higher jobs by taking advantage of every situation and perhaps helping to create situations which he can use for his benefit - nothing "crooked", understand, but just questionable enough that one might raise an eyebrow at the idea.

But then someone talks to him and, since this is a Christian nation, he may be infected a little by the association of ideas and come to realize that the success he has had has not been real success in the light of this "new" idea of Christian principles. And so he changes his way of doing things. Instead of cheating when he can, he now is conscious of being seen in whatever he does by the eyes of God. And because he has now accepted a new set of ideas, he is aware that he cannot do as he has done before because it is wrong. As a result, he perhaps does not make that extra business transaction which he had before under the old methods. Or, if he is employed by someone else, he perhaps does not "push" himself before his employer at every opportunity and may, therefore, not advance as rapidly as before.

When we put the whole picture together, looking at it from the standpoint of "before" and "after," we cannot measure the success of the man in his reformed efforts according to the standards of success under the old set of rules, In one, material possessions and social prestige determined success; in the other these became secondary in importance, became a result of a different type of success. It is difficult to feel sufficient in what we do and have unless our standard of measurement is uniform. When the man reformed, he necessarily had to relinquish his wordly standards of measurement and maintain a new set. No one of the Christian world could come to him and promise a greater return of material wealth if he reformed because the Christian concept of wealth is different from the worldly concept. And it thus becomes difficult sometimes to justify a "change" to someone if they cannot or will not accept a change in their idea of success. There are many persons today who are the most successful persons in the world. Yet they are in the lower income bracket; they may have an old suit to wear on Sunday and so many financial obligations to meet that they seemingly never get "ahead." But they are successful because they are happy. If you show such a person to a rich man, how would he react? Would he say, "Why should I change? I may end up like that fellow." So the way of measuring success becomes the obstacle to making a more Christian and American type of person.

When you speak of such ideas, it may seem to be too "religious" to be interesting or important. Yet, we today in the present world of 1957 are afflicted with conflicts which can be traced back to this difference in ideas of success and failure. We measure today success of our economic system on one side by the number of dollars paid in wages, the amount of goods manufactured, etc. On the other side the measurement is according to our ability to use the fruits of the economic system to best advantage, to the betterment of all mankind. One side looks to the "prosperity" of today and takes pride in the high standard of living we enjoy. The other looks to the debt our nation has over its head, increased through seeking by the dollar to obtain "security," and is concerned because the youngsters playing so innocently today on our sidewalks and in our backyards are saddled with helping to repay (or trying to repay) their elders' attempt to buy peace, friendship and freedom from worry.

It is a distinct privilege to live in this nation. As a way of appreciating that privilege, we can examine our ideas of success and failure in our own lives and in the lives of those about us and make an effort to de-emphasize the "push" that is evident in popular seeking out of greater material wealth. A Christian in the United States of America is concerned with how successful he is in living according to the principles of his faith. From there he believes and knows that God will provide for him and whatever is provided is received with thanks. Therefore, he is not concerned with what he has not and what his neighbor has but is thankful for what has been placed in his hands for his use. Success or failure here becomes a matter then of higher considerations than materialism.

What becomes of this nation in the future will be determined by the manner in which its citizens measure success and failure. It is a matter of deciding what is more important - how much do I get for the job? - or - how well have I done the job?

MY DADDY

The baby called him Da!Da!
Brother called him Dad;
Sister called him Father,
And I was his little lad.

No matter what we called him,
He always wore a smile;
He was a real father,
And didn't care much for style.

While sitting at the table,
He always said a prayer;
That God would always guide us,
And keep us in His care.

Now he is gone, before us;
His care on earth did end;
He surely went to heaven,
For Jesus was his friend.

SUPPOSE EVERYBODY HAD A MILLION DOLLARS

Who is responsible for American prosperity?

"I," said the banker. "I," said the farmer. "I," said the politician. "I," said the businessman. "I," said the manufacturer. "I," said the laborer. Who is right?

Maybe this hypothetical story will help you decide:

"I dreamed I had a million dollars and need never work again.

"I thought of all the things I could now do because I had a million bucks. I would have the fanciest food money could buy. I would buy a fine house. Only the sportiest and most expensive automobile would suit me from now on. Clothing? Only the richest and finest would ever cover me again. Oh, I was in clover all right. My fondest wishes had come true.

"In my dream I dressed and opened the front door to get the morning paper. There wasn't any. 'Missed us this morning,' I thought. After breakfast, I got out the car and seeing that the gas gauge showed slightly less than empty I drove straight to the filling station on the corner.

"It was closed. I went to another—closed also. A dozen cars were lined up and their drivers were all talking together excitedly. I joined them and began asking questions. 'What has happened? Where can I get some gas?' Then I got the jolt. Somebody said, 'Haven't you heard? Everybody has a million dollars and nobody has to work anymore.'

"At first I was stunned. I thought that somehow a mistake, a ghastly mistake, had been made—but there was no mistake. It was really true. Everybody had a million dollars and thought that work was over for him. I couldn't buy gas, no busses were running. I couldn't even buy food. All the grocers had closed for good. There wasn't a single thing for sale anywhere, because nobody worked anymore.

"Then it dawned on me as never before that all of us are dependent upon all the rest of us; that to a small extent at least, my work had a place, a part, in the total welfare of mankind. I never had realized it so vividly.

"Then I woke up. My dream was over. The sun was shining, the birds singing, my wife rattling the breakfast things. I looked out the window and saw my neighbor starting off to work, contributing a little to my life and living, just as I contribute to his. I called to my wife, 'Hurry up with that breakfast, sweetheart, I want to get going this morning.' "

This little story is the story of America. All who work, be they bankers, bakers or candlestickmakers, create our economy. Money itself is not wealth. Real wealth is useful work that has been stored up, whether in food from the farm, in the homes we occupy, the clothing we wear, or the concrete highway on which we ride.

All that we have represents the labor of the mind or of the hand that is of service to others. Even our savings represent our own stored up labor.

So the truth is that no one group in our society can claim all the credit for progress. All have contributed, just as we in the telephone business contribute.

ELECTRICITY - SOCIALIST TARGET

When all the lesser debates and arguments are pushed aside, the very heart of the issue between Socialism and Capitalism lies in the question: who shall own property; who shall own and operate the instruments of production and distribution? Karl Marx was a Socialist. The Communism which he espoused was merely a form of Socialism. Marx wrote in the Communist Manifesto: "The theory of Communists may be summed up in a single sentence: Abolition of private property."

Webster's Collegiate Dictionary defines Socialism: "A political and economic theory .... based on .... government ownership .... of the essential means for the production and distribution of goods...." Herbert A. Philbrick, who worked for nine years as a secret FBI agent in the Communist underground and who now is a columnist with the New York Herald Tribune, says that at the last meeting of the Red bosses in the Kremlin instructions went out to the powerful Communist underground apparatus in the United States to "exploit every opportunity" for "co-operative activity between the party and pro-democratic forces" in order to "advance the cause of Socialism."

The chief method for "advancing the cause of Socialism" in the United States is to work for government or "public" ownership of the means of production and distribution. Since the late 1920's, when they began to wield political and thought-shaping influence, the Reds in America have been concentrating on gaining government ownership of electric power facilities, a first step toward transforming Capitalism into Socialism. Working with them unwittingly have been a great many influential non-Communists and millions of uninformed or misinformed people.

In 30 years we have seen government ownership of electric power facilities jump from virtually zero to nearly 20 per cent of the entire industry. Sen. Karl E. Mundt, who spoke at our recent Freedom Forum, says the forces of Socialism in America are very powerful and they will make a supreme effort in the next few years to gain dominant control of the electric power industry.

"I don't think for a minute," said Senator Mundt, "that you will ever have a complete monopoly of power by politicians in this country (government ownership) and have at the same time a privately operated appliance industry. If we socialize power, we will wrap the package up and say, 'Let's go socialistic all the way.' " Senator Mundt pointed out that electricity is a fuel. If it becomes government owned, then all the other fuels—coal, atomic energy, gas and the rest—will necessarily become government owned. And with fuel in the hands of politicians, he noted, other areas of production and commerce would have to come under their control too.

Senator Mundt told of his experience at a Communist meeting in Denver back in the 1930's when he was a teacher. "This was the first time that I had ever studied much about river authorities," he said. "The Communists were talking about them not in terms of whether they would produce power more cheaply or contribute to a good soil conservation or flood control program. Instead, they were working for nine potential river authorities (TVA and eight others) so that they might be able to set them up and make them powerful enough .... to gain control of government power over the 48 states."

Senator Mundt said the people, by their votes and participation in government, would make the key decisions on government ownership of the electric power industry WITHIN THE NEXT FEW YEARS. And these decisions, he said, would determine whether America is to become a Socialist nation.

Two weeks after Senator Mundt made these warning remarks, I noticed in the newspapers that the forces working for government ownership are back again in Congress trying to rescind the Interior Department's authorization for a privately owned hydroelectric project at Hells Canyon on Idaho's Snake River. Private companies already have spent millions on the initial phase of a three-dam project, and yet the government-ownership advocates want to scuttle this work and spend $500 million in Federal funds from taxpayers all over the nation. Only citizen interest and action can halt further successes by those who want government ownership, which means ultimately a lower standard of living for us all and a continuing loss of freedom for us all.

—Dr. George S. Benson, Director, National Education Program, Searcy, Arkansas.

CAP AND GOWN

This month, on campuses all over the country, thousands of students will appear at commencement exercises in a strange and medieval costume.

If you are a candidate for a degree this month you will have rented such a costume (average cost: $5) expressly for commencement. You will rise to approach the rostrum to accept your diploma and, undoubtedly, you will be wearing a long, flowing black or gray robe and a tasseled, square mortar-board cap.

Just why you must wear this particular costume may not be quite clear, but you are deeply aware that tradition insists upon it. Though it stems from ancient times, its meaning is democratic and representative of the best in human achievement. It is the mark of the teacher, of the apprentice who has gained the status of master workman. It is the distinctive attire of the man of accomplishment.

In England, as well as in many other European universities, there is still an unwritten law that scholars must wear this attire whenever they appear on the university grounds or the public streets, for originally all universities were guilds of masters.

A cap and gown plus a degree was a step toward full membership in a guild and was highly treasured. Therefore, commencement, instead of meaning the end of a term, actually meant the beginning of permission to teach.

In the twelfth century, a bachelor denoted an apprentice on the way to becoming a master workman. He wore flowing robes of varied colors and materials according to his wealth and rank. This was the vogue until the 1500's when tight breeches, swagger capes and plumed hats came into fashion. But scholars, too staid and dignified to change, still clung to their gowns. By the end of the seventeenth century, only scholars, clerks and court officials were seen in robes.

In ancient Rome, slaves were allowed to wear caps only after they became free men. These varied in color, shape and size, but usually were round felt caps called a "pileus." Later, at the University of Paris, teachers placed square, stiff caps on graduates to signify promotion. This square mortar-board was adopted, also, by the Oxford masters and worn on all occasions to demonstrate their independence.

A clue as to why these Oxford faculty members chose the square mortar-board is given in this 1564 poem:

"'Tis square like scholars and their books,
The rest are round, but this is square
To shew that they more stable are."

Strict rules govern the design, color and material of caps and gown in American schools. These were set when universities in 1895 adopted the Intercollegiate Code for Caps and Gowns.

Under this code, bachelor degree candidates wear black worsted gowns with long, pointed sleeves; masters are allowed black silk or wool gowns with long, closed sleeves; doctors wear black silk with full, rounded sleeves faced with velvet. All wear the black Oxford mortar-board with tassel, but only doctors and university presidents may wear velvet caps with gold tassels. The cap must be worn at all times (except in prayer) and the tassel is always draped over the left front of the cap.

In 1911, American high schools adopted their own code. To avoid confusion, high school graduates wear caps and gowns in shades of gray. Girls are allowed white collars and, in some instances, white robes. High school robes are worn open, clasped only at the top and the sleeves are round and full.

The most striking differences in the gowns are in the color and material of the hood. Originally, the hood served to protect the head, but its present function is purely decorative for it stretches down the back in long, flowing lines of colorful display. The higher the degree, the more elaborate the hood.

Caps and gowns have become so symbolic of growth that they have even reached the lower echelons of learning. A few years ago, a New York school graduated forty-one kindergarten tots—all dressed in caps and gowns. They received degrees indicating they were masters of blocks, of crayons and of smiles.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
International Uniform Sunday School Lessons
BY DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

Background Scripture: Genesis 39—41.

Devotional Reading: Psalm 105:1-6, 16-22.

GOD REMEMBERS

Lesson for June 23, 1957

Did God become God of love recently, or was he always that? This point has bothered some readers of the Bible, for in the New Testament it is made plain that God is love, but in the Old Testament very little is said about this. —Or so it used to be thought. Now that we have the Revised Standard Version, we can see that the Old Testament likewise speaks often of God's "steadfast love," an expression translating a Hebrew word which used to be translated "mercy" or "grace." God's steadfast love is the root and reason of his mercy and his grace.

Happy Endings?

"If God were all-powerful, he could keep evil from happening, and if he were all-loving, he would not let it happen. But evil happens, so there cannot be a god." So runs an old objection to religion. But it never bothered the writers of the Bible. Their faith was of a stouter sort. Some people cannot believe in God unless he writes, so to speak, a happy ending for every one's story. Now the Hebrew people loved stories with happy endings, and perhaps Joseph's is such a story. In one way it has a happy ending — Joseph, the slave-boy, becomes the Grand Vizier of Egypt. Joseph, the boy, his brothers were going to murder, becomes their unknown benefactor. And yet—in its setting it is not quite happy. The same book of Genesis which begins with "In the beginning, God —" ends with the stark expression, "In a coffin in Egypt." Not very hopeful! Further, when you think of all the other stories tied in with that of Joseph, you will admit that not all the threads of this story are neatly tied off in bow-knots of happy endings. What became of Potiphar's wife? the Midianite slave-traders? the baker who made a dinner for the birds the free Egyptian people who became slaves of the king? Not all true-life stories end just as we might wish.

Sin and Freedom

It can be said that the stories of good people come out well and the stories of bad people come out badly. There is some truth in that. There is is this much truth at any rate: God has never yet abolished sin, and he permits sins effects to continue to be terrible. The only way to abolish sin outright would be to destroy freedom; for sin is simply man's misuse of the freedom God has given him. God could, no doubt, have made the human race so that they could be wound up like clocks to run right no matter what. But he made men, not machines. And the tragic fact of sin IS a fact. Thus every man's story is spoiled more or less. Indeed there are no perfect stories. God is God of love; but he is not the kind of God who would force all men to do right, regardless; nor is he the kind of God who will see to it that no matter what a man does, he is bound to be happy ever after. It is not only that men are affected by the results of their own sins. Worse than this are the injustices, the tragedies, caused for the innocent by the sins of others.

But God Remembers

Nevertheless, God does not forget. He is not careless nor powerless. Among the many truths which the story of Joseph suggests is the doctrine called Providence. Put into simple words, this means that God thinks of things beforehand. In ways we do not understand, for it is his doing and not ours, God works, both in spite of and because of the worst that sinful men can do, works to bring good men out of evil. Joseph's brothers and Potiphar's wife were sinners; yet God used their sins, in his providence, to bring good into the lives of countless people. Two questions not cleared up in the Old Testament have more light cast on them by the New. Will evil and good go on side by side forever? The story of Joseph does not look so far ahead. The New Testament shows clearly, No: God will one day make a final separation of good from evil. And then what about those good persons whose lives end in tragedy? The New Testament reminds us that we never see the real end of any one's story in this world; coffins — in Egypt or elsewhere—end chapters, but no coffin ends a Lest Chapter!

I wonder if these ideas would not help all of us if we'd observe them a bit:

Keep life simple.

Avoid listening for a knock in your motor.

Like work.

Have a good hobby.

Learn to be satisfied.

Like people.

Say the cheerful, pleasant thing.

Turn the defeats of adversity into victory.

Meet your problem with decision.

Concentrate on making the present moment an emotional success.

Always be planning something.

Give more of our share of love and affection to others.

Do not add worry to a bad situation.

Give recognition to other people, some of it will come back.

Let us keep our attitude and thinking calm and cheerful, always.

Above all, let us not let ourselves get irritated, upset, hysterical, or self pitying.

Someone has said, "Before a man can wake up and find himself famous, he has to wake up and find himself."

We are always glad to see you when you come into our stores.

12-lb. Carp Is Derby Grand Prize Winner

Around 30 or 35 father-and-son fishing teams competed in the St. Joe American Legion and Boy Scout Troop Fishing Derby last Saturday. The derby was held from 4:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. with fish caught between those hours eligible for entry in the contest.

The area used for fishing in the contest extended from the Orangeville dam to Dills Bridge south of St. Joe. A sunny day brought ideal weather for the outdoor event.

At 4:30 Saturday afternoon, the contest closed with serving of a picnic lunch in Dills Grove and judging of contest entries. As was suspected, the fishing skill of St. Joe's "old pro" of fishing, Elwood Savage, produced the biggest fish. Mr. Savage and his "son", Frank Kessler, teamed up to enter a 12-pound carp which was judged the biggest fish caught during the contest. A bigger one had been hooked during the day, Elwood reported, but it was so big it broke the line and got away.

Winners of the prizes were announced as follows:

Midget boy (under 12)-largest fish, 14" channel cat entered by Rickie Roberts; most fish, 21 entered by Rickie Roberts; smallest fish, a 3½ incher, entered by Lonnie Keeler.

12 years to 15 years - largest fish, 12 lb. carp entered by Frank Kessler; most fish, 22 entered by Johnnie Sechler; smallest fish, another 3½ incher entered by Johnnie Sechler.

15 years through 18 years - largest fish, 12" carp entered by Carol Eicher; most fish, 10 entered by Carol Eicher; smallest fish, 3½ inch bullhead, entered by Carol Eicher.

Grand prize - largest fish, 12-lb. carp entered by Frank Kessler.

CARD OF THANKS

We gratefully acknowledge and deeply appreciate the kindness and thoughtfulness of neighbors and friends during the illness and at the death of our wife and mother.

No Decision Given On Tavern License

The DeKalb County Liquor Licensing Board Thursday afternoon delayed action on a beer and wine application for a tavern at St. Joe after hearing objections from a group of St. Joe area residents.

28 persons, who stated that they represented 230 objectors, appeared at the hearing held in the commissioners court in the court house in Auburn. Members of the board said only 41 of the objectors actually reside in St. Joe while the other 189 live outside the corporate limits. Some of the petitioners reside in Newville, Spencerville, Auburn, Waterloo and Butler.

E. E. Losey of North Vernon, state representative on the local board, and board members Derwood Ridgway of St. Joe and Newell Donaldson and Gerald Russell of Auburn, told the remonstrators that their decision on the application of Harry Loucks and his son, Richard, Loucks, will be based solely on requirements of law.

Spokemen for the remonstrators were Mrs. Elizabeth Shull of St. Joe, Lehr Wilder of R1, St. Joe and Lloyd Yeiser of R1, Butler. The remonstrators were not represented by an attorney.

The board said the application is scheduled for final action July 5.

The remonstartors in the informal petitions asked the board to turn down the application on grounds that St. Joe has no proper police protection, the value of property will depreciate because of a tavern, the moral fiber of the community will deteriorate, a tavern will have an ill effect upon the youth of the community and surrounding communities, and a tavern will result in serious law violations in addition to petty crimes.

Those allegatons were reiterated by the three spokesmen who said the principal objection is that the people of the community do not want a tavern.

Brass Tacks - 6th In A Series

When a person concerns himself with providing for his security and for the security of his family, he undertakes an important project. The word "security" is used quite extensively today in reference to citizens of the United States both as individuals and as a group. Security in this day and age has come to mean two things. To an individual security means having enough money to live on, enough clothes to wear, food to eat, funds for emergencies which may pop up in everyday living. To the nation, security means having more armed might than any other nation.

If we are to consider things from a purely worldly standpoint, these interpretations of security can be understood and justified. But it is necessary that ours, as a Christian nation, be careful not to forget those things which have come to the American people because, in the past, principles of existence were of more importance than material strength or wealth. It is dangerously close to being un-Christian in purpose, and therefore un-American, to believe that mortal man can achieve peace and happiness by any accumulation of wealth in any form. The folly of faith in the dollar is shown today in the lack of respect which other nations are showing for the once almost-holy standing this country had in the eyes of the world. We can be justified in saying that this respect must have come as a result of the principles which guided the men in history whom we respect as the backbone of freedom's cause and whom we keep in our national memory. When men die for a cause rather than preserve their lives for their own sakes, it is a rare person who does not remember them. Such remembrance is an indication of respect. We remember infamous men, also, but not in the way that shows respect. The world will remember dictators because they will be recorded in history as such. Men of worth are remembered also but in an entirely different way and for a different reason.

It is possible for any person to be a "famous" personality, freedomwise, without being known to very many of his fellow men. There are outstanding Americans living today who are priceless in their worth to this nation because they are living their everyday lives according to principles, the same principles, which guided famous men in history. Theirs is not a life of fame, however, because they are not faced with the same mode of living as those in the past, they do not have major decisions facing them, focused in the public eye, with which to spread the fame of their decisions. But the decisions they do make, according to their principles, are as important to Christianity and America as were the decisions which men in the past made when they chose death or imprisonment rather than desert the causes which they knew were right. It is easy to forget those spiritual qualities which put immortal men above all others when, for instance, a gun is staring one in the face, literally or figuratively speaking. But it was the placing of the future before self which made those revered men indestructible in the minds of men. The Christian remembers a Holy Person on a cross, with all the power of creation at His command, yet bearing human suffering and agony for a purpose. Since that day of sacrifice, followers of God have had an example before their eyes, showing the way of sacrificial living even to the possible point of sacrificial dying.

We today are quite proud of our record as a nation. Perhaps we are standing on the record of the past rather than the present. The trend of today's living does not indicate too much willingness to think of the future any further ahead than those comparatively few years in the near future during which time the greater majority of those now living will still be living. We burden our children for generations to come with a burden of national debt trying to attain "security" through military might. It is a paradox that while we profess our faith in holy principles and believe therefore in the act of sacrifice, we will not face the thought of giving up something of what we have today for the sake of those coming tomorrow. The apparent interest in religion today is more a matter of propriety than of sincerity. We ought to belong to a church, we ought to go to church, we say, for instance, because it is the nice thing to do in a free nation such as ours. While some may be going for the true purpose of seeking spiritual guidance and assurance, many, many more are going as a matter of form. And as they go, they hear the story of sacrifice, they hear about the men of principle who preserved that story of sacrifice, they say they believe in what those unforgettable mortals did hundreds of years ago and, yes, just a few generations ago. They say, "This is the background of our nation." They hear also, incidently, that true peace is not a matter of force but of love, of sacrificial love. And while they nod in agreement with the story they hear, they will not give up their belief in armed might as being the greatest weapon with which to combat the ills of the world. They will not give up this "prosperity" that comes from an economy based on military spending for fear that something will burst and they will lose the pleasures now at hand.

The power of money and of materialism is in force in America today. It is reflected in the pattern of living in the future - a future of time payments. Few people are not caught in the web that entwines our thinking and causes us to live only for ourselves. If we were sincerely concerned for the future, for our coming young people and their offspring to follow, we would be doing more individually out of our respect for the brotherhood of man rather than letting "George" (or Uncle Sam) do it or try to do it by trying to buy the friendship of other peoples of the world. We cannot be truly a Christian nation while we rely on money to do so many things. We cannot be truly Christian while we praise the sacrifices made by others in giving up their lives and the enjoyment of what worldly possessions they may have had while we disregard everyone but self and behave like a nation of spoiled brats.

ON SUNDAY SHOPPING

We've often been thankful as we heard by radio and read by newspaper of Fort Wayne's attempt to throw off the yoke of Sunday shopping, that Churubusco and neighboring areas still thought enough of God and fellow men to close unessential stores on Sunday.

We think both store operators and shoppers are to blame for Sunday shopping for articles that could be bought just as well on a week day. The shoppers are to blame for putting off that job until Sunday, and thereby asking clerks and operators to give up their traditional day of rest and worship, and the store operators are to blame for putting temptation in the way of their neighbors.

No doubt many of our area store operators have considered staying open at times to compete with Fort Wayne Shopping centers. We think they're to be commended for resisting the temptation.

You can show your appreciation to them for their forthright action in two ways - a spoken note of encouragement for their policy, and by refusing to do Sunday shopping yourself in Fort Wayne stores.

The clincher is, we think, and we've observed it many times by direct comparisons, that you could probably buy it cheaper in your home store Friday or Saturday night anyway.

—Tri County Truth (Churubusco), June 20, 1957.

DRIVE SAFELY

If you travel by auto, along our modern highway,
Be sure on your own side you always stay.
Obey the rules of the road, if you value your life,
And also that of your loving wife.
By driving careful, you may not get there as fast,
But if you keep on going, you will get there at last.
If on the curves your tires squeal,
There is a ditch bank ahead that you may feel.
We cannot be careless in driving, lives are at stake,
You can lose your life, if you make a mistake.
If you always drive the careful way,
You may live to drive another day.
Now if you would like to ride in a hearse,
Just pay no attention to this verse.

Someone said from the hospital bed, "Yes, but I had the right of way." Our observation is that the right of way is hardly worth dying for.

Mr. John H. Patterson of National Cash Register fame is reported to have said, "Leaving business at the office sounds like a good rule, but it is one that can easily be carried too far because, to my mind, a man who intends to make a success should be collecting ideas and tips, mapping out programs during every waking hour. Dismissing business after office hours has a nice sound, but I have found that often the business does not come back, after the recess!"

Have you come in to inspect our new Colonial Maple Shop in our uptown store? You'll be delighted with the Early American atmosphere as you look over the various displays. WHAT IS GREATNESS

Lesson for June 30, 1957

"The habitual vision of greatness" has been called the secret of the ancient Greeks, one of the world's most wonderful people. Many would say that the ancient Hebrews were even more wonderful; and they too had their "habitual vision of greatness." In our Old Testament are stories of great men, for whom even today little children are named. These great men and women too are of different kinds, you might say only one of a kind. Joseph was the kind of great man Americans love to honor. He was an immigrant, for one thing, a poor boy, with nothing but the clothes he wore, when he first crossed the border of Egypt. He was a man who rose through all the layers of society, against very great odds. He was the "big executive" type; and immensely rich besides. Now it is not true that such men are always hailed and honored. Sometimes they are no more loved than General Bullmoose. But when such men do give their fellow-citizens a lift of pride, it is because of that something extra which we call greatness.

The High Soul

Every truly great man or woman has some qualities or gifts which are unique in him, and are partly brought out by his own special circumstances. The greatness of an Abraham Lincoln, for instance, is not that of a Dwight L. Moody, and neither of these is quite like Helen Keller. But there are some features to be found in all persons who deserve the word "great". Joseph in Egypt is a good example of these. First of all is what can be called the High Soul. His house of life is open to the sky. He is guided by his faith in God. To such a man, faith is not a thing to be analyzed, or talked about. It is something to be lived, and lived by. Every single important step in Joseph's life is connected by his biographer with God; and Joseph himself shows that he was conscious of God's guidance. Even that decisive moment when he was being sold to Midianite slave-traders - a moment which just then he would hardly have connected with God - he later saw was an act of God. "It was not you who sent me here, but God," said he to his brothers later. What will God think of this? was not an afterthought with him, but it entered into his decisions beforehand.

The Open Mind

Great men have their prejudices, no doubt; what human being is entirely free of them? But a great man is capable of living above his prejudices. He can revise his opinions. Neither the man who is forever changing his mind, nor the man who can never change it is likely to achieve greatness. When Joseph's first son was born, he called him by a name which means "making-to-forget." "God," said he, "has made me forget . . . all my father's house." Joseph at that time, and for years before and after that time, had no communication with his home back in Palestine. To be sure, his family could neither read nor write; but Joseph could easily have sent a message telling them he was alive and doing very well indeed. On the contrary, he seems to have been quite content to be cut off from home. Very likely he thought the less he had to do with his rascally brothers, the better. But when the famine time came, he got acquainted with his brothers again; discovered in one of them, at least, a noble spirit; and he so far revised his attitude that he invited the whole family into Egypt near him.

The Wide Heart

Joseph's treatment of his brothers showed more than a willingness to reconsider his prejudices. He had a heart willing to forget the past, willing to return good for evil. To men who had been as mean to him as they could possibly be, he was as good and generous as he could possibly be. Most of us think we are mighty virtuous if in return for a dirty deal we do just a tiny grudging act of kindness. That is better than vengeance and mean dealing in return; but the great man is far above measuring what he gives by what has been given him. True greatness includes more than justice, it includes forgiveness and mercy. Voltaire used to say about God, "He will forgive - that's his business."

"Do you have to trim this tree, Mister?"

"Yes, Johnny, we have to . . . up high where the limbs are near our lines. Right now they aren't causing any trouble, but at the first storm they might break or fall and cause the power to go off in your home.

"People in this neighborhood depend on the electricity these lines provide, and it's my job to see that they won't be without it. But don't worry—I'll trim only what is necessary. And when I get through you'll have a lot of tree to swing on."

Fireworks

(from Aramco World, July 1957.)

Bells pealed and bonfires flared in the streets. Ships in the harbor fired salutes, and in the city volleys of muskets sounded the day long. At night householders lit candles in their windows, and in the dark sky fireworks burst, spreading out over the city like an umbrella of joy.

The day was the first anniversary of the Fourth of July; the city, Philadelphia. Americans had begun their great annual celebration, as predicted by John Adms on the eve of the Declaration of Independence, "with pomp and parade, with shows, games and sports, guns, bells, bonfires and illuminations, from one end of this continent to the other, from this time forward, forevermore."

The urge to light up the sky and deafen the heavens on a great occasion - to underline and italicize the day - is an almost universal impulse of mankind. If the Fourth of July is the No. 1 fireworks festival of the United States, in England it is Guy Fawkes Day, when Britons heed the warnings:

"Remember, remember the Fifth of November -
Gunpowder, treason and plot!
I see no reason why gunpowder treason
Should ever be forgot."

In the same way the French, on July 14, commemorate with fireworks the more deadly pyrotechnics at the storming of the Bastile.

But, fireworks are by no means confined to political holidays. People in the southern United States observe Christmas with fireworks second only to those of Independence Day. In the Latin countries fireworks have long been a traditional feature of innumerable feast days and saints' days. In Florence, for example, on Easter Saturday a cart laden with rockets, crackers and Catherine wheels is drawn by white oxen to the square in front of the Cathedral. Along a thin wire running from the main altar to the cart, a small artifical dove wings its way, bringing the holy fire to ignite the first rocket. In joyous explosion the austerity of Lent is banished and the new season made welcome.

Perhaps fireworks are nowhere more loved or widely used than in the Orient. Tokyo dwellers delight in their "Kawahiraki" or "River Festival," when masses of people drift in boats along the Sumida River and line its sides to watch the magnificent "fire flowers" exploding in the sky overhead.

In China and India, for century upon century, fireworks have played a role in almost every sort of celebration. Crackers grew to be so intimate a part of Chinese life - marking not only public occasions like the New Year or a lunar eclipse, but also births, weddings, funerals, and even the endng of quarrels - that they became stratified along class lines, with each social group using crackers of a different color.

The art of pyrotechny was born, in all likelihood, some where in the vast interior of Asia, in a region where the salt necessary for existence was available only in the form of saltpeter. One day a prehistoric firemaker, probably Chinese, discovered that the saltpeter he used in cooking made excellent tinder when mixed with charcoal from his fire. The tinder sparkled. This was the beginning of pyrotechny.

In a bamboo container the mixture could explode with violence and glow brightly. Later on the first pyrotechnists added inflammable sulphur to the mixture; and soon they had instruments for pleasure displays, war or religious ceremonies.

As long ago as in Ancient Egypt, priests are known to have set off pyrotechnics in geometric patterns on the ground as part of their mystic rites. Fire, like the sun and stars, inspired worship in primitive peoples; and even today it has a place in religion; for example, in the form of altar candles.

Historical records of fireworks as an instrument of destruction begin with "Greek fire" about 670 A.D. A Greek engineer in Byzantium invented incendiary grenades and "guns" that shot out streams of liquid fire. It was not until the thirteenth century that an inventor in Germany discovered the principle of the modern gun: the sudden force of expanding gases produced by an exploding pyrotechnic mixture in the closed end of a metal tube could shoot forth a missile. The particular mixture he adapted for his "thundering tube" became known as gunpowder.

Knowledge of pyrotechnic mixtures had come to Europe from its birthplace in the Orient, traveling through Arabia and Greece. In Europe the art first took root in Italy, where pleasure fireworks were introduced in the dawning years of the Renaissance. By the beginning of the seventeenth century, two schools of pyrotechny had developed in Europe, one of Southern experts centered in Bologna, the other revolving around Northern masters in Nuremberg. The Italians were fond of building a "temple", or "machine", a handsome structure designed to serve as a decorative setting and launching platform for the fireworks. The Protestant Northerners, by and large, scorned using these "Roman" settings. For them the fireworks out in the open were the entire show.

Elaborate as fireworks may seem, they all depend on a single natural phenomenon: burning. And burning is simply the union of a substance with oxygen. As the ancient Asians discovered, saltpeter can give oxygen to certain substances, say charcoal and sulphur, more concentratedly and rapidly than air can. The consequent swift burning makes for noise, force, sparks, or white or colored flames, depending on the composition of the mixture and the kind of case used.

In the eighteenth century, fireworks displays became minor art forms of extravagant splendor. Hardly a coronation, a royal marriage or birth, or a national celebration occurred without its attendant spectacle. Like a chain reaction pyrotechnics erupted throughout Europe following the peace of Aix-la-Chapelle in 1748. London's celebration was so elaborate that it took months to prepare. A Continental expert was imported to design the "machine". Measuring 114 feet high and 410 feet long, it was a palatial pavilion connected by arcades to two smaller pavilions, the whole adorned with "frets, gildings, lustres, artificial flowers, inscriptions, statues, allegorical pictures, etc." The fireworks set off in this imposing setting cost some L8,000; rockets alone numbered more than 10,000. No less a personage than George Frederick Handel had been commissioned to compose and conduct a "grand overture on warlike instruments", including one hundred brass cannon. But pyrotechny in those days had its bad moments. Quite a few of the fireworks failed to go off. A side pavilion caught fire and threatened the entire structure. So anguished was the backstage crisis at one point that a visiting Italian pyrotechnist angrily drew his sword and challenged one of the Englishmen.

(To be concluded.)

PRIMER FOR AMERICANS
Printed as a public service by The St. Joe News

You live in the United States of America. You are an American.

Real Americans like their country. They are proud of it. They think it is a good place to live. And they want to keep it good—to keep it getting better all the time.

Why is America the way it is? What makes it a good place to live? The answer is simply this:

Throughout our history most Americans have believed that every person has certain rights and duties and responsibilities.

Americans have believed that there are certain things people should do, and things they should not do.

They have also believed in certain things that people are, and are not.

These things that people believe are called principles. This book is an attempt to state the Principles of America in simple, primer fashion so that you can understand them, learn them, and remember them.

This is important. It was because earlier Americans believed in these principles and guided their lives by them, that America has grown to be the good place it is.

If all of us learn and remember these principles—if we also guide our lives by them—then we can help to keep America growing better, and better, and better.

And if we follow these Principles of America, we can help make the world a better place to live in, too.

The Principles of America are these . . .

1. Each Person is of Importance and Value as an Individual.

This is the cornerstone . . . the foundation of all our other beliefs in a person's right to live his own life, to speak for himself, to choose and change his leaders.

From it comes our hatred of those "isms" under which the individual has no value or importance as a person, but is only one of many unimportant people who have to live the way their leaders tell them to.

Coming directly from that first principle are two others that are also part of the foundation of Americanism.

2. We Believe that All Men should Enjoy Personal Freedom.

3. We Believe that All Men are Created Equal.

It is worth noting that the Declaration of Independence expressed the belief that "all men are created equal." It did not state or imply a belief that men develop equally or have equal ability, or that they should ever be forced to an exact equality of thought, speech or material possessions.

That would be equality without freedom. Americans have always believed the two should go together.

In our Constitution, and in other laws of our land, there are set down principles to protect the rights and freedoms and equality of individuals.

4. The Right to Freedom of Speech.

This includes freedom of the press, of radio, of motion pictures, of every means by which man may express his thoughts.

5. The Right to Freedom of Assembly.

As we believe in the right of individual action, so we believe that individuals should be free to act together.

6. The Right to Freedom of Worship.

Not only is the individual free to worship as he will, but religions themselves are free and equal.

7. The Right to Security of Person and Property.

Not just one, but three Amendments to the Constitution (4th, 5th and 14th) protect against illegal search and seizure, or loss of life, liberty, or property, without "due process of law."

8. The Right to Equal Protection before the Law.

As individuals are equally important, so laws must apply equally to all, without special privileges for any group.

9. The Right to Freedom from Slavery.

This includes "the right to quit," for no individual may be forced to work for another.

10. The Right to Petition the Government.

The right of the individual to "petition the government for redress of grievances" is evidence of the American belief that government is the servant, not the master, of the people.

11. The Right to Vote for people of your choice.

This is the individual's most potent weapon in the protection of his rights and freedoms . . . a weapon that to be effective must be constantly and wisely used.

Other Principles hold that every man has . . .

12. The Right to a Good Education.
13. The Right to Live where he pleases.
14. The Right to Work where he wants to.
15. The Right to Belong to an Organization.
16. The Right to Own Property.
17. The Right to Start his Own Business.
18. The Right to Manage his Own Affairs.
19. The Right to Make a Profit or to Fail, depending on his Own Ability.

There are other, similar rights of individual action which are Principles of America, but all of these individual rights may be combined in these two broad principles . . .

20. Every Man is entitled to Freedom and Equality of Opportunity.
21. Every Man may Earn his Living When, Where, and How he wants to.

There are also Limiting Principles . . .

Principles of individual freedom sometimes clash with those of individual equality. Therefore our rights as individuals must be limited, and those limitations are themselves principles.

22. The Rights of any Individual shall not Interfere with those of Other Individuals.

Your right to swing your arms stops where the other fellow's nose starts.

23. The Rights of any Individual shall not Interfere with the Welfare of the People.

Freedom of speech does not give the individual the right to shout "fire" in a crowded theatre.

24. Every Individual owes Obedience to the Laws under which he Lives.

The individual has the right to talk against a law, to work and vote to change that law, but NOT to disobey that law.

Principles that are Patterns of Behavior . . .

Many of our principles of individual freedom and equality are guaranteed to us by law. But we have other beliefs, other general rules of action and conduct that have grown to the status of principles. And these too, are foundations of Americanism.

25. A Man shall be Judged by his Own Record.

A man's family background, his race or his religion, is not as important as what that man himself can do, for Americans believe a man must stand on his own feet.

26. A Man is Free to Achieve as much as he can.

We believe that where any boy may become President, where any man may achieve greatness, there is the greatest incentive for every man to do his best.

27. To Achieve anything, a Man should be Willing to Work.

Americans have always known that "you don't get something for nothing," that to get anything takes a willingness to work.

28. Achievement also Depends upon the Ability to do a Good Job.

Add to "willingness to work" the ability to produce results and the combination is the basis for most individual achievement in our country.

29. Every Man has the Right to a Fair Share of the Results of his Work and his Ability.

Because of this belief, America has not only produced more goods, but they have been more fairly and more widely shared by more people than in any other country.

30. Security is the Ability of a Man to Provide for himself.

The only true security for any individual is the opportunity, the ability, and the determination to work and plan and save for his own present and future. Self-reliance is vital to individual independence and personal freedom. No man can be "proud and free" who depends on others for his security.

31. When an Individual cannot Provide his own Security, the Responsibility should be Assumed by Others.

We believe that no one should starve, or be without adequate clothing and shelter, so those who have more than their basic needs share the responsibility of providing the essentials of security for those who need help.

32. Each Individual must Deal Fairly with others.

Honesty, fairness, and personal integrity are virtues that help free and independent individuals get along with each other without losing their independence.

33. Fair and Free Competition is a Good Thing.

Americans have always believed that competition among individuals or groups encourages greater effort which in turn brings greater benefits to all.

34. Cooperation among Individuals is Vital.

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER has said: "The freedom to compete vigorously accompanied by a readiness to cooperate wholeheartedly for the performance of community and national functions, together make our system the most productive on earth."

Principles of Individual Responsibility . . .

Freedom for individuals carries with it an equal responsibility to use that freedom wisely. If we wish to remain free, we must faithfully fulfill this responsibility.

35. The Individual is Responsible for himself and his Family.

He must protect them and provide for their present and future well-being.

36. The Individual has Responsibilities to the Groups of which he is a Part.

He must give of his best to his community, his church, his employer, his union, and to every group in which individuals cooperate for their mutual benefit.

37. The Individual has Responsibilities to his Country.

He must be an active citizen, interesting himself in local, state, and national government, voting wisely, thinking and speaking and acting to preserve and strengthen freedom, equality and opportunity for every individual.

38. The Individual has Responsibilities to the World.

Man's horizons have expanded. What happens in the world affects him, and his actions can affect the world. Today, therefore, each man has a responsibility to act—and to encourage his country to act—so that freedom and cooperation will be encouraged among the people and the nations of the world.

For America's Future

Most of us have faith in our country's ability to move forward, to improve, to grow, to provide more and more individuals with more and more of everything they want and need in life . . .

If we, the people of the United States, want to have more material benefits, we must believe in and follow these two principles:

39. The only way we can Have More is to Produce More; and
40. As we Produce More, we must make it possible for More and More People to Enjoy that which we Produce.

If we, the people of the United States, want to have a better life, spiritually as well as materially . . .

41. We must stand firmly for our Beliefs, our Rights, our Principles.

There are those who would chip away our confidence so that their special brand of tyranny might creep into America. They must not succeed. So, let us ask of every plan, or act, or idea . . .

Is it With or Against the Principles of America?

WOMAN IN COMMAND

Lesson for July 7, 1957

Thirty-three centuries is a long time. Records made 3300 years ago have been broken long since. It would be a rash person to say that a modern Christian woman should stay inside the limit set for women 1300 years before Christ. No person of that far-away time can be a precise model for Christians today. Nevertheless we can learn something from the ancients.

One question which - oddly enough - has been bothering the race for probably longer than 330 years is this: what is a woman's place? It is just as absurd a question as the other one which - also oddly enough - is never asked: what is man's place? The odd thing is that we assume that man's place is anywhere, while woman's place is some way limited. We assume that man can go where he pleases, while women have to ask man's permission. This notion is a hang-over from ancient times when it really was a man's world far more than now. Nevertheless, even in those distant days an able woman could make her own place in the world. Miriam, sister of the famed Moses, is a case in point. She was a woman of a strong mind, a natural leader. There is no "story" of Miriam. There is a story of Joseph, a story of Moses. But the picture of Miriam, like the majority of Bible characters, is drawn with a very few strokes. All we have is glimpses; yet from these we can learn something of an interesting woman.

Smart Girl

Miriam was older than her brother, Moses - not just a year or two older, but old enough, by the time he was born, to manage that business about getting his mother for a nurse. Undoubtedly her mother had coached her for the interview with the princess (see Exodus 2); but all the same, the girl must have had sense. She was smart enough to step up to her Royal Highness just at the right moment. A little too soon and she would have been shooed off as a little slave girl coming where she had no right to be. A little too late and the Princess would have chucked the baby back into his sea-going basinette, or else bundled him off to the palace with one of her own maids. But just at the right instant little Miriam bobs up with the right question.

All the Women Went After Her

On the morning after the night when the Israelites crossed the Red Sea, we meet Miriam again. This time she leads the song of triumph and praise, celebrating the fall of Egypt's might and the liberation of her people. Singing and playing and dancing, she led the women in the celebration of the Lord's victory. Here are two hints about the place of women as leaders. We already had one hint in the story of Moses in the bulrushes: smart women grow from smart girls; leaders do not come from among stupid people. In the story of Miriam and her victory-song, we have first the hint that a woman can be a most effective leader of women. "All the women went after her," we are told. It is not true that women follow men only; a strong sensible woman has little trouble in securing feminine support. The other hint is that Miriam, in her primitive way if you like, was leader of her people in two respects: she was interpreting for them the great event of the Exodus ("just a lucky wind," no doubt some were saying) as an act of God, and she was leading in creative art. It is rather suggested that the "Song of Moses" was at first the Song of Miriam. In short, Miriam took the lead where she could and as she could.

Too Far

And yet this leader could show up in a bad light, as the story in Numbers 12 shows. It appears she had fallen into the blunder made by some dictators since; she tried to run the private affairs of other people. In a way, she could have argued that Moses' marriage was her affair, since she was in the family; and what woman does not feel a natural interest in all marriages, especially those of her own close kin? But the moral is short and clear: when a leader becomes a dictator, even God is no longer patient.

Beauty in motion—Chevrolet Bel Air Sport Sedan with Body by Fisher.

Here's why Chevy's best showroom is the road!

Because Chevrolet's sleek good looks, its advanced features, are only part of the story. The big bonus is its remarkable roadability, the crisp precision handling that has posted an entirely new standard for cars in every price class. There are reasons for this, of course: Chevrolet's balanced weight distribution that takes excessive loads off the front wheels, the wide stance of outrigger rear springs, Ball-Race steering, spherical-joint front suspension. Sure, you can admire the sculptured lines in the showroom. But Chevy's a car specifically designed for beautiful motion—you have to travel in this one to know just how terrific it is. Fireworks

(Concluded.)

In that era pyrotechnic compositions were mainly saltpeter, sulphur and charcoal. The modern era of fireworks, distinguished by colors, began about 1830 when pyrotechnists first began to use potassium chlorate instead of saltpeter (potassium nitrate); the chlorate in its reaction with metalic salts made possible a brilliant rainbow of colors.

Of the various devices in the fireworks galaxy, rockets are the most complicated to construct. The skilled pyrotechnist presses his mixture into a tube of unusually strong paper. When ignited, the mixture throws out a jet of fire; the recoil produced by the fiery jet sends the tube rocketing into the sky. A stick attached to the tube balances the ascending rocket. At the top of the rocket's flight the burning mixture in the rocket's body contacts the fuse that ignites the head. Rocket heads may contain "stars" ready to burst into multicolors, a mixture for stunning liquid fire, or parachuting lights.

Like fire itself, fireworks owe much of their fascination to the spectator's mingled fright and delight. In the midst of his fun he does not quite forget the perils of playing with fire and gunpowder. The showery sparks of rockets, the thunderous report of an exploding bombshell, the stacatto bursts of firecrackers can induce reactions ranging from mild apprehension to outright terror.

Such was the case at the celebrated meeting of Henry VIII of England and Francis I of France in 1520 on the Field of Cloth of Gold near Calais. Their three-week parley included a glittering series of great solemn Masses, feasts, jousts and entertainments. An old manuscript records how on one occasion the company was electrified by the appearance of a terrible fiery dragon-like form over their heads. The "dragon" indulated through the air on no apparent support, moving "as swiftly as a foot soldier" and climbing "as high as a crossbow could carry an arrow." The writer adds, "Many people were greatly frightened thereby, thinking that it was a comet or some monster or portent."

The terror of those sixteenth - century spectators might seem more amusing had not something similar occurred in New York in the spring of 1957, when the Japanese marked the opening of the World Trade Fair with a brilliant fireworks display on the Hudson. Throngs lining both sides of the river watched the beautiful spectacle with obvious enjoyment. But hundreds of others - seemingly unaware of what was taking place - telephoned authorities and anxiously demanded to know who was attacking Manhattan!

Yet the danger inherent in fireworks, if it is controlled and kept at a distance, doubtless adds a keen edge to our pleasure. Four centuries ago the Italian Biringuccio marveled at this phenomenon, whereby "from these fires composed of forceful and horrible materials bringing harm and terror to men, a happy and pleasing effect is also produced and, instead of fleeing from it, the people willingly go to see it."

Today they still go, not merely willingly but eagerly. Rare indeed is the person so jaded that he cannot share the awed rapture of the youngster described by Thackery in "Pendennis":

"How she cried O, O, O, as the rocket soared into the air, and showered them in azure, and emerald, and vermillion! As these wonders blazed and disappeared before her, the little girl thrilled and trembled with delight."

Letters to the Editor

20 June 57

Dear Mr. Haberkorn:

Well, my address is changing again so I'd better let you know. This time the Army is really going out of its way. We're going to be stationed right on the campus of William and Mary College in Virginia. Putting on a display of the "Nike" Btry. of which I am a member of. In the celebration of Jamestown, being the oldest city in the states, I hope my history is right. Anyhow, it's where John Smith landed. I've got a favor to ask of you. I can't write all the boys who are stationed at Norfolk, Va., so would you give them this message. I'll be at the campus of William and Mary College for about 8 weeks. It's on the outskirts of Williamsburg, Va. Just look for a Nike Btry. anyhow a display of one and I am sure I'll be around. I know of several fellows down there that it's been a long time no see. Thank you very much.

Here is my new address:

PFC Richard C. Beebe
Btry. C, 56 AAA, Msl. Bn.
Fort Monroe, Virginia.

By the way if you get the chance to visit this celebration stop by and see me.

Thanks again for the paper.

As always,

Richard Beebe.

We're flattered - but how can this little ol' News get word around to all those boys of your new address??? Big oaks from little acorns is the appropriate phrase, we guess. —Ed.

"LIFE, LIBERTY AND THE PURSUIT OF HAPPINESS"

(Contributed by J. W. Mellick, Wellington, Ohio.)

Happiness, we all want, and happiness is the result of "freedom", therefore we must define "freedom" and find it! What is "freedom"? Is it to be "free" from all rules and laws? A fish gets "free" from the bowl and onto the floor . . .is that "freedom"? A train gets "free" from the tracks and buries into a bank . . . is that "freedom?" A man breaks from the laws and rules of morality, decency, and health and finds himself held by the chains of habit, indecency, weakness, and regret . . . is that "freedom"?

Is ours "the land of the 'free' "? Did Lincoln free all the "slaves"? Do not tobacco and alcohol hold a relentless rule over their millions? Does not Hollywood "pull the wires" and several million "puppetts" adjust their thinking, behavior, fashions, and morals accordingly? Why does the magazine publisher find a ready market for the lewd, vulgar, and indecent? . . . . "Churchanity" cannot free men, but Christ can! The message of the cross is the "key" that sets men free. True happiness is found under the leadership and liberty of the Holy Spirit! Ask anyone who has known both sides!

CIVIL DEFENSE EVACUATION would look like this with carefully controlled traffic moving one-way outbound from a threatened target city at a rate of up to 1,200 autos per hour per lane, except that cars would be carrying more people. All access to major surface streets would be controlled, traffic on cross streets banned. Reports indicate that some 32 million persons could be evacuated from 185 target areas in 1½ hours by using this system. (Cameramen, Inc., Photo by Berkeley Payne)

SUCCESSFUL EVACUATION of a large city would leave the downtown area a ghost town, as in this view of Portland, Ore., taken during Operation Greenlight—the largest civil defense evacuation exercise to date. The vast Interstate Highway System under construction would not only facilitate evacuation of large cities, but also would provide roads needed to supply the huge evacuee camps in outlying areas. (Portland Oregonian Photo by Rollie Dobson)

ROADS TO SURVIVAL

New Interstate Highway Net to Aid CD Evacuation

A line on a drawing board today may someday save your life.

That line might be one of America's roads to survival, a part of the 41,000-mile National System of Interstate and Defense Highways that will be carefully laid out over the continent within the next 12 years.

THIS INTEGRATED $33,000,000,000 network — the world's greatest public works project—will include freeways running from the heart of major cities to the outskirts and beyond. Over these roads, the millions who live and work in cities could seek the safety of distance from a nuclear bomb blast if adequate warning of impending attack were given.

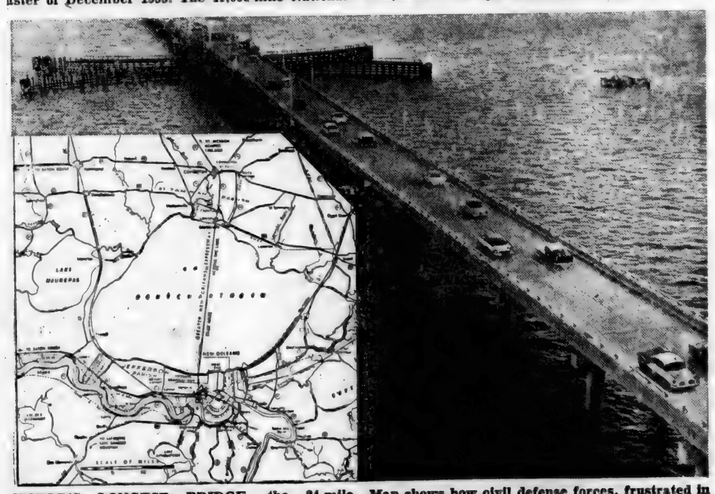
In normal times, restless Americans drive 550,000,000,000 miles a year in private autos. Families must also rely on cars to flee from danger in the event of civil defense emergency.

The automobile is a rolling home in an emergency, the Federal Civil Defense Administration points out. You can eat and sleep in it, keep warm and dry, receive vital instructions by radio, drive out of danger areas, and even get some shelter against blast or fallout.

CIVIL DEFENSE auxiliary police will be needed in great numbers to help control traffic if warning of impending enemy attack ever forces cities to evacuate. Banning of cross traffic, and permitting one-way outbound traffic only on arterials and the great urban freeways now being built will aid these men in their thankless task. (FCDA Photo)

EXPRESSWAYS MEET in this gigantic interchange in Detroit, a key part of the freeway system which could carry some of the Motor City's auto-riding populace to rural safety. Although civil defense studies show that COMPLETE evacuation of large cities after warning of likely attack is not generally feasible under today's warning times, a big start toward more evacuation capacity is being made in urban freeway construction under the new National Interstate Highway program. (Photo courtesy Bureau of Public Roads)

TRUCKLOAD OF PIPE and portable pumps at a Federal Civil Defense Administration warehouse ready to move into the California flood disaster of December 1955. The 41,000-mile National System of Interstate and Defense Highways (superimposed in white) will, within 12 years, provide a grid of freeways for such trucks to speed food, and other help to attacked cities. (FCDA Photo)



WORLD'S LONGEST BRIDGE, the 24-mile Lake Pontchartrain Causeway north of New Orleans, is a spectacular example of new highway construction which could be used to help empty target cities ahead of attacking planes. Map shows how civil defense forces, frustrated in New Orleans by water obstacles to traffic on almost every side, could send thousands of cars straight across the huge lake barrier to the north. The bridge was opened to traffic in August 1956.

TO GIVE ADVICE
Lesson for July 14, 1957

To give advice is easy; to give advice that people will take is not so easy. To give advice that people will be glad they took is hardest of all. Besides, some people are harder customers for advice than other people. Old people sometimes are more stubborn than young ones; successful people may not listen so readily to criticism as will those who have failed; and members of one's own family may pay less attention than anybody else.

Old Man Jethro

There is a story in the Old Testament of a very old man who gave advice to another man who was younger than he, but still an old man, too. The younger man had been tremendously successful, much more so than his father-in-law had ever been. Yet it was the father-in-law who gave the advice. His name was Jethro and he lived about as far off all the beaten tracks a man could go. When the young Moses had fled from a murder charge, naturally he had gone as far from civilization as he could; and there he came across Jethro, priest and stock-raiser. Moses had married one of his daughters, a somewhat stupid girl, no match for the brilliant Moses. Now, forty-odd years later, with all the glory of the great escape from Egypt fresh upon him, Moses had brought his grumbling people (most ungrateful for their freedom!) out to this same remote region to get organized for their march to Canaan. All day long old Jethro watched his son-in-law, sitting in the midst of a swarming crowd, all talking at once, no doubt, asking questions, demanding attention, complaining of grievances, accusing their neighbors, wanting Moses to settle all their quarrels. It was too much for any man, even Moses. Old Jethro gave him a simple piece of advice: set up a graded system of judges. Don't try all the cases yourself, only the hard ones. So Moses took the advice . . . and it worked so well that, forty years or so later, Moses seems to have believed that he himself had thought of the bright idea first.

Character

Why did Moses take the advice of Jethro so quickly? Of course the main reason, no doubt, was that having lived with Jethro for nearly forty years, Moses had listened to the old man before and knew he did not talk nonsense. But what was it that made Jethro worth listening to? To put it into terms of our own problems: what do I need, to get my own advice taken by other people? How can I learn to give advice that people will follow and like? The first thing needed, in order to give advice wisely, is character. Jethro was a man of God. Possibly his idea of God was not up to the Christian standard, perhaps not even up to that of Moses. But the God he knew, he revered and served. Then he was not only religious, he was practical. He knew what would work and what would not. A man of deep faith and conviction, who is also solidly practical, is the best kind of counselor, and people know it.

Acquaintance

Another thing: Jethro and Moses had lived side by side for forty years. Jethro knew Moses like a book, he knew his ability and his limitations. Advice is not best given by total strangers. Sometimes people in trouble will appeal to complete strangers for advice, but that is only because they don't like to tell some local man (or woman) the whole truth. In giving advice, the counselor needs to know as much as possible about the whole background of the person he is advising.

Concern

More than acquaintance is needed to be a welcomed adviser. The aged Jethro could see that Moses was wearing down, under the impossible burdens he was trying to carry. If Jethro had not cared, he would hardly have offered advice. But he did care; and Moses knew it. Advice is not best when served cold. A good counselor advises from the heart not less than from the head. With the head, one can analyze a situation; but only with the heart can the adviser put himself in the place of the one he helps.

Ralph Sechler Ousted From Board Post

In a surprise move on the part of the trustees and advisory boards of Concord, Spencer and Newville townships, the president of the Riverdale school board was removed from his office and from membership on the board Monday evening when the group met to choose a member-at-large for the school board. Two other vacancies were filled by Concord and Spencer townships when their representatives on the board, Walter Reinhart and Wallace Graham, requested to be relieved of their duties on the board. The Concord Township representative on the board is now Richard Crow while John Mason has been named to represent Spencer Township.

The third new member was selected when a contest developed with the nomination of Frank Laub for delegate-at-large, in opposition to Ralph Sechler who has been serving as president. Mr. Sechler had been expected to be retained in view of the fact that school affairs appeared to be progressing satisfactorily and he was willing to continue to serve on the board. Mr. Laub was elected by a 6 to 5 vote with 10 of the 12 electing committee present at voting time.

As a result, the new board, taking effect August 1, will consist of trustees Walter Morr of Concord Township, Ralph Hook of Spencer Township and Elza Moore of Newville Township; delegates Richard Crow of Concord, John Mason of Spencer and Stanley Davis of Newville; and delegate-at-large Frank Laub of Spencer Township.

Marjorie Ramsey Seriously Hurt In Car Accident

Mrs. Marjorie Ramsey, 54, of St. Joe is in serious condition at Parkview Memorial Hospital in Fort Wayne as a result of injuries suffered in a 2-car collision Monday morning near Edon, Ohio. She was riding in an auto driven by Leon Alva Bond, 54, of Fort Wayne who was killed instantly at the scene of the crash, the intersection of State Road 34 and county roads 5 and J in Ohio. Mr. Bond succumbed to internal injuries.

Also injured in the collision was the driver of the second car, Herman Fix, 58, of Edon. He suffered body cuts and bruises and was hospitalized in Montpelier.

Mrs. Ramsey was also hospitalized at Montpelier before being taken to Fort Wayne. She suffered fractures of both legs, the left arm and collar bone, a punctured left lung, bad lacerations on the scalp and shock.

Williams County sheriff's department officials said Mr. Bond and Mrs. Ramsey were en route to a doctor's office at Montpelier and were traveling north on the state road. They said Fix was heading east and was crossing the intersection onto county road J. Fix' car was struck broadside by the Bond auto after he had failed to notice the Bond vehicle approaching and had pulled out into the intersection. The two cars landed against a telephone pole.

Tavern License Given Approval

At a second hearing held July 5 in Auburn, the application of Harry and Richard Loucks for a tavern license was approved. Issue of the permit was delayed however until a report was filed by the Indiana state fire marshal's office.

Approximately 50 persons attended the hearing. Spokesman for the protestors included in the group was Willard Hurni of St. Joe. There were no allegations made against the character of either Mr. Loucks or his son. At a hearing held June 20, a petition bearing 230 signers, only 41 of whom actually reside in St. Joe, was presented to the county liquor board.

The remonstrators based their objections to a tavern on grounds that the community has no proper police protection and that a tavern would have an adverse moral effect upon the town and surrounding community.

No date has been definitely set when the owners will open for business.

State OK's Site For Building New School

State approval of a site for the construction of a new school building for the Riverdale school system was given July 8 in a letter sent to county school superintendent Roger Hess at Auburn. The letter approves the site located on the south side of the township line at the south boundary of St. Joe and on the east side of state road 1. As a result of this official approval, an additional appropriation has been called for in the mount of $10,000 by the school board. Of this amount, $7,000 is designated for purchase of land, 20 acres at $350 per acre, and $3,000 for improvement of land.

Several weeks ago options were taken on property owned by Theodore Voirol and Lester Anthony and state approval of one of these locations was requested. The two plots of 20 acres each offered by Mr. Anthony lie along the east side of state road 1 at the north end of the Anthony farm. One rectangular plot had its long side along the highway, the other the long side running toward the St. Joe River.

The Voirol plot, which was approved by the state for purchase, lies adjacent to the present high school buildings across the road which separates Concord and Spencer townships. It contains 20 acres in rectangular form. There is considerable roll to the land and a knob located in the east section near the middle of the school site. Plans for the new site include bulldozing the knob to fill low ravines and to provide satisfactory contours and drainage for storm water run-off.

Approval was given with the conclusions that the public water supply from the St. Joe water system be used as a source of water for the new school building and that the sewage treated by a septic tank and sand filter be then dishcarged through a drain to the St. Joe River.

Prices asked for the three sites were $350 per acre for the Voirol property and $400 per acre for one of the Anthony locations and $425 for the other Anthony offering.

Alaskan, Ray Green, Is Visitor In Mason Home

The John Mason family of near St. Joe have had a visitor in their home for the past few weeks. His name is Ray Green and he comes from the Osterlin Home for Children at Springfield, Ohio. Ray is a full-blooded Eskimo and was born in Anchorage, Alaska. He is 10 years old.

This is the second year that the young man has visited the Mason family. He enjoyed their hospitality last summer for six weeks and this year came to St. Joe in the latter part of June. He will return to the home at Springfield the latter part of this month.

During his stay he has been helping where he can with the children in the Mason family and taking part with them in the events and activities in the community which are of interest to the younger set.

ST. JOE VALLEY HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB

The St. Joe Valley Home Demonstration Club met Friday, June 21, at the St. Joe Lutheran Church with Emma Strombeck as hostess.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Doris Yeiser. The club collect was repeated in unison, after which devotions were given by Edna Kaufman. The history of the song of the month, "Tell Me Why," was read by Elizabeth Shull, then all joined in singing the song.

The Keyser Township Home Demonstration Club was present as guests with 18 members.

After a short business meeting Gertrude Borthwick conducted the social activities. Elizabeth Shull led singing of a number of songs accompanied by pianist Eva Clauser.

Seven ladies from the Newville E.U.B. Church entertained with a one-act play.

The response to roll call, introducing of the guests, was given by 22 members.

The meeting closed after the singing of the club prayer song.

Lunch was served by the hostess assisted by co-hostesses Melba Chapman and Norma Gutin at tables decorated with red roses.

IN MEMORIAM

If life is sacred, it should not be allowed to perish, true the body will return to dust from whence it came, but the remembrance of the life should continue. Some one has said, "We are not dead until we are forgotten."

As a last tribute to our dear club sisters, Minnie Gee and Pluma Hamilton, their lives shall ever live in the minds of the R.H.C. sisters and of those who will be members of the club in the years to come.

Market Victim Of Another Break-In

Dunten's Market was robbed for the third time in recent months recently when burglars took food and tobacco valued at $184.10 and $4 in pennies.

The theft occurred late Saturday night, July 6, or early the next Sunday morning. The burglary was discovered by the owner, Lloyd Dunten, on Sunday evening when he and his wife returned from their cottage at Adams Lake.

The thieves pried a lock on the front door of the grocery to gain entry. They loaded the groceries and tobacco products in four market baskets owned by the grocer and carried the loot but a side door on the east side of the building.

In addition to the pennies, the burglars took cigars valued at $4.50, $80 worth of cigarettes, chewing gum valued at $1.20, $3.40 worth of candy, bread and rolls valued at $4.50, eggs valued at $3.50, $25 worth of coffee, meat and butter valued at $40, $20 worth of canned fruit and flour worth $2.

The Ides of July

Persons who have been elected or selected for an office are in some instances kept there if their efforts in that office have been satisfactory and if their conduct of the affairs of that office have not brought unfair actions or decisions. There are other instances in which constant change of personalities is expected because of a pattern of rotation which does no particular harm to the organization involved.

On Monday there occurred a change in the membership of the school board, part of which was to be expected, another part which was not to be expected or desired. Two members who had requested to be relieved of their positions on the board were replaced. A third member, who also has been serving as president of the board, was also replaced. There can be no argument about the first two replacements but there is certainly room for protest regarding the replacement of the third.

As stated previously there are some public officials who can expect to keep their job if their efforts have been satisfactory, generally speaking. There are times when there is disagreement as to the decisions which are rendered and enough disagreement will bring replacement. But in this instance of conducting the affairs of the school board, the president has not all the say but acts as a presiding officer in conducting all the business. We have failed to see where dissatisfaction could arise from the efforts of the newly deposed president of the school board. His fairness in making up his own mind about matters personal and public and his ability to conduct a meeting in an orderly and efficient manner leave little room for saying that he is not doing a satisfactory job, much less that he should be removed from the school board.

There is a matter of common courtesy violated by the six members of the combined group of township trustees and advisory board members who by voting for a new member voted against the present president of the board. This is not a criticism or questioning of the ability of the newly elected member; it is a criticism of those six who chose to administer a public slap by removing from the board one of the members who was willing to remain on the board and serve the community as he had been in the past.

Because he has served the best interests of all school patrons and was willing to continue to serve, the deposed member should have been kept on the board. It's common courtesy.

Those six will not like these words.

We do not like their action.

ARE WE HIDING OUR LIGHT?

Time and again we hear newspaper folks complain that more and more the public takes newspapers for granted, that the people receive their favorite newspaper every day or every week and give little thought to the bargain they are getting or to the importance of every newspaper in the community it serves. Only when an incident, such as a strike, or a catastrophe stops publication of a newspaper does the public seem to awaken to the emptiness of life without a newspaper.

Whether or not they were the good old days, it must be admitted that a quarter century or more ago people were more aware of their newspapers as such than they are today. That was particularly true in the small and medium size daily field where the publisher of the newspaper was personally known to almost every resident of the community and served as counseller in the solution of individual and civic problems. This was public relations, although it was not known by that term then.

All this has been changed. Population growth, increased tempo of living, the age of automation have contributed to bringing about the change that has caused all institutions to become somewhat remote from the people they serve, and newspapers are no exception. Church membership has grown until no longer can a pastor make a personal call on every member family. Schoolrooms are crowded to the extent that personal contact between parents and teachers is not practicable or satisfactory.

So, publishers need not be surprised that the public has seemingly grown indifferent to newspapers as a community institution. This situation may be due partly to the fact that not too many newspapers have supplanted the personal contact relationship of years back with public relations to restore awareness of the newspaper as an institution. History is replete with examples of institutions as fully entrenched as newspapers which die on the vine of inactivity. We are reminded of the man whose business failed and he blamed it on advertising; when reminded that he never did any advertising he replied: "But my competitors did."

What can newspapers do to revitalize public attention in their direction? Events of the past decade provide a perfect answer to that question. It was newspaper reporting alone which brought about investigation of the Indiana highway scandal, the irregularities in fiscal operations of the Teamsters' union and uncovered the Hodge scandal in Illinois, to mention a few cases. Not more than a handful of newspapers in the nation and fewer in Indiana took advantage of the opportunity to impress that fact upon the public. Granted that every Indiana newspaper reported the news of shenanigans in the highway department, that is not enough to convince the people what newspapers alone, of all communications media, are doing for the welfare of the public. People must be given the story behind the story to convince them their rights and welfare are protected day after day by free newspapers.

If people are taking their newspapers for granted, it may be because newspapers are taking themselves for granted by hiding their light under the proverbial bushel of complacency and self-righteousness.

—The Indiana Publisher, June, 1957.

GOOD EVENING

As expected by many, the United States Supreme Court has ruled that Army Specialist 3-C William S. Girard shall be tried in a Japanese court for alleged manslaughter of a Japanese woman. The Court may be right legally in saying that there is nothing in our Constitution to prevent this, but, if so, the Constitution needs an amendment, such as the Bricker Amendment. We have long known that a treaty entered into by the President takes precedence over all of our domestic laws. That is why the Bricker Amendment was proposed. The Girard case should spur the Bricker Amendment's passage.

Whether Girard is guilty or not guilty is completely beside the point. In any event, he is not guilty until proved guilty and the State Department has no moral right to blacken his reputation to show that he is not worth fighting for.

Every person charged with a crime is entitled to a fair and impartial trial. When he can't get such a fair and impartial trial, he is a victim of injustice. No American soldier tried for an offense in a foreign land can expect much more in the way of a fair and impartial trial than a Negro standing trial for the murder of a white man in Georgia or Alabama. But even if the Japs lean over backward as they probably will to be lenient with Girard, that also is not the point. He should not be thrown overboard by his own government for reasons of expediency. Girard, if he is guilty, deserves not leniency from the Japanese, bu justice from his own country on whose behalf he was sent against his will to a foreign country.

As we say, the U.S. Supreme Court may be legally right in saying that an executive agreement by the President with Japan makes turning Girard over to the Japs necessary, but if so we should proceed immediately by national legislation to make such an occurrence impossible again.

I have a right as an individual to assume that Girard is less than a model soldier, but no judge has; nor any court, nor any official of our government acting in a legal capacity. To them he has to be considered as innocent as a newborn-child until he is found guilty.

One wonders where all the professional liberals and pinks are now. Why aren't they screaming their heads off about the violation of civil rights and individual freedom in the Girard case. Do they really care about personal rights or only when Communists are involved? You can be sure that if Japan had a law against Communist activity and if Girard had been arrested on that basis, every bleeding heart in journalism from the New York Times on down would be crying out for the U.S. Government to hold on to the case.

The real fact is that the so-called liberals don't give a hoot what happens to any individual unless he is a liberal. But no one can truly call himself a liberal, unless he is fighting just as hard for a principle in one situation as he would in another.

I don't blame the Japs for demanding jurisdiction over the Girard case, but I do blame those who urge that foreign nations always be given jurisdiction over our soldiers. Does anyone really believe that the United States should draft men for foreign service and then provide them with no protection there?

What would have happened if Girard had been a general, not a private? Would we have allowed a general to be turned over to the Japs for a manslaughter trial? Don't be funny.

—Clifford B. Ward in the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel.

THE DUMB FARMER

I am just a dumb old farmer,
Sitting here at home,
With a pencil and some paper,
Starting to write a poem.

You get a big red pencil,
And some paper that is white,
And at the upper left hand corner,
You start in to write.

The pencil does the writing,
While you sing a little song;
And you will be surprised,
It don't take very long.

So get you some white paper,
And a pencil that is red,
And write yourself a poem,
Before you go to bed.

Don't be afraid to try it,
And when you get it done,
You can read it to somebody,
And mebbe have some fun.

—Merwin J. Place

A LITTLE CHISEL AND BUCKET

Not too far from the freely swinging doors of the Super Market, there was a man with a little chisel barely making a little dent in the market's massive walls. "I hope to get into the store," he says as he mops his tired brow. "I'm doing the best I can, and that is about all any man can do." We look at him and then at the big doors with people going in and out. "Is he doing the best he can?" we ask.

Not far, a few blocks, from a fully equipped Fire Department, a house is burning! Racing to the rear of the flaming structure we find the owner with a small bucket madly dashing back and forth between the house and a small goldfish pond as the fire grows out of control. "I am doing the best I can," he puffs, "and I guess that's about all anybody can do!" We look at his little dripping bucket and fish-pond, and think of the efficient fire-protection that is as close as his telephone. "Doing the best he can?" It doesn't make sense!

The best that man with the chisel could have done was to drop his chisel and go in at "the door." Jesus Christ says, "I am the Door." Friend, drop your "chisel" and that little meaningless phrase, "I am doing the best I can." The best the man with the little bucket could have done was to drop his bucket and call the fire department. The "best" any can do is to drop all excuses and foolish imaginations and depend on Jesus Christ to save them!

'WRECK' LAW IN EFFECT

Indiana's "right-to-wreck" law, along with other non-emergency acts of the 1957 legislature, became effective at 3:45 p.m., June 25. It was the earliest effective date since 1941.

The law, in a nutshell, bans the union shop from employer-union contracts. Existing union shop contracts are not voided so long as they are not renegotiated or extended beyond the time period they were written to cover.

The law states that any extension of such a contract, after the law is in effect, makes the contract "null and void."

The Indiana Right to Work Committee, which was responsible for enactment of the law along with the assistance of the Indiana State Chamber of Commerce, immediately announced plans for a "vigorous defense" of the law.

Indiana labor leaders, at the same time, began formulating plans to get the law repealed in the 1959 legislature. To do this, it will be necessary, of course, to elect persons to the legislature who are not subservient to the dictates of the Chamber of Commerce crowd.

Meantime, Indianapolis newspapers, which supported the measure, were dishing out a huge dosage of tranquilizing pills designed to appease unionists with the idea that the law isn't so bad, after all.

Just to set the record straight, the Indiana State Federation reasserts its position that the "wreck" law is dangerous to the well-being of every one in the state of Indiana because it strikes at the very foundation of the state's high standard of living by giving birth to the well-known cycle of low wages, low purchasing power and low economy.

Furthermore, the State Federation continues to believe the law will eventually destroy our proud system of free enterprise, and enterprise whose competitive spirit depends on the precision, the vigor and the skills of highly organized trade unions.

The law is also dangerous because it arbitrarily abolishes the principles of such fundamental rights as the right of contract, the right of majority expression and the right of collective endeavor.

The law places Indiana's citizens under the cold economic control of the vested interests who sponsored the bill; a condition foreign to our concepts of democratic procedure, and in violation of anti-monopoly principles.

Again, for the record, the Federation points out that 16 of the 17 states where the "wreck" law has been in effect have the lowest average per capita income in the nation. The income in these states is $442 less than the national average. Nevada, with its legalized gambling, is the only "wreck" state with a decent per capita income.

Cold statistics also show that 12 of the 17 "wreck" states have lost nearly two million in population through migration because these people couldn't make a living.

The State Federation opposed the measure also on the grounds that it would become a potential barrier to continued industrial development. This opposition was also based on facts. Six progressive states - Massachusetts, Maine, New Mexico, Delaware, New Hampshire and Louisiana - were forced to repeal such laws because they were wrecking the economy of these states.

Indiana is the only industrial state to have a "wreck" law. It joins the 17 backward agricultural states that are struggling with this restrictive legislation.

Organized labor's argument against the "wreck" measure was and continues to be based on tangible evidence. The argument of its sponsors was and continues to be based on vague and uncertain claims.

Labor continues to believe that its opposition to the "wreck" law represents the best interests of Indiana as a whole, rather than the isolated and vested interests of the law's supporters.

Just 2 years ago we started "In this corner." At that time we wrote as follows:

"We have planned for a long time to use such a corner as this to get better acquainted with all the people in this area and to keep them informed of all the goods and services which we are able to supply. It is our hope to keep the corner interesting as well as informative so you will be looking for it each week.

"We may want to find a better name for it one day and if we do we'll want you to help us. If, as time goes on, you want to express your opinion to us about the corner we'll be glad to hear from you."

In the 2 years that have passed since then we feel that we have kept the corner both interesting and informative, judging by the many nice comments from you folks.

Do any of you folk feel that you would like to write some items for the Corner? If so, please send them along. We'd like to have your ideas.

Spencerville News

Janice Hollabaugh, Reporter

On Sunday Mrs. Minnie Wilmot Kimes and family and grandchildren of Fort Wayne came with well-filled baskets, stopped in Spencerville, took their Grandma Kimes and Aunt Rosa Widdifield with them over to Alton Park for a picnic dinner. For Minnie it was doubly pleasant as she in her youth lived in that neighborhood and attended school at what then was known as the Cheesetown School.

On Friday noon Jessie E. Sommer was pleasantly surprised by her brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Baltz (who have spent winters for 11 years in Tampa, Fla.) who came for a visit. Pauline Rhodefer was an afternoon guest and evening callers were Mrs. Berkley, Michael Eicher and his three sisters, Katie, Mary and Anna, from Grabill.

D. H. Lawrence has said, "Men are free when they are in a living homeland, not when they are straying and breaking away." Something like that came to my mind during the past week. Altho I wasn't too far away from home, not away from the homeland at all, yet when all you see in Chicago and Cincinnati are mostly strange people you might as well be in a foreign land.

As we were going along we noted some very nice homes, good schools, beautiful churches, well dressed people. That was all very fine, yet it was their homes and their home town, not mine. So, you have guessed it, we were glad to get home. There is nothing quite so refreshing as the home town and the home town folk.

RUGGED FAITH

Lesson for July 21, 1957

A man who at the age of 40 was not afraid to give a minority report even in the face of a threatened lynching; a man who at 85 was still asking for the hardest job and the most dangerous job in the country; such a man is worth more than a glance. Such a man was Caleb, a much younger contemporary of Moses. We first hear this sturdy man when he and Joshua stood out alone against overwhelming pessimism of the majority "Report on Prospects." Twelve tribal leaders had been chosen to go into Palestine and see what things looked like. Ten of these leaders brought back the word (and archaeology shows it was true): the country is full of well-built, well-fortified cities. We shall not take it without a fight. But then they went on to say: we shall lose the fight. Forget all about the conquest of Canaan; it can't be done. We are no better than grasshoppers!

God-Conscious

On the facts, Caleb and Joshua agreed. A beatuiful land, well-defended cities, plenty of fighting certain. But on the recommendations they had something different to say. "Do not fear," they said. "The Lord is with us." But no one believed them unless it was Moses. The people were so far from believing them that they threatened them with death by stoning. The difference between Caleb and Joshua, on the one side, and the masses of the people, on the other, was the FAITH of these men. The majority thought only, "We can do nothing." This tiny minority thought: "We can do a great deal — if God is with us." The majority looked at the situation and found it hopeless, because they found it godless. Caleb looked at the same situation with hope and confidence, because he saw God as the most important part of it. The reason why faith is strong is that faith is God-conscious.

On God's Side

Merely being aware of God is not the whole of faith—not the whole of the rugged faith of Caleb. It is quite clear from what Caleb said that he wanted to be, and believed he was, on God's side, and carrying out God's purposes. Faith not only sees God in hard situations, faith lines up with God, so far as God's will can be seen. There is a great deal of difference, for example, between faith as we find it in Luther and as we find it in Hitler. Both of them were men of strong faith. They believed themselves to be men of destiny. But then why were they so different? The difference was in this: Luther wished nothing higher than to follow the will of God wherever it might lead him; Hitler if he believed in God at all, expected God to support his own ambitions. A Hitler cracks up at the last; but a Luther does not. So Caleb outlived his entire generation, for his hope and his faith were planted in God, not in himself.

Without Fear, Without Pride

Faith in God like all good things can be turned into a sort of mockery of itself, a cheap or grotesque imitation of reality. Faith can be a cover-up for fear. It can be used as a retreat to get out of attempting hard things. Once a young man was pleading in a great gathering of Christian leaders for men to go out as Christian missionaries - this in a day when missionaries were very few. An older minister rose and told the young man to sit down: "When God is ready to convert the heathen, he will do it without your help!" That minister was using his faith to conceal his own unwillingness to risk the dangers of being a missionary. Some parents are so much afraid of vaccination that they will refuse to let their children be vaccinated - we believe in God, they say. True faith is a rugged thing, as Caleb's was. It asks for the hardest tasks, it is not afraid of work or danger. Then faith can be twisted into pride: Hitler is an example of that, so was Napoleon. So was the Grand Inquisitor. so have been any number of tyrants in the church and out of it. True faith creates confidence, but not conceit. When a man of faith begins to confuse himself with God, rugged faith has changed to brittle arrogance.

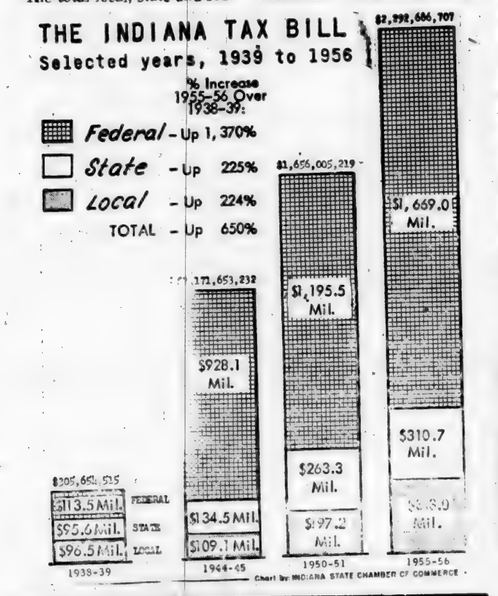
UP, UP, UP, UP, - - - The total local, state and federal tax bill of Hoosier individuals and businesses payable last year was 650 per cent higher than in the pre-war fiscal year 1938-39 according to the accompanying chart prepared by the Indiana State Chamber of Commerce.



The chart indicates state and local taxes increased during the period by almost identical percentages in the neighborhood of 225 per cent. Federal taxes meanwhile were 1,370 per cent above the pre-war level.

Congress now has an opportunity, the Chamber said, to save taxpayers' money in the coming year by trimming the 1958 federal budget.

'Indiana's share of the cost of the proposed $3.87 billion foreign aid program alone," the Chamber said, "would be more than $101,000,000. For the past several years, Congress has averaged cuts of 22.3 per cent in proposed foreign aid spending. If a similar cut is made this year, Hoosiers will have some $22,300,000 less to pay in future federal taxes."

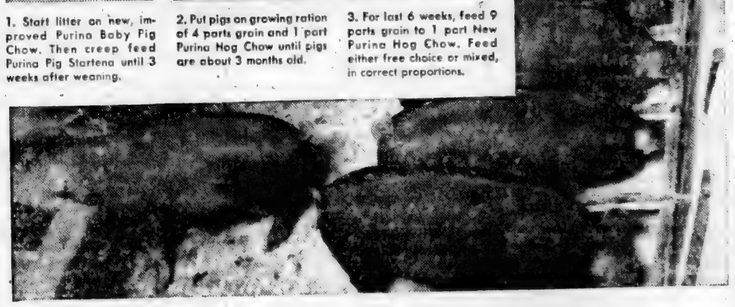
INDIANA & MICHIGAN ELECTRIC COMPANY

HERE IS THE NEW PURINA HOG PROGRAM

1. Start litter on new, improved Purina Baby Pig Chow. Then creep feed Purina Pig Startena until 3 weeks after weaning.

2. Put pigs on growing ration of 4 parts grain and 1 part Purina Hog Chow until pigs are about 3 months old.

3. For last 6 weeks, feed 9 parts grain to 1 part New Purina Hog Chow. Feed either free choice or mixed, in correct proportions.



Now...market hogs in 4⅔ months

New Purina feeding program weans pigs at six weeks.... grows pigs to 190 lbs. in 4⅔ months... cuts feed costs 4%... 1 lb. of pork for every 3.26 lbs. of feed, from weaning to market... conditions sows faster for next farrowing.

Every year more proof piles up that hogs should be fed according to age and weight requirements. Young pigs use feed differently than do older hogs. They need more protein... more vitamins... more of the expensive parts of the ration. But, as pigs grow, they become more efficient users of carbohydrates—the less costly part of rations. The proportion of cheaper carbohydrates can be rapidly increased.

Tests at the Purina Research Farm showed that this new program cut feed costs an average of 4% below any previous Purina Program... produced each pound of pork on only 3.26 lbs. of feed from weaning to market. It also gave sows the chance to recover faster from farrowing and nursing. Sows were ready to breed again in less time than when pigs were weaned at 9 weeks.

Improved Purina Hog Chows Make Program Click

Purina Baby Pig Chow and Pig Startena, the famous Fast-Start Twins, have been further improved to take advantage of the newest research findings. Purina Hog Chow has been improved to the point where you may now use 33% more grain during the last six weeks than on previous Purina Hog Programs. Be sure to feed right... follow the recommended steps closely. The fast gains, early weaning, and increased efficiency of this new Purina Hog Program can be yours when you feed these high-quality Chows in the way research has proved they should be fed for top results.

Tavern To Open Saturday

Harry and Richard Loucks announced this week that they will open their tavern for business this coming Saturday, July 27. The opening had been delayed pending a routine check and approval from the state fire marshall. Equipment is in the process of installation during the week preparatory for the opening date.

A license to operate the tavern was granted recently by virtue of approval of the DeKalb County Liquor Board and the Indiana Alcoholic Beverage Commission. Two hearings, in June and July, were held at which time protests from several residents of the town and surrounding areas were heard. Their protests, however, were based on conclusions drawn from the possible moral effects of the business rather than on the legality of the business and the character of the proprietors. Since liquor licenses are granted on consideration of the latter points, the local applicants were given the go-ahead.

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS OF ADDITIONAL APPROPRIATIONS

Notice is hereby given the taxpayers of Riverdale School Corporation, DeKalb County, Indiana that the proper legal officers of said municipality at their regular meeting place, on the 5th day of August, 1957, will consider the following additional appropriations which said officers consider necessary to meet the extraordinary emergency existing at this time:

Cumulative Building Fund
Purchase of Land	$70000.00
Improvement of Land	3000.00
Total	$10000.00

Taxpayers appearing at such meeting shall have a right to be heard thereon. The additional appropriation as finally made will be automaticlly referred to the State Board of Tax Commissioners, which Board will hold a further hearing within fifteen days at the County Auditor's office of DeKalb County, Indiana, or at such other place as may be designated. At such hearing, taxpayers objecting to any of such additional appropriations may be heard and interested taxpayers may inquire of the County Auditor when and where such hearing will be held.

Township To Purchase New Fire Truck

A meeting of the Concord Township advisory board and trustee and officials of the St. Joe Volunteer Fire Department was held Tuesday evening at the new fire hall. The purpose of the meeting was to extend plans for the purchase of a new fire truck by the township.

No official action has as yet been taken for appropriating for a new truck and fire fighting equipment, and will not be until exact speicfications have been decided upon. In the discussions thus far, the following facts have been brought forth:

The truck will be purchased by the township through a tax levy which Trustee Walter Moore estimates at 15 cents per hundred dollars of assessed valuation, for a period of six years.

The equipment will be manned by the local volunteer fire department and will be used for runs only within the confines of the township, unless otherwise contracted for.

Cost of the truck and equipemnt will be around $9,000, more or less, subject to the amount and type of equipment desired and the bids to be received on this equipment.

Investigation of the purchase of this equipment and negotiations between the township and the fire department have been in progress for some time. Further discussion will be necessary in the near future to determine the exact equipment to be called for.

Present for the meeting Tuesday evening were Fire Chief Andy Monroe, Trustee Walter Morr, Advisory Board members Ralph Keeler, Bill Sible and Frank Sechler, and citizens Merl Guilford, Derwood Ridgway, Orville Coburn, Mose Yeiser and Ted Haberkorn.

Diamond Dilemma

A person's enthusiasm for one thing or another often goes by spurts. How many times do we find the necessity for "re-organizing" an organization or "re-activating" it because interest in it has fallen off and the purpose of the group has been somewhat forgotten? There probably isn't any cure for this disease of disinterest or diminishing interest and one might become a little discouraged if it were not for the fact that people do reactivate and reorganize periodically and the activity is again untertaken with renewed vigor.

It appears that there is a project of reactivation or reorganization needed as far as a local organization is concerned. We speak of the St. Joe Valley Recreation Club which in 1951 raised enough money to install lights at the local ball diamond. The News, you may recall, carried a slogan on its masthead during that year - "Goal to be won in '51 - a lighted softball damond." Perhaps it is time for a new slogan for the coming year - "Goal on the slate for '58 - reactivate, it's not too late."

It's not too late to renew interest in the ball games which are played at the local diamond. But there are some things which are needed at the diamond before it will again be a place where a person will "want" to go. Needed again are more adults willing to give an evening of their time to help operate the concession stand. There are a lot of youngsters who are willing to help, but adult supervision is needed also - and more than one adult. Needed again is new fencing and repair of bleachers. Needed again is watchfulness on everyone's part that this community property is not abused. Recent shenanigans by the younger set, throwing bottles around just to make them break, can be controlled a great deal just by John Q. Citizen's "Hey, cut that out" rather than relying on someone else to take care of it.

The ball diamond and lights were attained by a concerted effort in which many people helped out. The work oftentimes fell on a comparatively few shoulders as is the usual case. But the cooperation of the community in reaching the desired goal was a big boost. Today there is little cooperation and there is little interest shown by the community in general and even by those who originally were instrumental in completing the project. Attempts to hold meetings of the recreation club in the last year or so have failed and the local diamond is now, as a result, in a sad state of affairs. Only a half dozen at the most have appeared at meetings. The last attempt to hold a meeting brought forth three individuals, all having a direct interest in the diamond. It takes more than those out on the field to keep the field operating strongly and efficiently; it takes interest and desire on the part of others to help keep what has been attained. And even those who use the diamond are becoming increasingly abusive of it. Teams do not respect the hours of labor, for instance, given by a few young men in the area to drag the field and work it down to a good playing surface. Just Monday evening, despite the fall of rain and a request that playing stop, teams continued to play and tracked up the field making more work necessary to fill the holes. The concession stand was broken into, as has been the case many times. The main switch for the lights has twice been broken.

And yet, the diamond is having growing pains. So many teams need the use of the diamond that there are not enough nights to take care of them all, despite the diamond's poor condition and appearance. There are, in fact, so many teams using the diamond that the high school baseball team has found it necessary to "squeeze in" their games whenever possible, when other teams are not in action. The ball diamond is located at the school and the school team can hardly use it! In addition, the physical dimensions of the field, originally layed out when softball interest was at a peak nationally, cannot accommodate the needs of the Pony League, the high school league or possible future teams of older boys and men. There is no room to expand at the present location; the limits of the area have been utilized on half the outfield boundary.

Can the recreation club reactivate and promote relocating the lights, moving them to a new location and adding to them to provide for hardball games of all ages? There is enough need for it. Can this be done, leaving the present diamond for evening twilight games such as are played by the Little League teams or by anyone else who just wants to use the diamond during daylight hours? There is enough need for it.

This is no more impossible than was the original project. There were those who thought that the lighted diamond was an impossible dream, back in 1951. They were amazed and surprised when the tractors and the bulldozers and the men and boys started hauling dirt, leveling hills, removing such obstacles as trees in preparation for installing lights on the diamond. They were unbelieving yet until the very day the trucks hauled in those long light poles and dropped them at the school.

It would be refreshing to do some more "amazing" of this type, some more surprising", some more shattering of the belief that "it can't be done". From here it seems that such a re-awakening of the recreation club could serve two purposes - be a general shot in the arm, a waker-upper for the community and provide something that could well be used. There are more boys in the community today than were present six years ago and they still like baseball.

What do you think?

VACATIONS

Taking a vacation is only half the fun,
As coming back home and telling someone
Of that big fish that broke the pole
While you were fishing in the fishing hole.
And, O Brother! you should have been along,
My wife caught one, about that long.
Or how you set out in the hot sun,
And baked yourself till most half done.
Then that trip up the mountain, my! what a treat,
Of the sights you saw, and a friend you did meet.
And that new car, how it would purr,
When dad stepped on the accelerator.
It's always more fun to tell some one,
Who doesn't know much about what you've done.

ATTENTION AMERICAN HIGH SCHOOLS

"The history of liberty is the history of the limitation of governmental power, not the increase of it. When we resist concentration of power we are resisting the process of death, because the concentration of power is always what precedes the destruction of human liberties." President Woodrow Wilson said this. The founding fathers of our nation said it, perhaps in slightly different words, over and over again as they worked upon the construction of our Republican form of government, dispersing the powers into three branches, hemming them in with many safeguards, and retaining most of the governmental powers to the states.

It would be comforting to know that every high school boy and girl in America can recite these words of Woodrow Wilson on government limitation and have a clear understanding of their meaning. Unfortunately, it just isn't so. Thousands of our high schools do not offer citizenship education, American history, American government, American economics. A few decades ago the textbooks and courses in these subjects began to disappear. Other textbooks and courses were substituted. Fewer and fewer children studied American history and American government; and very few indeed were taught the great advantages of our American system.

In more recent years, realizing the importance of our children knowing the advantages of our system, parents have been asking for American citizenship courses. Teachers and educational administrators generally have been anxious to establish such courses. But they found that textual material and course outlines were not readily available. Hundreds of parents and teachers in all parts of the nation have written to ask that I direct them to proper materials. This has been a problem nation-wide.

For a number of years, however, the Harding Academy which is the high school branch of Harding College has been teaching American citizenship and developing materials and techniques. Superintendent Perry Mason has recently published high school course outlines in American Government, American History, Civics, and World History. For the benefit of the parents and educators searching for such information, I will discuss these outlines in this and subsequent columns.

The Harding Academy outline for American Government begins with the Woodrow Wilson quote on the danger of concentration of power in government, and says in its introduction: "The United States of America was founded by men who loved liberty and prized it above all earthly possessions. .... Today we have many people within our own household who would change 'The American Way'. They would make the State all-powerful and subordinate the individual. If they were to prevail, that kind of government would soon destroy individual freedom, in fact, all the individual rights we now have."

Goals to be developed in each student: (1) A knowledge of the American Constitution and gratitude to the men who wrote it; (2) An understanding of the form and functions of national, state and local governments in the United States; (3) An understanding that liberty is by law and that respect for law must be inculcated in the citizenry until it becomes a national virtue; (4) A knowledge that our whole concept of democracy rests upon a recognition of the worth and dignity of man; (5) A sense of responsibility for the demands of citizenship in a free country.

A list of further desirable basic understandings is given, and a list of necessary supporting skills which should be developed through field trips, outside observations, newspaper reading, etc. The suggested course content is: (1) The Development of the State; (2) Our Federal System of Government; (3) State Governments; (4) Local Governments; (5) Principles of American Government; (6) The United States in World Affairs.

Basic text for the course is American Government (1955), Magruder - McClenaghan, Allyn and Bacon, Inc., Dallas. A list of reference books, suggested newspaper and magazine reading, pamphlets and audio-visual aids is given. Among the films used in this course by Harding Academy are the first three of the National Education Program's "The American Adventure" series. Teachers or interested parents may write for a copy of the outline.

LETTING RUSSIA PRINT OUR MONEY

President Eisenhower apparently is bent on breaking all past records for inane lavishing of "foreign aid" on all and sundry. However, it appears to us that this ambition is destined for failure. For certainly, Ike cannot hope to equal the inanities of "foreign aid" achieved by the Roosevelt and Truman Administrations. He may succeed in scattering more billions all over the world than Roosevelt and Truman did, but he assuredly cannot hope to equal their records for sheer inane and senseless examples of "foreign aid" or worse, to put it as charitably as we can.

As an example of what we mean, we refer to when Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Secretary of the Treasury; with Harry Dexter White, Under-Secretary; and Harold Glasser, who were all in charge of the Treasury, astoundingly gave Communist-Russia money plates, complete with three plane-loads of special ink, and four plane-loads of special paper for printing our money in East Germany for the ostensible purpose of paying two years salaries of the Russian soldiers.

To whatever other purposes, our money printed by the Russians under this hitherto unheard of amazing blanket dispensation has been devoted, of course, has been entirely left up to the "sense of honor" of Soviet-Russia and its tender solicitude for the American free enterprise system which our money represents.

Just how much of our money has actually been printed by Communist Russia under this all-out surrender of the value of our currency to the Russians, of course is not known.

However, the best estimate of how much of it has to date moved into the United States to debase our currency, is 19 billion dollars of it, including three billions which has come in through Canada, and $1,800,000,000 through Swiss banks.

Probably many other Americans like ourselves, had almost forgotten about this shocking perversion of any possible moral concept of "foreign aid", but it is something that we should not forget about. —First, because we should be very sure to see that nothing that approximates this outrage shall ever happen to us again. —Second, because our currency continues to suffer from the results of it.

Citizens of America are indebted to an alert and fearless editor and publisher for reminding them of this evil deed, if indeed actually not an evil plot, and its evil results. This alerting of the American people to what is still continuing to happen to us as a result of this revolting "foreign aid" extended to Communist Russia, is Eugene C. Pulliam, publisher of the Indianapolis Star and Indianapolis News. In a recent address before the Ohio Chamber of Commerce, Editor-Publisher Pulliam said:

"A little American sergeant from Keokuk, Ia., drove us around Berlin, and of course, when you get into the Russian Zone, you are followed by the Secret Police, the uniformed police and everybody else. This sergeant told me that he had sold a wrist watch he paid $29.75 for in 1938, to a Russian soldier for 14,000 good American dollars, $10,000 for a carton of cigarettes, $10,000 for a pair of nylons - money that was just as good as any money you have in your pockets, and we gave them (the Russian Communists) the plates as a great gesture of good will. What in God's name were we doing? - I don't know, ladies and gentlemen.

"This scandal has been hushed up by the money changers all over Europe. Why? Because 'mis-placed persons' went into Central Europe, manipulated a black market with American dollars, and got hold of between eight and ten billion (10,000 million) dollars. These 'mis-placed persons' have flooded the United States with this money, which is just as good as any paper money on earth, and with this money they are buying theaters, hotels and main street properties. In many instances, they are paying two and three times the assessed value. 'Refugees' who have entered the United States are allegd to have come here with suitcases filled with paper money in large denominations.

"The unbelievable - yes, the super unbelievable scandalous fact is that Henry Morgenthau loaned our money printing plates to the Russians and this same money is being used to virtually steal property from real Americans, because the money is in the hands of unscrupulous international 'mis-placed' persons."

We reiterate, if President Eisenhower's ambition is to outdo FDR and "Ole Harry" for sheer inanity in "foreign aid", he might just as well give up.

For Ike cannot possibly come up with anything as diabolically senseless and inane, as when we gave the Russian Communists the wherewithal and the green light to print our money to their heart's content, to the continuing debasement of our currency and jeopardizing of our American free enterprise system, which they so inanely revile.

FIVE CLOCKS AND A LITTLE WATCH

One Sunday morning five electric clocks caused us to do some tall scrambling! My wife's watch warned us as to the shortness of time till services, but five clocks, all in perfect agreement and unity, said, "Don't worry .... plenty of time! You have an hour more than the little watch allows."

So our "peace of mind" returned. We liked what the clocks said rather than the fretful little watch with its "hurry up" message, but something akin to terror gripped us when cars began driving up "an hour too soon"! There had been a power failure. The electric clocks had stopped "in unity" while the little watch, alone, and small as it was, was not touched by it. In my mind I apologized to the little watch. Though in the "minority" it was right! We barely made it.

I learned a lesson: I saw "little watches" in the religious world. They are "in time" with the Truth, while many big and impressive religious "electric clocks" have suffered a "power shortage" .... teachers, preachers, denominations, church councils, seminaries, etc., form an impressive "majority" but because of neglect of the Truth are lulling people into a false security. The "little watches" may agitate, and "stir up" and spoil the false "peace of mind" but it had better be so while there is time to hear and do something about it before too late. Moral: Check your timepiece!

IDOLS OLD AND NEW
Lesson for July 28, 1957

If any of the readers of this paper had seen the pillar of Baal that the hero Gideon pulled down, they might not have noticed it at all. It may have been nothing more impressive than a post or pole of some kind, with or without some other image close beside it. Standing up or knocked over, it wouldn't seem to amount to much. And yet Gideon was acrounted a hero for destroying it; a hero, because there were many people in the place who thought that tearing down that pillar was nothing short of sacrilege. For to them it was sacred, the most sacred object in the village. When Gideon tore it down, he actually risked his life at the hands of his fanatical neighbors.

Idols Overseas

There is hardly any kind of thing, no matter how ugly, ridiculous or disgusting, that has not become an object of worship somewhere, some time. American Christian travelers to India are generally shocked by the "gods" of Hindu temples. Aside from the unmentionables, there are absurd things like Gansh, a fat little god with an elephant's head; or little stone bulls on whose heads garlands of yellow flowers will be laid as a tribute. Elsewhere there are great fat Buddhas, plated with gold or carved out of stone sitting out beside a mountain road, before whom offerings are placed, of money, food or drink. There are mountains and lakes and waterfalls and trees, local sights for the tourist, which are regarded with superstitious awe. Not an hour goes by, on this planet of ours, without some sort of honor - prayer, gifts, sacrifice - being offered to things which "having eyes see not, having ears hear not" - sometimes in human shape, sometimes beast-like, sometimes very hard to classify!

Idols In America

Why do people do such silly things? Perhaps it is for the same reason that Americans worship their idols. Yes, we do have idols in our enlightened land, though they are seldom called by that name. Whatever a man hangs his heart on and depends on, as Luther said, that is his god. And if what we hang our heart on and depend on is the true God, then worshipping him and serving him is true religion. But if what we hand our heart on and depend on is not the true God, then whatever we worship, it is an idol, and worshipping it and serving it is not only nonsense, it is sin. Here in America the name of one idol is The Public. Politicans fall down and worship this idol; so do actors and advertisers. Keep the Public happy and careless, for once you lose its favor, YOU are lost. Another idol is called The Majority. If most people do a thing (or don't do it, as the case may be), then that is the Last Word. Some people would no more think of going against the majority view than they would think of going against God. Indeed for such people the Majority, to all intents and purposes, might as well be God. For they don't listen to God with half the eagerness with which they always want to know what "everybody" does or thinks, before they will decide for themselves.

Only the Brave Break Idols

It took courage, moral and physical, for Gideon to destroy the idol of Baal. It always takes courage to tear down idols. It takes even greater courage to destroy idols oneself has made and worshipped. People who do not follow popular idols are regarded as a little queer, if not more than a little sour. Idol-breakers, people who "buck" popular opinions and prejudices, not only have to get over their fear of what people will think, - they have to get over their fear of the idol itself. Whether it is the primitive African, afraid of the volcano he worships, or the ordinary American idolator, a worshipper of money or popularity, it takes courage to break, or to break with, an idol of any kind. But once the break is made, once a man's trust is placed in one true God alone, he can smile at the idol whose crawling slave he used to be.

"Blessings on him who first invented sleep. It covers a man all over, thoughts and all, like a cloak. It is meat for the hungry, drink for the thirsty, heat for the cold, and cold for the hot. It makes the shepherd equal to the monarch, and the fool to the wise. There is but one evil in it, and that is that it resembles death, since between a dead man and a sleeping man there is but little difference." - Cervantes.

This foregoing bit of philosophy from an old friend (we feel that Cervantes, Shakespeare, Milton, Plato, etc., etc., are friends of us all) came to our mind today because we just had 11,220,480 hours of good restful sleep delivered to us! Count them, there they are: 128 fine Simmons mattresses. Our estimate is that each mattress will last approximately 30 years. That many years is a total of 1,402,560 days. We only allowed you 8 hours per day for sleep, so set the Big Ben alarm (get it at Ort's) or your fine Simmons Beauty Rest innerspring mattress may not last the total of 1,402,560 days! When you need a mattress, get a good mattress, get a Simmons!

Somehow this bit of wisdom won't leave us, "You have to stay awake to make your dreams come true."

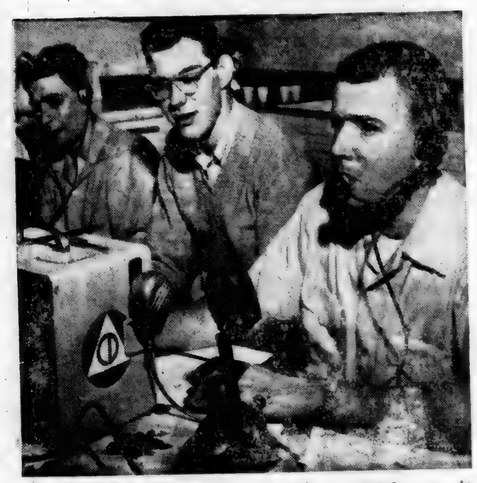
CONTROLLED TRAFFIC phase of the "Evac 12" evacuation exercise in Binghamton, N. Y. is shown as autos on Route 17 moved up to the Five Mile Checkpoint (arrow and lower inset) where they were formed into 14-car caravans for the 28-mile trip to the "reception area." Upper inset shows how traffic was controlled by radio-equipped auxiliary police. (Airphoto Associates Photo)



AMATEUR RADIO "ham" operators demonstrated anew in "Evac 12," Binghamton, New York's civil defense evacuation test, the vital part they play in tying together emergency operations with a flexible, widespread communications net. These are members of RACES, the Radio Amateur Civil Emergency Service, which enlists the emergency aid of "hams" throughout the nation under a program sponsored by the Federal Civil Defense Administration in cooperation with local authorities. (Binghamton Press Photo)

FATHER AND SON guard the control center for "Evac 12," the emergency evacuation test in Binghamton, N. Y. recently. Some 1,500 residents were directed from their homes in Binghamton to Deposit, N. Y., 28 miles, and "resettled" there for the day. (Binghamton Press Photo)

PLANNING vs. PANIC

Binghamton Evacuates 1,500 People in Pace-Setting Test

In a Sunday "outing" with a serious purpose, 1,500 residents of Binghamton, N. Y., traveled 28 miles from their homes to tiny Deposit, N. Y., in one of the largest civil defense evacuation exercises ever held.

The test, involving 372 autos and a special train, was symbolic of the survival effort which millions of Americans would make in a real emergency to put miles between themselves and threatened nuclear attack.

"EVAC 12"—code name of the exercise involving Binghamton's 12th ward—included two sets of motorists in the four-hour test. When the alarm sounded, the first group of 500 persons simulated panic by driving on to the evacuation highway helter-skelter in uncontrolled movement.

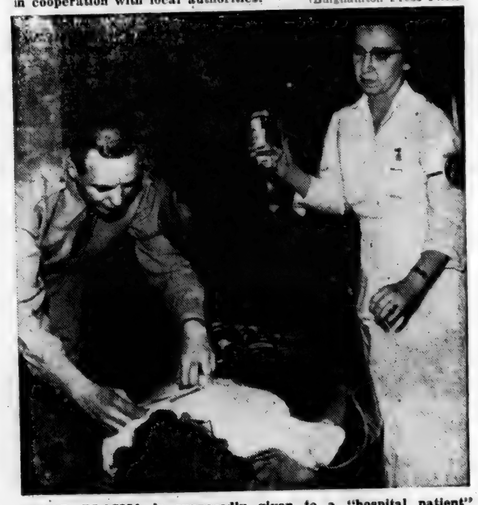
Shortly afterward, the first of some 250 cars began moving out of a checkpoint on Route 17 in controlled groups of 14 cars each for the trip to Deposit.

Lt. Gen. Clarence R. Huebner, who observed the test along with New York's Lt. Gov. George B. DeLuca, said that "probably for safety's sake under disaster conditions, we would do better with the small, controlled grouping of cars."

Aboard the special train were 64 simulated patients of an emergency hospital, and 46 youngsters "displaced" or "lost" in the confusion of potential attack.

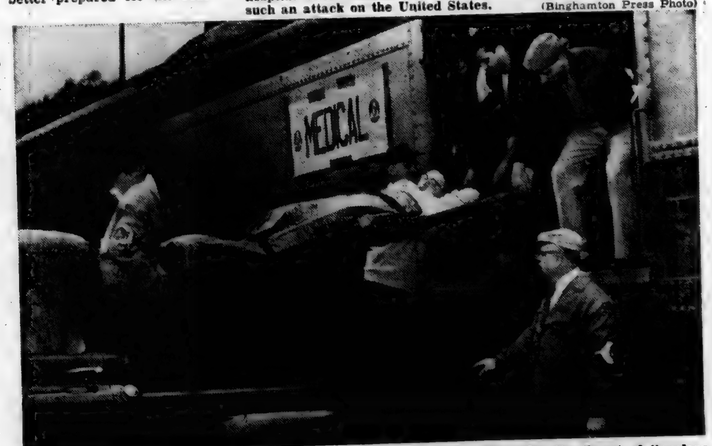
Evacuees were assigned for visits to the homes of Deposit residents when they arrived, just as might be necessary on a longer-term basis after a real attack.

After a dinner, served under improvised conditions, they returned home with a "well done" from pleased civil defense officials and the knowledge that they were better prepared for the real thing if it ever comes.



BLOOD PLASMA is supposedly given to a "hospital patient" moved out of Binghamton, N. Y. during the simulated medical exercise which accompanied the civil defense "Evac 12" evacuation test in May. Sixty-four "litter patients" were given simulated treatments just as they would be if they were in an emergency hospital when nuclear attack threatened, or in the aftermath of such an attack on the United States. (Binghamton Press Photo)

CONGRATULATIONS to the more than 1,000 workers in "Evac 12," Binghamton, N. Y.'s recent evacuation exercise, were given by Lt. Gov. George B. DeLuca (right), and New York State Civil Defense Director Lt. Gen. Clarence R. Huebner at a press conference following the huge test. Crediting three local civil defense directors for execution of the state-devised plan, General Huebner concluded from the favorable and serious public response to the test that "its value will be immense not only to the 16,000,000 people of New York State but to the entire nation." (Binghamton Press Photo)



EVACUATION TRAIN on which 110 simulated medical patients and "displaced" children were carried to "safety" is shown loading at Binghamton, N. Y., during "Evac 12," a test of the city's ability to evacuate under the threat of "nuclear attack." The 80-minute trip into Pennsylvania was used to practice emergency medical care of 64 "litter patients." (Binghamton Press Photo)

VOLUME LXXII ST. JOE, (DeKalb Co.), IND. Thursday, August 1, 1957 NUMBER 31

Around the Town

With the Editor

The big news in these parts ten days ago as far as the local sports world was concerned was Wetzel Griggs' no-hitter which he hurled against Harlan in a Little League contest. He had his curve breaking just right and fanned 15 batters.

Coasting down the street as we returned from vacation a couple of weeks ago, we looked twice to see who that was walking downtown and were surprised and glad to see that Joe Foltz was back on his feet again and perkin' again - maybe not as quick as before but perkin' again. He had been bedfast for the past few months and quite seriously ill.

At Casey's the other day, Jim Hensley was shooting the breeze with Casey when I drove in, and during our conversation Jim's younger brothers, Bob and Mike, age about 3 and 6, saw him across the street and started making like Mom when they called, "Jim, you better get over here right now. I mean it, get over here." Bob had a small piece of wood in his hand and he admonished further, "If you don't come home right now, I'll come after you with this club." They tried their best to get their voices low and adult sounding but just couldn't make it, which made it that much more amusing.

Speaking of the Hensleys, we notice that Sue will appear on Thursday night's talent show competition this week at the Harlan Days celebration.

While we were on vacation, we tried fishing every so often, not a whole lot but just enough to make things interesting. And we caught 'em every time we went out, not great big ones but mostly just average with a few big ones to make things more interesting.

Lake James, with all its runabouts and big inboards, usually isn't thought of as a fishing lake. But if you go there during the week, you'll find that it's pretty good fishing, at least we did. The biggest difficulty was with the weather, the wind being so stiff every day but one that you had trouble keeping a boat anchored, if at all. One of the windiest days brought us good luck for the few moments we were out. I was out with the boys and picked up a couple of 8 or 8¼ inch rock bass when we were dragged across one of the sunken islands in the third basin. And Grandpa Haberkorn picked up a 12¼ inch bass the same way the same day at another sunken island further north in the basin.

Another time - and we have a witness to this fish story - Esther, Mike and I went fishing on the sunken island with Pastor Sziemeister along for the ride. We pulled 'em in as fast as we threw out for a couple of hours.

One thing we noticed this year - the fish swallowed the hook more than in past years. —Now someone ought to have a wise retort to that observation - like - it wasn't the fault of the fish that were biting, it was the sucker at the other end of the line.

Now who in the world in Fort Wayne sent that post card with no name and a clipping attached taken from Earl Wilson's column. The clipping reads:

"Earl's Pearls - A small town's a place where the news gets around before the newspaper does."

—Ain't it the truth.

I hear from Paul Moore that Bud Shockley helped pull a few kids out of the water at Marble Lake in Michigan last week end after the boat in which they were riding flipped and tossed them in the water. Fortunately they were wearing life preservers and everyone was O.K.

Dick Haines of I&M's Butler office pointed out a nice gesture by the Duntens this week. While Marjorie Ramsey is recovering from her injuries, Mildred and Butch offered to handle the collection of bills for her with the stipulation that she get the job back when she is able to handle it.

—Good neighbors.

Background Scripture: Ruth.

Devotional Reading: Deuteronomy 10:17-21.

FOREIGNER
Lesson for August 4, 1957

America has always been a land of foreigners. The first human beings who ever came to these shores were natives of other lands. We think of the Indians as having lived here always, but their ancestors came from Asia across the Bering Strait. Some ancestor of every one who reads this sentence was once recently - or long ago- an immigrant to this country. And still they keep coming. The coming of Hungarians is fresh in our minds; but they are only one among many races in our American melting pot. In this we are more like Brazil or Australia than like long-settled countries such as Norway and Scotland.

Motives

Why don't people stay put? Why this age-long trek from one land to another? Sometimes it is a mass-movement, sometimes a mere trickle of individuals. But migration is almost never aimless. There are always reasons. The story of Ruth, in the Bible book named for her, is the story of an immigrant girl, and very suggestive for our times, too. This particular young woman left her native land to go among strangers at a time and place when strangers and migrants had a much harder time of it than they do even now. But her motives were simple, strong and good. She went from Moab to Judah because she loved her mother-in-law Naomi, the mother of her dead young husband. One of the most beautiful expressions of devotion, by the way, to be found anywhere, is in the book of Ruth where the young woman declares her determination to follow Naomi wherever she goes; - a small poem of love, from a daughter-in-law to her mother-in-law. Ruth's motive in moving from her native country to a strange one was simply her love for her family. Many persons have come to America for no other reason than this, that their families had come or were coming. Think of the Hungarian families who want to stay together; of the war brides from Germany and Italy and Japan; of the newcomers from Greece, China, Ireland and all over the world, who as soon as they got through customs have headed straight for some city where they could live near their relatives. Most foreigners arrive with mixed motives; so did our ancestors. And some of those motives are just as good as Ruth's.

Contributions

Ruth, like most immigrants, had to start at the bottom of the ladder, both economically and socially. She was one of the extremely poor for whom the ancient law had been made: Do not harvest our fields clean - leave some gleanings for the poor of the land. So in her humble way, picking up what she could find in the fields of Boaz, Ruth contributed to the "labor pool" of her new home. Boaz was bright enough to see that Ruth had something to contribute besides physical srength. (She could carry a 90-pound sack of grain without help.) She had character of a rare sort. It took courage on the side of Boaz to decide to marry her, for he would be going against the prejudices of his neighbors, even against the law, which banned Moabites down to the tenth generation - and Ruth was only the first! But Boaz knew that this young woman, as wife and mother, would be an asset to his family and his country. And we know how right he was; how she became an ancestor of King David and even of the greater King Jesus.

Welcome

It is only natural for people, families, communities and even nations to become ingrown, to be suspicious of strangers. Some places hardly ever admit any one to their closed circle. In a Virginia community a daughter of one of the "First Families," speaking of a neighbor, said, "Her family came here only 60 years ago - they don't really belong here!" What a lonely life that neighbor must have led! Newcomers have to prove themselves, as all men must; but it is shabby treatment not even to give them a chance. Happy is the community, and blessed the church, that will be as quick to help the needy among its newcomers, and to perceive the good in them, as Boaz was with Ruth, the penniless immigrant.

We were about to write something real mean today. Then having thought better of it we turned to "Mr. Jones, Meet the Master" and found this wisdom. It made us feel so much better that we're passing it along for your benefit, too.

Religion, you say, has broken down? Well, it may be that your puny prejudices, your preconceived ideas, your home made theories and selfish philosophies have broken down - and that's a good thing. But that's not religion.

Perhaps you have seen that the ballyhoo and bunk that previously passed for religion aren't worth anything, and that's a splendid discovery to make. But real religion - experimental knowledge and worship of a personal God - communion with a risen Christ in a Spirit-directed life; hearts consecrated to Jesus Christ; lives motivated by the principles of the Great Galilean - these things are still here, just as regnant and as real as ever.

There is a great difference between the failure of a conception and the failure of the reality itself. From "Singing In the Rain."

Ralph Waldo Emerson said that for every moment you are angry you lose sixty seconds of happiness.

Garrett, Ind.
Mr. Haberkorn,

Dear Sir:

I am Nan Lysher and am writing to ask about the back pay for your paper. I am sending a check for $5.00. If more is due I will send it next month. You see I was a resident of, in and near St. Joe for over 30 yrs. until a stroke of paralysis compeled me to come to my daughter's in Garrett, so the "News" is like a letter from home, that is, when the local items tells the home news. I have been in Garrett nearly 8 years and am 91 yrs. old and sent in items when Mort Olds published the paper. I remember sending him the announcement of the birth of my sisters son, Roy Koch.

I look forward to getting "The News" so good luck to you and old St. Joe.

Yours,
Nan Lysher, 100 S. Guilford St., Garrett

Dear Editor,

I see in St. News that Ralph Sechler was ousted from school board.

If you will put this in your paper Ralph Sechler was ousted from School Board Why don't they go all the way and ouste 2 Trustees and one that sits on Board. Get a new outfit. Maybe when they advertise Sealed Bids on Buss R.T. they will sell R.T. as advertised on April 2. instead of opening old drivers bids seeing what they bid then rejected their bids Put them off one week then they had other bidders that as long as they knew what the old drivers bid was they sure could under bid. let's have a square shooting good School Board What do you say. Thanks.

P.S. $2.00 to pay you for your work.

Now if the writer of the above letter had signed his (or her) name, we would know where to credit the $2.00. The postmark on the envelope is "Auburn" - c'mon now, who sent it?? —Ed.

Hi Ted, July 28, 1957

I thought it was about time I write to you and thanked you for sending me the St. Joe news. It sure kept me up to date on the news around St. Joe. Some of my buddies from New York and Boston got a kick out of reading it. They asked me how many people were in St. Joe and I told them. They said they had that many in one block.

I leave Washington August 31st, and go to Norfolk, Va., and aboard ship. I don't know which one yet, after I take a little leave.

It has been sort of an honor being in U.S. Navy Ceremonial Guard. I have seen several important people like Mr. Eisenhower, Mr. Nixon, John Foster Dulles and King Saud of Saudi Arabia, President of Viet Nam and several more from foreign countries. I also had the honor of being in the inauguration parade for President Eisenhower.

I have been to more funerals in a week than most people attend in a life time. Of course that is part of my job, burying people. We usually average 5 or 6 funerals a day, five days a week.

I am fairly lucky than most of the guys in the service around St. Joe, because I can make it home on the weekends, since I have something to go home for. When I do come home, I hitch hike around 1200 miles around trip.

Before I go, want to thank you again for sending me the St. Joe News.

Thanks for everything.
Donnie Baker

MEMORIAL
August 11, 1956

A year ago Fern said, "Good bye"
And went to dwell with Jesus "On High."
We miss her voice, her lovely smile,
And her presence, all the while
Since she is gone I sit alone,
Her piano is silent, there is no tone;
But I know on that other shore,
She'll be with Jesus for evermore.
On that other shore, we hope to meet,
And be together at Jesus' feet;
Then there will be no more "Good Byes",
No more heartaches, tears or sighs.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

Background Scripture: I Samuel 1; 2:1-11, 18-21.

Devotional Reading: Psalm 66: 1-2, 16-20.

PROMISE TO GOD

Lesson for August 11, 1957

A sure way to lose any one's respect is to fail to keep a promise. If a promise simply cannot be kept, as in case of illness or accident, no one will hold a failure against you. But a man will more quickly make excuses for himself than others will make for him. The brighter side is true too; no better way can be found to build up a solid reputation than to become known as a person who always keeps promises once made. No brilliance, no charm, makes up for keeping promises. What a letter of introduction this would make: "The bearer is a young man of fine background. He graduated with honors. He has great charm of manner, his know-how is enormous for his age. He has only one drawback: you can't depend on him" -!

Promising God

Belief in God is feebler, even among good people, than it ought to be. One proof of this is the fact that many people, if not most of them, will be deeply ashamed of not keeping their promises to human beings, but will not take very seriously their failure to keep promises made to God. If a man owes a church pledge, and also some local store, he will pay the store bill first, and if he can only pay one, you know which gets the cash. If "ratting" on promises made to God is taken lightly, it only shows how lightly men believe in God.

If the Bible teaches anything it is that promises made to him mean far more than when made to ordinary people. The short name for such promises is "vows". Protestants make them as well as Roman Catholics. A promise seriously made, either to do something for God or for his people because they are his people (especially the church) or a promise solemnly made in Gods presence, calling on his name as a witness, is a vow. As the Bible teaches, nobody has to make a vow; but once made, the vow must be kept. Examples of vows are those made at baptism (by the parents, if a child is involved, or by the one baptized if he is old enough) at confirmation or "joining the church"; or when making a pledge of money to a church; or the vows taken by a bride and groom; as well as all sorts of private vows.

". . . and Changeth Not"

"He that sweareth to his own hurt, and changeth not," comes in for special praise in the 1th Psalm. The story of Hannah tells of just such a person. She promised her first child to God. In her days and circumstances, this meant giving the child up and seldom seeing him again after the first few years. She had been bitter about her childlessness, and of course was overjoyed when little Samuel was born. Giving him up meant being childness all over again - but she kept her promise. She had five other children later, but she did not expect this when she presented her one son, her first-born, in the temple. It's easy to make promises, even easy to keep them when keeping them is pleasant. But your really devoted Christians, solid to the core, are those who keep their promises to God no matter what.

If Some One Knows

Human nature being what it is, even a promise to God is more likely to be kept if we know someone else knows about it. Hannah's vow was known to Eli the priest eventually, and we may guess that he suspected it from the start. No doubt this helped her to be faithful. So marriage vows are spoken not alone in God's presence but in the company of witnesses. So vows taken at joining the church, or confirmation, are taken in front of the whole congregation. This is why baptism, of a child or an adult, should never be private. If we were angels, a promise made to God in secret would be just as well kept as one made in public. But since we are human, and weak in faith, it helps if some ear besides God's hears our vows.

Around the Town

With the Editor

A week or so ago, Butch and Mildred Dunten were seen at their store after regular closing time obviously searching for a lost object on the steps, on the sidewalk, in the street, etc. I guess they had come up from the house to look for an errant key and were having little luck finding it.

Just as a group of ladies, including Parlia Hull, Ruth Coburn, Lena Meek and a friend of theirs, passed by, Mildred stuck her hand in her pocket and - yep, there it was, just like it always happens. The key was in her pocket all the time.

When you write up an account of a news event, it is often an easy matter to use a combination of words that comes out sounding laughable, even when it's about a serious thing like a wedding.

I noticed one account in a paper from this area last week that told about the wedding ceremony in detail, named the best man, maid of honor, serving hostesses, etc.

One of the closing paragraphs contained this information:

"When the couple left for a wedding trip to Michigan, the bride was wearing a blue and biege dress with white accessories. . . ."

Did your paper come with a halo over it last week? The reason I ask is that most of the copies of last week's paper were folded wholly or partly by Pastor Sziemeister and I thought maybe he might have rubbed off on some of them.

Just ask him - you never know what'll happen when you stop in at the News Office - you may end up folding papers.

I hear Ben Ruch picked a tomato from his garden this week that weighed in at 1 pound and 4 ounces.

And the Yeisers, as well as some others, have had trouble with the tomato crop this year what with one side getting burned or something, turning yellow. - But the rest of 'em taste good.

—Tomato news always interests me.

The mama bull, the papa bull and the baby bull set out to go to the fair. After walking a while the mama bull became tired and sat down to rest. A while later the papa bull got tired and he sat down to rest. But the little bull walked all the way to the fair.

Now, the moral to this is: Sometimes a little bull goes a long way.

DeKalb County commissioners have authorized county auditor Oliver Opdycke to advertise for bids for road signs to be placed on county rural highways. The bids will be opened on Friday, August 23. Posts for the road signs have been purchased. They were bought for less than $1,000. Commissioners allocated in the 1957 budget approximately $7,000 to be used for purchase and installation of the signs.

Commissioners ruled that the highways will be numbered numerically starting at the northwest corner of the county in Fairfield Township. All north-south roads will be given odd numbers. The east-west roads will be alloted even numzers.

All angling roads will be designaced by a number followed by the letter "A". North-south roads will be numbered from west to east and east-west roads from north to south.

Mrs. Wasson the widow of Wallace Wasson, had been a resident of the nursing home for 18 months and had been in ill health for the past 6 months. She was born May 13, 1883, in Newville Township but spent most of her lifetime in Concord Township. She was the daughter of the late Martin and Charlotte Bleeks Steele.

On July 4, 1902, she and Mr. Wasson were married in Butler. The couple made their home in Concord Township.

Rain is scarce in these parts with just a few drops Wednesday morning, just enough to make it seem hotter when the sun came out.

State Fair officials recommend writing for tickets for the shows to be presented at the Indiana State Fair this year. JUST WONDERING

Americans are earning more money than ever before,
And each year we get just a little bit poorer;
The more we make the more things cost,
So have we gained or have we lost?
It is a fact, that our national debt,
Is larger than it has ever been yet.
Our larger machines all take more grease,
Besides the excessive cost of peace.
I don't know just what the end may be,
But I guess we will have to wait and see.
At present we are going along quite fine,
But someday we may come to the end of the line.

JANKE LUMBER YARD

BUTLER, IND. Ph. 211

in this corner . .

by Charles Ort

Two men were hunting when the game warden suddenly appeared on the scene, and demanded to see their licenses. One of the two took to his heels, and, pursued by the warden, he ran for fifteen minutes but was finally overtaken.

He surprised the warden by pulling out his license as soon as he recovered his breath.

"But why did you run when you had a license?"

"Well, you see, sir, the other fellow doesn't have one."

"You'll be surprised too (not by a game warden, I hope) when you see all the splendid pieces of jewelry that I bought at the Retail Jewelers Market in Chicago (National Jewelry Fair).

It's inconceivable how the designers and craftsmen can keep coming up with so many new breath-taking creations in jewelry, but they do! So, we'll have them for you to see soon!

We always say, "The price is what you pay, the value is what you get."

FRIEND FOR LIFE

Lesson for August 18, 1957

When Jonathan died, his friend David sang a song about him which has come down to us in the Bible (II Sam. 1:17-27) as a sample not only of David's genius as a man't poet, but as a gem in the literature of friendship. The curious feature of it is that at the time of Jonathan's death David was technically and actully a rebel against the government in which Jonathan was an officer. The army, in the defeat of which Jonathan was killed, would have been sent against David except that the Philistines were at the moment Public Enemy Number One. And in fact David was officially an ally of those same Philistines whose troops crushed Jonathan's.

Strange background for friendship! No friendship has stood the final test unless it is a friendship "in spite of" what tries to break it up; easy-going friendship may not be very strong when the test comes.

In Spite of Rivalry

One thing that breaks up friendships in a hurry is a situation in which both friends are rivals - for a job, for a promotion, for a girl, for money. Now Jonathan was David's rival for the most important (and glamorous, too) job in their country: nothing less than being King. Jonathan was the Crown Prince, David only a commoner; but David had the backing of the prophet Samuel. This meant that David had the approval of God, for that high place, as Jonathan did not. It was harder for Jonathan not to be jealous of David than for David not to be jealous of Jonathan. But Jonathan was David's good friend in spite of that. Sometimes a friendship, well started, will keep right on when a rivalry opens up. But is not so often that men already rivals will become friends. Jonathan knew from the start that David had his eye on the throne, for when first Jonathan heard of him, he was trying out for his sister's hand in marriage. Eastern courts being what they were, and still are, that ordinarily spelled trouble for the future; but not for Jonathan. Win or lose, he was still a friend.

In Spite of the Feud

Another thing has spoiled many a budding friendship; family interference. For years all Jonathan could have heard at home about David was nothing good. Saul hated the very sight of David, and in fact tried over and over again to kill him or get him killed. It reached the point where once at dinner when David's name was mentioned, and Jonathan offered a perfectly sensible excuse for his not being there, King Saul broke out in a red rage, insulting Jonathan and his mother besides, all because Jonathan was acting decently about David.

What your family says about people - the preacher, the school teacher, the mayor, the President, or the next door neighbor - is hard to get away from. It's hard to see good in people when those closest to you see nothing but meanness. It takes a real friend to be able to listen to slander by the earfull, and not believe a word of it. It takes a pretty strong backbone to run the risk of breaking with your family in order to stand by somebody they don't like but who you know is worth two of you.

In Spite of Inferiority

Jonathan was, as the stories about him show, a popular man, and an able one. He would have made a better king than Saul . . . but not better than David. He knew this. For all his popularity, he was less popular than David. The people loved Jonathan, but most of them could see that David would make a better leader of the nation. If Jonathan found this hard to take, he said not a word about it that any one remembered. He did not get himself all choked up in an "inferiority complex." It is easier to be a good friend to people less able than yourself, less good-looking, less popular, less anything good, than it is to be a good friend to some one who, on most counts, outrates you.

All friends wish their friends well. But the acid test of friendship is this: can you wish your friend well when you know that his success means your eclipse?

by Charles Ort

We were so terribly impressed when we read this current news story that we felt that all our readers should have a chance to read or reread it then breathe a little prayer of thanks for our great country.

A Greek immigrant recently drafted into the U.S. Army has nothing but praise for his adopted country.

The immigrant, George Karavolos, stationed at Fort Carson, already had chalked up two years of service in the Merchant Marine when he was drafted. He has been in this country since 1952.

While in the Merchant Marine Karavolos had an opportunity to visit his sweetheart in Greece. He married her and brought her back to Decatur, Ill.

As a small boy in Greece, Karavolos, now the father of two children, fled from the Nazis in a rowboat with his parents. After the war he finished high school in his homeland before immigrating to America.

"I'd never realized that there could be a country in the world as fine as the United States," Karavolos said at Camp Carson. "We had always heard so much about it in Greece, but it is even much more wonderful than I'd thought it could be."

General Grant once said, "I know only two tunes; one of them is "Yankee Doodle" and the other isn't."

Around the Town

With the Editor

My apologies to Jess Loftus whom we slighted last week in reporting his birthday observance. Jess is now 84 years young instead of the measly 74 as indicated last week.

When you get that many years behind you, you're entitled to holler when somebody goofs about your age.

We were sitting there at the ball diamond Monday evening watching the church teams play. John Strombeck remarked that it was about time he headed for home. He also remarked that he'd have to watch his step on the sidewalks - which was entirely understandable.

Walked anyplace in town at night lately? You have to make like you're going thru 10 or 12 inches of snow - high-stepping - in order to keep from stubbing your toe and falling flat on your face.

—Or else walk in the street.

Does anyone recognize the name William Cody Chubb?

Mr. Chubb walked into the News Office last week and showed me a clipping from the news of around 1946 in which a column of news dating back to 1887 was re-run. His birth was included in those 1887 announcements.

Mr. Chubb mentioned a couple of old school buddies, Bill Staman and Ralph Sechler. He mentioned that in the old days "Sechler" was pronounced "Sigler". He also remembered the days when Newville was a thriving community with a teachers' school, a blacksmith shop and other necessary business establishments for the needs of that day.

Mr. Chubb now resides in Napoleon, Ohio.

I want to apologize to the farmers and gardeners around here. All that money you're losing on the crops that are drying up - it's the editor's fault. The usual Saturday afternoon ritual of washing the car has been neglected recently. This, without doubt, accounts for the lack of rain.

Dunten's Market is getting a fresh coat and new color of paint via the brushes of Floyd Coburn and his new partner, Carrol Eicher. Carrol was having some trouble Wednesday with the store front above the roof that overhangs the sidewalk. He had to stick his head and arms between the rungs of the ladder and s-t-r-e-tch in order to reach the wall. But he reached it.

The new color? - Green.

The Peppy Gals 4-H Club was heard Wednesday on WOWO being interviewed by Jane Weston. Nancy Brown was telling about her work as song leader of the club when I had the program tuned in. She's had the job of song leader for several years. Then one of the Sharons in the club was interviewed. I think it was Sharon K. Smith. That's an oddity of the club - there are 4 Sharons in it. That way when the leader tells Sharon to do something, it's bound to be done.

Three young people will be received into the Communicant membership of St. Peter's Lutheran Church at Spencerville next Sunday afternoon. They are Judith Furnish, Sharon Smith and Parks Hollabaugh. Mr. and Mrs. Victor Kelley and family of Butler and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stemen and family and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kast of Spencerville called on the Glenn Moores Saturday night enjoying homemade ice cream and cookies.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Lohse are in New Castle, Pa., for a few days visiting their cousin.

Mrs. Marge Hoffman was hostess to her bridge club at the Ray Overmire home.

It has been suggested that the Spencerville Community Club have another Clean Up Week this fall and the date will be set soon.

Tom Hollabaugh, who is stationed on the east coast, got to talk with Eddie Collins at Norfolk last week. Larry Emenhiser who is stationed there also he missed connections with as his boat had left for 3 or 4 weeks. Eddie is the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Collins, formerly of St. Joe, while Larry is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Cal Laux. All 3 boys left last September for active duty in the Navy after 1 year in the reserve, along with Donnie Baker, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Baker, and Jerry Flesher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Flesher.

The Spencerfille Fire Department has had several grass fire runs recently as well as a call when Mr. Howard Shilling had a load of hay on fire just west of Spencerville last Tuesday.

Mrs. Clair Timberlin is in the John Weidner home this week as her father, Mr. John Weidner, has not been feeling so well.

Miss Cheryl Norris is spending the week with her aunt and uncle, the Kenneth Norrises, east of Spencerville.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Crowl and family were in Michigan Sunday bringing home peaches to can.

Students To Enroll Aug. 30

Students of Riverdale School will return to their studies for the 1957-1958 school year next Friday, August 30, when registration will be made of all who are to attend the local school. Principal Joe Smith announced this week that registration at both the grade and high schools will begin at 9:30 a.m. with the school busses covering their routes accordingly.

The only necessity for the first day of school is a pencil. An instruction sheet will be issued to students giving further information as to needs for the coming year. Regular classes will then begin on Tuesday, September 3.

Mr. Smith also announced that he will be in the principal's office next week to give assistance and counsel to students who may have a question concerning their school program or for students who may be new in the community and therefore unacquainted with the school curriculum.

Coach Price Brookfield has requested that boys who will participate in high school sports during the coming year remain at the school following morning registration in order to take a physical examination. Baseball team members in particular should remain since a game is scheduled for the first day of school.

Cash Taken In Tavern Break-In

Another burglary was reported to the sheriff's office Wednesday morning of this week by the D&H Tavern which opened for business a few weeks ago. Owners Dick and Harry Loucks reported the theft which occurred sometime between 1:30 a.m. and 9 a.m. Wednesday morning. Entry was gained by breaking a window in the rear of the business establishment, according to deputy sheriff Dorsie Likens who investigated the theft. Money was taken from the coin boxes of a juke box, cigarette machine and bowling game. An incomplete report of cash taken showed a total of $22 missing. Inventory of the cigarette machine was yet necessary to establish the amount taken from it.

Two silver dollars were included in the loot.

The break-in occurred sometime between closing time early Wednesday morning and the 9:30 a.m. opening of the establishment.

MY PICTURE WINDOW

Through my kitchen window,
My gladiolus I see;
And they are as beautiful,
As gladiolus can be.

Oh! what pretty colors,
Red, yellow, pink and white
And many more colors,
Very beautiful and bright.

Just look at that lavender,
Over on the other side
With petals so large
And opened so wide.

What beautiful bouquets,
These gladiolus do make,
When to a sick friend
Some flowers you would take.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

BY DR. KENNETH I. FOREMAN

Background Scripture: Amos.
Devotional Reading: Amos 5:18-24.

CRUSADERS

Lesson for August 25, 1957

When Amos, the hired man, Amos the migrant worker, stood up in the city square at Bethel to make a speech, no doubt people laughed. It looked funny to see a man in overalls making like a politician. They laughed: but they did not keep on laughing. He did not talk like a politician at all. It was like nothing they had expected. It was more like . . . well, like a prophet, only there hadn't been a prophet at Bethel since any one cared to remember. It was like a prophet, only Amos himself didn't want that title. The country was full enough as it was of prophets who were happy as June-bugs, and about as effective. The one tune they hummed went something like "Everything is for the best in the best of possible worlds."

What Is a Crusader?

Amos did not see it that way. He drew such a dark picture of the country and the times and the prospects that the leading citizens were worried. Get that man out of here! they said. He's not good for business, he's not good for the church, he's not good, period. But Amos kept right on. We do not know how long he lived after those exciting days in Bethel, but his speeches are not dead yet. We can call him an early type of crusader. No popular occupation!

A crusader is next door to a crank, and some crusaders are cranks, and all cranks are nuisances; so most people shy away from the very word. However, we have other words meaning much the same thing. To crusade - it's no different from "stand up and fight", "stand up and be counted", "go out on a limb", "carry a torch for -", "go to bat (or to the mat) for -". Words change from century to century, but the thing is always the same. The crusader is a man with two slogans. He does not always put it this way, but these two are always samples of his attitude to life and the world around him: Something is wrong with the world: RIGHT IT!

Something is wrong with the world: RIGHT IT!

Crusading From the Bottom

If you think all's well with the world, you are no crusader. If you think a lot is wrong with the world but nothing can be done about it, you are no crusader. But even if you can say Amen to those two slogans just now mentioned, you are still no crusader if all you do is stand there and yell. A true crusader wants other men to join his fight. That was true when the word began to be used, in the years when European army after army went out to the mid-east to win back the Holy Land. It is still true, a crusader is a rouser of men, not merely an aroused man.

What makes a crusader tick? They both feel the weight of the world's evil, but in different ways. The crusader from the bottom is a man who has felt the evil. Amos was in that class. He came from the very bottom drawer, a hired man in a submarginal area, next to beggars, about the most underprivileged of the underprivileged. He well knew what social and economic injustice are; he had been a victim of both. So today and always, some of the most effective crusaders are men and women who have personally been victimized by the evils they set out to destroy. Some of the greatest temperance workers and crusaders have been men whose own lives had been wrecked by alcohol.

Crusader From the Top

The crusader from the top, on the contrary, is a man or woman who has never personally suffered from the evils they fight. They are people with both sympathy and imagination, Wiberforee in England and Lincoln in America had never been slaves, neither had John Woolman; but they felt the evil of slavery more keenly than some slaves did. Frances E. Willard, founder of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, had never been an alcoholic. The greatest crusader of all time was surely Jesus Christ. Should we not say that he was a crusader from the top?

JANKE LUMBER YARD

BUTLER, IND. Ph. 211

by Charles Ort

Someone once said, "Think that day lost, whose low descending sun views from thy hand no worthy action done."

We are going to try and write a few thoughts about our appliance and television service department. You may have noticed that we never advertised for work for our service department. The reason for that lack of solicitation is very obvious. We only have two servicemen. Nothing would suit us and them better than to service all the appliances in the area. The manpower is not great enough. Therefore, WE MUST CONFINE OUR EFFORTS TO THOSE PEOPLE WHO when they bought their appliances, thought enough of our product and our promise of service for those products to BUY FROM US. We believe that when a person thinks enough of a product to buy it in Hoboken, that they should expect Hoboken to see that it does a good job for them. When Hoboken doesn't come through, then, too late there is the great awakening.

We feel a great loyalty to our appliance and TV customers and will continue to serve them unfailingly.

"The useful and the beautiful are never separated." Perlander.

Around the Town

Jess Loftus passes this one along about Helen Ferguson and the baby bottle in the post office.

It seems like late Saturday afternoon Helen remembered she had to go to the post office and it must have been around bottle time for the baby, also. Somehow in the confusion of providing for the care of the baby and rushing off to the post office, the bottle was carried along to the post office and got sat down on the counter - where it stayed for the remainder of the week end until retrieved again Monday.

The most popular labor-saving device for women, Esther says, is still a husband with money.

I was busy working Thursday last week and a lady came in and said she wantel to pay on her paper. I didn't recognize her and asked, "What's the name?" She said, "Ira Moore from Phoenix, Arizona" and I looked again and, by golly, it was Mrs. Moore, but minus about 30 or 40 pounds, looking younger than ever and like a million bucks.

Carol Baker was telling Harriett about her home economics class.

Mom asked, "Do they let you eat what you cook?"

"Let us!" Carol exclaimed. "They make us!"

Stanley Robinson found a pretty good glove over at the ball diamond Tuesday night. We have it over at the house. The owner can get it by identifying it.

I think it was found after the Lions Little League Dads and Sons game.

I like Mr. Ort's philosophy in his "Corner" this week.

Read it. It can apply to a great many "nuisances" in our living.

NEWVILLE TWP. HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB

The Newville Township Home Demonstration Club met August 14 at their club house.

Hostesses were Della Hart, Lucille Nelson and Anna Hursey.

A report from the council meeting was given by Lois Guiff. A report was given by Edna Mickelson and Lois Guiff on their activities at Camp Limberlost.

A letter was read from the Stafford Township Home Demonstration Club inviting the Newville club to be guests at the I&M building in Butler on September 11. The invitation was accepted and the regular meeting postponed to September 18. The club was dismissed after which Kathryn Krieg conducted an interesting contest. Lunch was served by the hostess.

Feature Article Tells Of Quiz Appearance

(The following article was contributed by Mrs. Elizabeth Millinian and was written by her daughter, Mrs. Margaret Hercules. It appeared as a feature article in the Courier-Times-Telegraph of Tyler, Texas.)

I went on a "Treasure Hunt" last Monday. I didn't win much loot, but the experience was well worth the trouble.

The "Treasure Hunt" was on NBC-TV and emanated from the Hudson Theater in New York City, where I was vacationing.

Having never appeared on a national quiz program before, but an ardent home fan, I was thrilled to observe production technique and all the many details envolved in putting on a large network show.

When I filled out a questionnaire while attending "Dollar A Second"—of which, along with "Treasure Hunt" Jan Murray is master of ceremonies—I had no idea I would be considered as a possible contestant. I did try to eject human interest into my questionnaire, and, I believe this paid off, as I was auditioned for three other television shows and I had leaned toward human interest in submitting my reasons for wishing to appear on each.

A personal phone call at my hotel from Barney Martin, assistant producer for "Treasure Hunt", resulted in my audition the following afternoon. I was interviewed by the board of producers—all men — whose numerous questions I answered in rapid fire order. I was then given a written quiz of 120 questions on general subjects, and geography proved to be my strongest category. Mr. Martin then informed me that I "had made it", and I was invited to appear on the opening show, as the very first contestant, on Aug. 12.

Until time for the telecast, Mr. Martin was in constant touch with me, having called me long distance at the Sheraton Hotel in Philadelphia, and again, at Colonial Inn in Cape May, N.J., where I vacationed between the audition and the telecast. On returning to New York, I ran over the script with Mr. Martin and I was all set.

A New York friend loaned me her World Almanac and I bought an Atlas and started reviewing major world geography. (All this was wasted effort). I studied what I thought was important, and never dreamed I would be asked such questions as, "In what state is Mt. Elbert, the highest peak " or "What small European country is completely surrounded by Italy?" I've known since I was knee-high that Pike's Peak in Colorado, and answers to all the other questions asked of my opponent. Had I had his questions instead of mine, I'd have had a perfect score. Such is life on a quiz show—someone wins and someone loses!

"Treasure Hunt" is produced by Jantone Enterprises, named for the star of the show, Jan Murray, and his charming wife, Toni.

The Murrays, with their four children ranging in age from three to 15, reside in Rye, N. Y. Jan is a physical culturist and has his own gym at home. He took up physical culture 10 years ago when he realized weight of 143 pounds was not enough for his towering six-foot-two height. Today he weighs 195.

Jan's personality is warm, friendly and jovial. He wholeheartedly meets the contestants on his shows and does his utmost to put them at ease.

He has been in show business 21 years and hopes to be around much longer. Quiz shows are now his forte, plus three or four spectaculars a year and personal appearances, such as his recent four-weeks' stand at the Flamingo in Las Vegas. He is regarded by many name personalities as one of the outstanding comedians and masters of ceremonies in the field today.

Mrs. Murray, who was backstage for the opening reurn performance of "Treasure Hunt," is equally as charming as her husband. A red-haired beauty, she congratulated contestants, both winners and losers, and spoke in soft friendly tones. Everyone on the production staff, in fact, was courteous and kind.

And, how does one feel, when facing both a large theater aulence and millions within television range?

Personally, the lights were so bright, there was so much equipment on the stage, and there were so many milling around on the production staff that I saw no one in the audience. If I have the opportunity to appear on a big show again, I'll be calm as a mouse.

Entering and leaving a theater by stage door—especially when it's 45th Street just off Broadway—also gives me a little lift, even if one is met there by friends instead of autograph seekers.

"Fan mail," too, is a welcome reward of television participation. For several nights my mailbox has been crammed with notes from folks with whom I've been out of touch. So far, the most interesting has been from my son's first-grade teacher over 20 years ago back in Fort Wayne, Ind., and whom I've not seen in two decades.

Accident Fatal For Lone Driver

William Fry Arnold, 24, a resident of Butler and Hicksville, was killed late Monday night when his speeding car crashed at the intersection of state road 101 and the Orange Road northeast of St. Joe.

The accident occurred at 10:30 p.m. Investigating officers said Arnold, driving alone in a 1954 Mercury southwest on the angling Orange Road, braked his car at the approach to the intersection and lost control. The car skidded 157 feet, then hit a telephone pole broadside and continued for another 211 feet before it halted in a field. Arnold was thrown from the car 35 feet before it came to a stop.

The accident victim was alive when first arrivals at the crash came to his aid, but he died a short time later, before the sheriff arrived at the scene of the accident. County coroner Dr. R. Perry Reynolds said Arnold died of a fractured skull. He also suffered contusions on the left shoulder and lacerations on the left knee when thrown from the car.

Arnold was reported to be enroute to visit his sister, Mrs. Patricia Akey, at Spencerville when the accident occurred.

Survivors include the sister; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Arnold of near Hicksville; a daughter, Debra Kay, age 2½; and a brother, Archillous Arnold of Zanesville, O. He was separated from his wife, Patricia Ann Arnold, and had a divorce suit on file.

Funeral services will be conducted Friday at 2:30 p.m. at Perkins & Reeb Funeral Home in Hicksville. Rev. Paul Stuckey will officiate. Burial will be in Scipio Cemetery, southwest of Hicksville.

FAIR TIME

This time of the year,
We all go to the fair;
And meet friends and neighbors,
Who always assemble there.
We like to watch the races,
And see the horse that wins;
When the horses come around,
To where the race begins.
The 4-H halls are loaded,
With wares the girls make;
The 4-H barns are crowded,
With livestock the boys take.
We see so many people,
All so happy and gay,
Having lots of fun,
On the crowded midway.
Then when the fair is over,
And the premiums are all won,
We come back home and wonder,
What we did with all the "mon".

ALCOHOLISM, THE SECRET DISEASE OF A MILLION WOMEN

(The following condensation is taken from "This Week" magazine and contributed by Mrs. Roy Reidenbach.)

A million American women - possibly twice that number - are suffering from a "secret" disease which is ruining their health and wrecking their families. That disease is compulsive, uncontrolled drinking - alcolholism.

Scientific studies, and clinical experience, show that more and more women are becoming alcoholics. Many of them are intelligent, attractive gilrs, who hold good jobs, come from good neighborhoods and to most eyes seem as normal as the mother next door or the college student down the street.

Twenty years ago authorities believed that one out of eight alcoholics was a woman. But today the conservative estimate is one out of every four or five, and many scientists go farther. Reports from Alcoholics Anonymous indicate more and more female members, and today some groups consist almost entirely of women.

Why is this terrible disease ruining young women, especially the educated, cultured, middle class? Social scientists and psychiatrists believe that the cause lies in the continuing emancipation of women. As they enter business and industry on an unprecedentel scale, women have to face the tensions, conflicts and frustrations of what was once a "man's world." In the big cities and sprawling suburbs the family is less unified and loneliness is more common. At the same time, social taboos have become less rigid; even "nice" girls take a drink, and their mothers are less concerned about the neighbors' opinion than they used to be.

Far too many women who are alcoholics either don't know it or won't admit it, even to themselves. Conversely, many women who only now and again have "one too many" begin to worry, "Am I an alcoholic?"

To comfort the social drinker we might define an alcoholic as a progressive, compulsive drinker who has a need for the emotional and physical relief offered by the drug, alcohol. An alcoholic seeks relief from tensions and cannot control the urge to drink.

We still do not entirely understand why one girl when exposed to social drinking becomes an alcoholic and the great majority do not. There is no typical alcoholic personality pattern. Scientists suspect, but have not been able to pin down, such physical reasons as allergy or hereditary tendencies. We do know that the girl who becomes an alcoholic usually has a fairly obvious contributory reason. She may not get along with her parents, or may be living in an unhappy home. She may be worried about her standing with her friends, school or job. She may never have recovered from the natural rebellion of her teens, and may have become what the social scientists call an "adult-defier." We frequently find excessive drinking and other cases of alcoholism in an alcoholic patient's family.

On the other hand, she is less likely to suffer from alcoholism if she comes from a home where there is no drinking, or where CONTROLLED drinking is the rule. Religion can be a saving factor; the percentage of Jewish alcoholics, for example, is well below average, for complicated historical, cultural and religious reasons.

Physically, recent findings suggest, the woman addict degenerates much faster than the male alcoholic. He may drink for 10 or 20 years before he becomes a physical wreck, but a woman alcoholic often ruins her health in a matter of months.

As a rule today, alcoholics are treated by general practicing physicians. The American Medical Association's Committee on Alcoholism is making every effort to assist the physician in the treatment of alcoholism and to help him in the solution of its manifold and often annoying problems.

Skillful treatment can do wonders, but the shame of being an alcoholic keeps many from seeking it. The earlier the treatment is started, the sooner can complete rehabilitation be achieved.

The greatest hope for the control of alcoholism in this country lies in removing its cloud of shame and secrecy.

13 Questions For Every Woman - or Man - Who Drinks

1. When drinking, do you regularly keep taking "just one more" when you know you've already had enough?

2. When you are drinking, do you lose your appetite for food? The serious drinker, to whom alcohol is a problem, has little desire to eat.

3. Are you a morning drinker? As drinking increases, the addict needs "hair of the dog" every morning, and eventually drinks right around the clock.

4. Do you minimize your drinking in conversation?

5. Do you take secret nips through the day? Has your afternoon "coffee-break" been replaced by "a quick one"?

6. Do you drink alone?

7. Do you drink to bolster your nerves before facing a new situation or to steady shaking hands?

8. Do you find yourself drinking more and more "straight" rather than "mixed" drinks?

9. Assuming that you have been drinking steadily and heavily for some time, are you either losing interest in sex or drinking to release your sexual frustrations or inhibitions?

10. Do you find that you are neglecting your personal appearance more than you used to?

11. Do you take a drink to rid yourself of fears, depressions and "evil thoughts"?

12. Have you missed any days of work this year because of "colds"—really hangovers?

13. Do you find "reasons" for your drinking? Virtually all physicians who have studied the disease agree that finding an "excuse" for one's drinking is probably the most important sign that a person is an alcoholic or is becoming one. (Typical excuses: "My husband and I haven't been getting along." "I need a few drinks to forget about my problems at the office.")

If you answered "yes" to one or more of these questions, you are heading for trouble, especially if a habit seems to be forming. Before it's too well established, seek professional treatment.

America's Richest Women Named

America's ten richest women—who are they? How much money do they have and how do they spend it? Are they happy?

Who are they? They don't know themselves. Nor do their lawyers know; nor can they, their lawyers or their investment counselors say, even within the last $10 million, just how wealthy they are because their fluctuating assets can only be estimated in round figures.

The September Ladies' Home Journal names the ten women who are probably the very richest and tells, briefly, their life stories. Those listed and their estimated fortunes are: Doris Duke, who acquired her father's American Tobacco Company fortune at age 21 ($300 million); Mrs. Edsel Ford, heiress to Ford Motor Company millions and J. L. Hudson, Detroit department store (nearly $300 million); Mrs. Merriweather Post, whose father developed and popularized Post Toasties and Grape-Nuts ($250 million); Mrs. Horace Dodge Sr., widow of the motor car manufacturer ($250 million); Mrs. Frederick E. Guest, whose father was a partner of Andrew Carnegie ($200 million).

Worth between $125 million and $200 million are Mrs. Alfred I. duPont, whose husband's family got its start with a gunpowder mill on the banks of Brandywine Creek; Mrs. Charles Shipman Payson, the former Joan Whitney, sister of Jock Whitney, U.S. Ambassador to Great Britain; and Mrs. Mary G. Roebling, one of the nation's ablest banking brains. Mrs. Chauncy McCormick, heiress of McCormick and Deering farm implement fortunes, has an estimated $120 million and Helena Rubinstein, the list's only self-made woman, has a personal fortune around $100 million.

How do these women spend their fortunes? They can—and do—buy anything they want.

But they spend more on helping crippled children, finding causes for diseases, relieving poverty and raising education standards than they do on themselves.

Are they happy? Most of them are unhappy about the publicity they get. They can't marry, have children, get divorced or write a check without getting attention, which always prompts letters asking "Why do you have so much money?" and "If you have so much, why can't you give me even just one million?"

The biggest problem of a woman of immense wealth is more personal. As one woman put it, it is "finding a place where she can feel she is needed and is doing something worthwhile enough to be interesting."

Doris Duke, the most publicized and reputedly richest woman in America, acquired her father's American Tobacco Company fortune at age 21.

Background Scripture: II Kings 22:1—23:30; II Chronicles 34—35.

Devotional Reading: Psalm 119:57-64.

IN CAPITOLS

Lesson for September 1, 1957

People in capitols have tremendous power. A President, a senator, a parliament, a cabinet member . . . whether it is the county court house or the world-renowned capitol building of a might nation, the people who work under the dome, just because they work there, have a leverage for moving public opinion, for getting things done on an immense scale, a power far greater than any one of them has by himself. The man there in his office, or in his seat in the legislative chamber, may be, and usually is, a man of parts, a man, above the average in personality and ability. But however able the man under the dome may be personally, his office gives him even greater power. The voice of the man who was elected carries more weight than the voice of the man he defeated.

November Is Coming

The ancient Hebrews were a democratic people in some ways, but in others they were most unlike us. At the time of King Josiah the kingship was by no means an elective office. "And his son reigned in his stead" is the regular formula. So the Hebrews had at that time nothing to say about who should be their kings. They took whatever son the royal harem produced first. For good ones (there were some) they thanked God, and for the bad ones they were thankful they were no worse. King Josiah, whose story may be read in the Background Scripture, was one of the outstanding good kings. But it was custom and tradition that made him king, not the people. With us it is different. The people have to decide who shall occupy our places of great power. November is coming; many will be elected, many more defeated, in our American elections. It is not too soon to ask ourselves seriously, what kind of men do we want under our capitol dome? Sometimes the choice offered us makes us discouraged so that we stay at home and don't vote. But even if all we have is a choice between two third-raters, a good third-rater is better than a poor one. If we have good men in our capitols, it is our responsibility to see that they get there.

Little Capitols

It's a peculiar thing, but often true, that although candidates for local offices can be better known than those for state or national office, rascals and ne'er-do-wells are more often elected to the small offices than to the large ones. For some reasons, local government gets less attention from the voters than it should. The mayor of a single large city today controls more power over more people than King Josiah ever did. It is in the "little capitol" if you like, the county court houses for example, that public affairs sometimes take the wrong turn. Where there is a public program well conceived and organized, it can look good as a public law, it can look good as it comes to the states . . but when it goes through the local courthouses it can turn into some pretty rotten trickery. In a certain state not long ago federal funds for a very good purpose had to be cut off from a dozen or more counties because the officials there had been lining their pockets with easy money. It's a poor voter, one with a small sense of responsibility, who takes pains to elect good senators and presidents, but who when it comes to voting the local ticket, just says, Oh well . . . and votes straight because it's easiest.

Capitols Can't Do It All

The sad truth is, King Josiah's reforms didn't stick. They didn't because they were 'reforms from the top. Even an absolute monarch can make his country no better than his people want it to be. It is true, we ought to have the best officials, from town to county to state to nation, that we can elect; but even if they were all praying, intelligent, devoted Christians, they cannot make this a better country merely by passing laws. Like Josiah, our men in government can make this a better country only if we the people want to have it so.

About all there is to success in life - is making promises and keeping them. Promises to others. Promises to yourself.

There has been quite a lot of talk going around lately about B&O smoke. It is my opinion that all employees should be cautioned to keep black smoke at a minimum in this town or any town. After that has been done (and I think it already has been done) then as a railroad town I believe that it should be our PLEASURE to smell a little smoke. Someone asks why the railroad cannot completely deiselize the division. I wonder if those people do not know that that action would cut down the manpower in the yards and on the division about one third! Where else could we or any community the size of this get an industry that would put a cool half million dollars a month in payroll into it?

My position is that if the management cautions care and the men exercise it, that then should we get a sniff of smoke when we step out into the air, let us give thanks that the B-&O is still running trains.

A life of ease is a difficult pursuit.

Sechler's pepper pickers from down Mexico way put on a little show, I hear, last week end as they played a game of softball with some of the local athletes. And the pickers came out on top twice, Saturday night with a 6-3 win and Sunday afternoon with a 12-3 victory.

Bob Miller related early this week that the visitors from Mexico can really clout the ball and run like greased lightning. And one of them, a fancy dan, was doing a flip-flop, head over-heels, to get back to first when the local catcher tried to pick him off first base.

There will be more entertaining softball Saturday night when the boys get together again at the local diamond at 7 p.m.

I thought my exclusive pet expression was "okee-doke", but I find that others use it too - for instance, Joan in the principal's office.

Another favorite of mine is - "NUTS!"

What's yours??

Some of the improvements on local property in progress these days include a new roof on Keller's Garage.

Well, the church league finally got its games finished, not with any help from the weatherman the past summer. The play-offs ended last week with the St. Joe Church of Christ defeating Newville-Milford E. U.B. by a score of 10 to 4.

The sportsmanship trophy was won this year by the Spencerville Lutheran team, under the leadership of "Patient Pete" Timmerman, a fine example of a good sport for his team - and others - to follow.

George Baker stated Thursday morning this week that the frost almost got things overnight. The mercury dropped to 42 - and 38 is the danger point.

Church Plans $25,000 Expansion

The annual Homecoming of the Mt. Pleasant E. U. B. Church will be augmented this year with ground-breaking ceremonies to mark the beginning of a building program which will add new Sunday school classrooms and a new sanctuary to the present structure. Rev. Carl Thompson, pastor of the church, announced the building program this week.

The church was first built in 1870 and consisted of a frame structure 30x40 feet. It has since been remodeled three times. Now the church has grown in numbers until it once again becomes necessary to remodel and rebuild.

On August 29, Rev. Thompson appeared before the Board of Missions of the Indiana North Conference of the Evangelical United Brethren Church and received approval for the building committee of the local congregation to proceed with the building plans of the church. The plans include building the new addition to the church, which will add Sunday school class rooms, using the basement and part of the present building, and a new sanctuary which will extend to the north of the present structure.

The addition when completed will be valued at $25,000 to $30,000, according to Rev. Thompson. The church's building fund now contains $10,000 to $12,000, raised through individual donations and thru money-raising projects of the congregation.

The ground-breaking ceremony will be held on the homecoming date, Sunday, September 15. The day's program will include:

Sunday school 9:30 A.M.
Worship service 10:30 A.M.
Carry-in dinner at noon.
Ground-breaking service 2:00 P.M.

As guest speaker for both the morning and afternoon services, present will be Bishop J. Balmer Showers, retired bishop of the Evangelical United Brethren Church from Dayton, Ohio.

The public is cordially invited to worship and fellowship with the congregation that day.

Background Scripture: Jeremiah 36.

Devotional Reading: Psalm 19:7-14.

THE STAFF
Lesson for September 8, 1957

There is a lot of paper work in the Kingdom of God. No doubt when the Kingdom comes in its final glory paper work will not be needed any more. But right now there are mountains of it. Next time you are in the city where your denominational headquarters are, or the place where they put out your Sunday school literature, just go in and introduce yourself and look around. You may be amazed at the number of typewriters it takes to operate one denomination. When [illegible] visited New York after the war, he went to the headquarters of the church that had been [illegible] and he spoke encouragingly to the [illegible] workers. He wanted them to know that the ministers on the field could not do their work unless these unassuming [illegible] back home.

Besides the Minister

In large congregations there is a staff of people besides the minister. No one man, be he ever so able, could possibly do everything but buzz around like a bee in a bus station, in a church where the membership runs up near or over the thousand mark. There may be assistant ministers, each one perhaps with a particular specialty; secretaries, receptionists, a hostess, a secretary of men's work, one for women's work, a minister of music, a director of Christian education - all of these regular salaried people paid by the church.

There is a good Bible precedent for all this. The prophet Jeremiah had a scribe named Baruch, who wrote out Jeremiah's sermons and helped him revise them after the original copy had been destroyed. Baruch was not a prophet himself. He would probably never have been heard from, if he had not been Jeremiah's secretary. On the other hand some of Jeremiah's most striking sermons would have perished if it had not been for Baruch's faithful work putting them into written shape. We know too that Paul's letter to the Romans was not actually penned by Paul but by a secretary named Tertius (Rom. 16:22). When Paul made a list of various kinds of "gifts" and gifted people in the church, he names "helpers" right along with healers and administrators (I Cor. 12: 28). So from the beginning till now the "staff" has been as much needed as the preacher.

Church Vocations

Young people in high school who are Christians ought to know what the usual vocational counselor will not tell them (because not knowing): namely, that there are many vocations open, wide open, where Christians are needed to serve God and man through the Church, vocations which are not the ministry-of-preaching but are ministries in their own right. Especially is this true on the mission field. Right now there are mission boards calling for teachers, nurses, doctors, agricultural specialists, dentists, industrial workers, all over the world. Here at home - to name only one of the vocations - the Director of Christian Education is a kind of job for which there are not nearly as many trained workers as the church needs.

Volunteers

Most churches, however, are small. They cannot afford a staff, they have trouble even in scraping up money for a janitor. In many such little churches, the minister is beating his head out trying to do all the chores himself besides preaching. This is where the volunteer worker comes in. We are used to the idea of volunteer Sunday school teachers and choir singers; why not a volunteer staff? In most small churches you could find some one who could take dictation and run a typewriter or mimeograph machine, some one to volunteer to dust the church every Sunday morning (a needed chore often forgotten); some one to answer the minister's phone and give him time for needed study or visiting. Almost any church can have a good staff to help the preacher - they have the ability, all they need is the volunteers.

I wish to express my thanks for the get-well cards and letters sent to me during my stay in the Wabash Employees Hospital. Your thoughtfulness is greatly appreciated.

Indiana State Library

Meet Your Child's Teacher, PTA Urges, Promotes

The Riverdale P.T.A. swings back into action next Tuesday evening, September 17, with its opening meeting of the 1957-1958 school year. The president of the organization, Ted Haberkorn, has issued a special invitation to all patrons of the school to attend the first meeting which will feature a "coffee and donut social" at which parents and teachers may introduce themselves to one another and become better acquainted.

The officers of the P.T.A. met last week and formulated plans for the coming year. Their aim for the year will be to produce a series of educational and informative programs designed to present a coordinated picture of school affairs. The first meeting will include whatever business may be remaining from past months, special numbers for entertainment and the introduction of the faculty. The social hour will follow the business meeting.

The officers selected committee chairmen at their meeting last week. The chairmen are: Room Mothers, Mrs. Lynn Fisher; Membership, Mrs. Herbert Amstutz; and Finance, Mr. Francis Sible. The officers of the P.T.A. are serving as the program and project committees.

Meetings for the coming year will be held at 7:30 p.m. the third Tuesday of each month. The earlier meeting time was selected so that school children who will participate in the meetings will not be kept up too late during the school week. It is planned to have special numbers given by the classes of the school at each meeting, with one lower and one upper grade presenting entertainment at each meeting beginning with the October meeting.

The program for the October meeting is already in the formative stage with a "training session" for adults planned including short talks by teachers from the lower grades plus the showing of the film, "See How They Learn." This program will give parents and patrons of the school an idea as to how class room instruction is conducted and the goals set for the pupils through this instruction.

Next Tuesday's social hour refreshments will be under the chairmanship of Mrs. Max Doub. There will be coffee, milk and donuts served for all present at the meeting.

Billy Graham Crusade Is Impressive

(Elizabeth Milliman sends in the following feature article written by her daughter, Mrs. Margaret Hercules, for the Tyler, Texas, Courier-Times- Telegraph.)

True to all reports, Billy Graham packs them in at Madison Square Garden in New York. Folks come from far and near to hear him - both alone and in large delegations.

From mid-afternon to evening, the vicinity of Madison Square Garden is teeming with persons wearing Graham Crusade staff badges. At dinner time and after the service, the huge Garden Cafeteria, across the street from Madison Square Garden, is packed with staff members.

I visited the Crusade the night the young Texas evangelist began his young people's campaign. While young people were in the majority, persons of all ages, races and creeds filled the stadium to overflowing.

Although I arrived thirty minutes prior to the opening of his service, I had to climb seven flights of stairs and was seated on the next to the top row.

The stadium was gaily decorated in bunting and numerous flags hung overhead. The stage was decorated in flowers and greenery.

While the crowd gathered, music was provided by the choir of several hundred voices. Ethel Waters assisted in directing the songs and sang a solo during the service.

Special guests on the stage included Governor Price Daniels, who spoke briefly, and Mrs. Danieis. Other notables were also seated on the stage and introduced.

When Graham spoke, he slanted his words directly to the young people, speaking their lanuage.

His sermon, which was based on the story of Sampson, was forceful and in modernized version. He compared Sampson to a youth of today. He stated that Sampson regarded his folks as "squares", just as some teen-agers today regard their parents. He unfolded the tory of Sampson's life - his fallacies and his downfall - in teen-agers' vernacular. There was a terrific impact in his words.

When the invitation to "come" forward and take one's stand for Christ" was extended, people of all ages thronged before the stage. They came from the main floor and by escalator from every part of the crowded stadium. They overflowed into the aisles - they were many hundred in number. As the service closed, they filed out to counselling chambers.

Many people attend the Crusade night after night - others attend only a single service. They are an attentive audience - they enter into the spirit of the hymns - there is rapt solemnity when Graham speaks.

Madison Square Garden, scene of spectacular sports events, is now undoubtedly the greatest soul-saving mecca this country has known. After many weeks, Graham's service is just as fervent as on opening night and results are as gratifying and rewarding.

The stadium is air-conditioned, the tickets are free, and the experience of attending is one never to be forgotten.

Letters to the Editor

St. Joe News Aug. 31, 1957

Dear Edd.

A line or so for you to put in your paper.

I think more people should join the P.T.A. and the P.T.A. should join all together and go to these meetings that the School Board has and see where our tax money is going. I think the way times and, so many people are out of work, this high spending should be stopped.

Thanks Edd.

This is another of those letters without a signature but containing $2. We suppose the $2 is for the privilege of having the letter published.

We'll go along with the idea that more should attend P.T.A. and School Board meetings —but not to cut the spending. The greatest asset an American has is his education. The money being spent in our local school isn't too much if we want our children to receive a good education. In fact, it isn't enough. Despite the consolidation, we are not yet offering as full a curriculum as we need, for instance, for college-minded students. It will take more money to do so. Tax money is going, all right, but it isn't going into education, not enough of it at least. —Ed.

Dear Sir:

I'm writing you in regards to the St. Joe News. Our son wants to thank you for sending him the paper as it kept him up with the happenings around St. Joe and Spencerville. He will be getting out of the service Sept. 7 so he wanted us to let you know that you could stop his paper this week.

We want to thank you for sending him the St. Joe News.

Mrs. Harry Sheefel

You're welcome. —Ed.

Good salesmanship consists in selling goods that won't come back, to customers who will.

We have told you many times how much we appreciate you, our customers. We have continuously insisted that you must be happy with our products.

We believe that this policy is the best for us as well as for you.

One day this week we had customers in our stores from Garrett, Auburn, Avilla, Kendallville, Ashley, Waterloo, Hudson, Fort Wayne, Bluffton, Helmer, LaOtto and some from the countryside close to these towns. We appreciate all of these people and altho we did not sell all of them we tried to leave them with the thought that they will always be welcome to come in and browse around. In four months Christmas will have come and gone!

BOOKLET ON GOVERNMENT IS AVAILABLE FROM C.C.

The changing structure of Indiana state and local government, including 14 new state agencies ,is recorded in the new, revised edition of "Here Is Your Indiana Government," just published by the Indiana State Chamber of Commerce.

The book also includes a review of Indiana economy in an article entitled, "Hoosiers At Work." It shows that every third working Hoosier is employed in manufacturing, every sixth one in retailing or wholesaling, every seventh one in farming and every eleventh one in Federal, State or Local Government.

The 14 new state agencies, most of them temporary in nature, were created by the 1957 Indiana Legislature. Other laws enacted by the Legislature necessitated more than 600 changes in the contents of the government book, which is used widely by Indiana schools, government study groups and public officials, according to Jack E. Reich, State Chamber executive vice-president.

Among the new agencies are separate commissions created to make studies and report their recommendations to the 1959 Legislature. These include commissions to study (1) subversive activities in the state; (2) laws of the state as they relate to mental health; (3) facilities of the Indiana State Soldiers' Home; and (4) the status of the state museum.

Other new study projects, to be conducted by previously established agencies, will cover municipal salaries, private nursing homes, problems incident to mental retardation, training and licensing of public school teachers, operation of companies engaged in providing hospitalization insurance, and facilities of mental institutions for the fixing of a long range mental health program.

The 1957-1958 edition of the book also reviews the objectives of other new commissions which include a commission to plan for an historical and educational celebration of the 150th anniversary of Indiana statehood in 1966; a commission to chart the William Henry Harrison Trail in counties traversed by Harrison's military expedition in 1811, a commission to study a proposed Uniform Commercial Code.

Contents of the 118-page book also include information on newly-adopted uniform salaries for county officials, estimated 1957 populations on Indiana cities, and changes in the state gross income tax, motor fuel tax and property tax rates.

The publication is described by the State Chamber as "a book of facts dedicated to a better understanding among all Hoosiers of our living, changing 'Government by the People.'"

The well-indexed edition is available from the State Chamber at one dollar per copy. A special price of fifty-five cents per copy for orders of five or more is available to adult study groups and schools.

300 Indiana high schools and colleges used the 1955-1956 edition as an aid in the teaching of government.

Boys 8-11 Can Be Cub Scouts

A program of youth activity which prepares boys for further character-building in Boy Scouting is available in the Cub Scout organization active in the local community through the Spencerville Cub Scout pack. The Spencerville organization is composed of dens active in Spencerville and St. Joe.

Officers of the local pack are anxious to have interested boys participating in the work of the individual dens. Boys between the ages of 8 and 11 years can join the Cub Scouts and prepare for later Boy Scout work. Leadership of the dens is under the direction of women of the community who take under their wing a group of 4 to 7 or 8 boys and serve as their den mother. Weekly meetings are held at which time projects are worked on in a planned program which presents a monthly theme. Once a month a pack meeting is held in which all dens congregate and present skits, also showing the fruits of their handwork.

An invitation is extended to interested boys to join the local pack. Den mothers include Mrs. Glen Moore, Mrs. Robert Crowl and Mrs. Lynn Fisher at Spencerville and Mrs. Harvey Carr and Mrs. Virgil Laux at St. Joe. Information about membership requirements can be obtained from these den mothers or from Mr. Virgil Laux, den organizer. Parents are asked to investigate the possibilities of their 8 to 11-year-old sons taking part in Cub Scouting and contact any of the above adult supervisors concerning the program.

"I cannot too greatly emphasize the importance and value of Bible study - more important than ever before in these days of uncertainties, when men and women are apt to decide questions from the standpoint of expediency rather than on the eternal principles laid down by God, Himself.",

David Livingstone said, "All that I am I owe to Jesus Christ, revealed to me in His divine Book."

We are so much in accord with these statements and other fine comments concerning the Book and its divine message that we want to be as helpful as possible in getting the "word" to all people.

We have for several years carried a few Bibles in stock. However, now we are going to have many, many more on hand so you may have a wide selection of quality and price to choose from.

We are glad to offer you this added service.

The history of all great characters of the Bible is summed up in this one sentence: They acquainted themselves with God, and acquiesced in His will in all things.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

Background Scripture: Ezekiel 1:1-3; 2; 24:15-18; 34.

Devotional Reading: Ezekiel 34:23-31.

THE PASTOR

Lesson for September 15, 1957

A popular name for the minister of a Protestant church in America is "Preacher." It is an unfortunate title, because it suggests that the minister's job is all talk. People by the thousands think of their minister as only a preacher, and it must be admitted that some "preachers" are that and nothing else. But talking for half an hour a week isnt the main job he has, there is something else that (if he works at it) takes up far more time. It is being a PASTOR. In churches with a paid ministry, the minister's salary is not payment for services rendered, for if he does render a pastor's service, what he does cannot possibly be measured in money. His salary is a subsidy enabling him to resign all other work and spend all his working days at being a pastor.

What Is a Pastor?

Most people don't realize that the word "pastor" was originally a figure of speech; it comes from the Latin word for Shepherd. Like all figures of speech, this one does not tell the whole truth but it is very useful. The prophet Ezekiel was called a pastor or shepherd, so is Timothy in the New Testament. In one of Jesus' last interviews with Peter, that apostle was commanded: "Feed my sheep." Jesus, in fact, spoke of himself as the Good Shepherd, and in the 23rd Psalm the words are familiar, "The Lord is my Shepherd." Both Roman Catholic and Protestant churches think highly of the pastor and constantly seek better ones. Much time and expense is devoted to their training. Saint Paul (Eph. 4:11) mentions being a pastor as a special divine gift, distinct from that of the evangelist or the teacher - though indeed some men have more gifts than one.

Leading

There is nothing strange about a minister not having a congregation. For there are various forms of the Christian ministry: including teaching, editorial writing, executive work. But the postor carries the main responsibility of the church, and a PASTOR without a congregation is a contradiction in terms; he would be like a store keeper without a store, a pilot who never flies a plane, a father without a child. In the days when the word shepherd was first used of God's servants, as for example of the prophet Ezekiel, it brought definite ideas to people's minds, for shepherds were a common sight in that time and place. These ideas are as true as ever they were. One of them is that the shepherd LEADS the sheep. There were no neatly fenced pastures in that country; each shepherd led his flock by the creeksides, to places where he knew there would be some water left (for the creeks were often dry) and some green grass. Without the shepherd to lead them, sheep would simply starve. So today a pastor leads his people; a man without leadership capacity is just not made for a pastor. He leads their minds, he leads their hearts. A good pastor is not a dictator, he leads by inspiring his people, not intimidating.

Feeding

The other main service a shepherd would do for his flock was to FEED them. So the pastor of a congregation is expected to feed his flock. Not their bodies, not primarily their minds; but their hearts and lives as a whole. That is why we expect him to read more widely in Christian books and magazines than the rest of us can. That is why we have a right to expect that a pastor shall have a deeper experience and a greater wisdom on the whole, than the average church members. We want him to interpret God for us. That is why being a good pastor takes all a man's time. The pastor must mingle with his people so as to know what they need; but he must be out in front of his people in order to be able to give them what they need. If Ezekiel the prophet had been no closer to God than the people to whom he was a shepherd, he would have had nothing to give. Without a pastor, many souls will starve.

No man ever lived unto himself and no person without touching the lives of a few people, not died without someone feeling the loss. We never know the true value of a friend while they are alive. We minimize their virtue. After they are dead we minimize their faults, but somewhere between these two is the person we call our friend."

SCHOOL DAYS

The school bell soon will ring,
And call our children together;
The school bus, the children will bring
Through sunshine and stormy weather.
Sometimes I long for our old bell,
As it sounded far and wide,
Calling we children back to school,
From over the countryside,
Sometimes I long for those old days,
When to school we always walked;
Often we carried the girls' books,
And with them we talked.
Time has changed a lot, since then,
You can bet your bottom dollar,
If children had to walk nowadays,
You sure would hear them holler.

Around the Town

With the Editor

Paul Moore reports that he saw a doe and buck deer three miles east of Rhoads' Corners early this week. They were seen as he made the rounds on the mail route which he will make no more come next week. The new permanent carrier, Bob Johnson, takes over at that time. Paul has served on a temporary basis.

Just as an illustration of how white in advertising sells, Mrs. Hurni remarked a couple of weeks ago that when their ad listing a couple of storm doors for sale was run the first time, there wasn't any spacing between each ad. I explained that I only had so much space to get them in and didn't have them spaced out as usual. But the next week when the ad appeared with the white space surrounding it, the doors were sold bingo, just like that.

Just goes to show, when you advertise, it's more important to make the ad readable and attractive than to get it in the littlest space possible.

End of commercial.

The local chapter of the Ladies Aid Society thought that by writing cheery letters to the inmates they would bring a little sunshine into the state prison. One lady wasn't quite sure how she would address a man she knew only by a string of numbers. But finally she achieved what she happily believed to be a measure of friendliness.

"Dear 688395," she wrote, "may I call you 688?"

I think everybody had a good time and an enjoyable evening at the P.T.A. meeting the other night. We're doing things a little different this year. If you wanta know about it, come to the next meeting.

That's October 15.

It seems that this boy showed up late for school. The teacher asked for an explanation and he said, "Well, I guess you could say it's because pa sleeps in his shorts." "What's that got to do with your being late?" the teacher snapped.

"It's like this, ma'am," the boy replied. "You see, last night we heard a noise in the chicken house. Pa jumped out of bed wearing his shorts and grabbed up his shotgun. He ran out to the chicken house, opened the door and pointed the gun inside. About that time our old dog, Rover, come up behind pa an sniffed pa's bare laig. Well, ma'am, we been cleaning chickens since 3 o'clock this morning."

New Senior Trip Plan

At the Rivrdale P.T.A. meeting held Tuesday evening, Principal Joe Smith announced the inauguration of a new plan for providing funds for the annual senior trip. Under the new arrangement students in the high school will contribute five dollars per semester toward the senior trip through their four years of high school. Thus each student will have forty dollars ready to be paid toward his share of the senior trip expense.

The principal pointed out that it is becoming a matter of high finances with the increasing size of the senior classes to provide enough money to finance a trip which will appeal to the senior student. It is a practice of all high school classes to sponsor certain events, bake sales, car washes, scrap drives, sales of candy, pens, magazines, etc., through which to enlarge the class treasury. The principal felt it was becoming too much of a drain on the community each year to have this constant solicitation of funds by the classes, there being a great many instances when the purchase was made by a resident of the community only because it was a class project, not because there was any particular need or desire to purchase the product or service for its useful value.

We wish to commend the principal for his idea, since we, as a part of the business community, have experienced the many requests by the classes for monetary support. It is the wish of every conscientious person, whether he is a businessman or a homemaker in the community, to help young people in their efforts to help themselves. However, a point is reached, and it was reached some time ago, where the value of these efforts is questionable. For instance, the annual put out each year by the senior class contains advertising solicited from local as well as non-local business firms. This is done each year with there being little or no question as to whether the businessman will buy or not. It is just expected. And usually the businessman comes through. The value of "selling" is lost because of this yearly assuming that Mr. Businessman will buy and therefore the value of the ads in the annual as a training device for young people in the field of salesmanship disappears. A businessman in any community will say that it gets to be a rather old story year after year to be solicited not only for ads but for every other financial program sponsored by high school students; they might just as well make an outright cash donation and have it over with. The same applies to some extent to homemakers in the community.

This new program of providing trip funds through the student's partial contribution would seem to make the trip more valuable to the student. The money will be kept in a separate fund so that it may be withdrawn if the student should move before the end of his senior year, if he just doesn't want to make the trip or if he cannot make the trip for some other reason. The money can be put in by the semester, by the year, or whatever way the student may wish. But no senior will be allowed to take the trip unless he has provided for this initial forty dollar fund.

Again, we commend the principal for this program. The businessman and the resident in the community will feel more like assisting the student in the future because he will know that the student is also assisting himself in providing for his senior trip finances.

Who's Got the Time??

Several comments have been heard in this community, as we imagine they are being heard in many, many other Hoosier communities, along this line: "What are we going to do here about the time?" They refer, of course, to the controversy over using Central Standard Time or Eastern Standard Time in the state of Indiana.

Hoosiers pride themselves on the common sense down-to-earth approach they take in facing a problem - or at least they think they use common sense. But this present situation is one which makes a laughing matter of any reference to common sense. And maybe it isn't anything to laugh about.

Who is to blame? Everybody. High officials are to blame because they did not provide that the referendum on the time issue would decide what time the state would use; it only showed what people thought. The people are to blame because they accept politicians who haven't the backbone to face the issue squarely and enforce observance of a "state" time. The officials are to blame because they try to force communities to follow a certain time by threatening to withhold government funds. The people are to blame because they insist on following their own local wishes, forcing the officials to threaten to withhold government funds. And it goes on down the line, back and forth.

But there is one glaring danger sign in the whole mess. And that is the obvious trend to disobey the law because it does not suit personal or local taste.

In the case of cities and towns defying the state in its threat to withhold funds, how can such an attitude be justified? It is not a matter of having it down in black and white that it will be a crime to violate using the suggested time; it is a matter of recognizing the need in reference to the common good. If it is even suggested by the state that we should be on one time, why don't we follow that suggestion? Is it more legal for a city or town to refuse to obey a law than for a private citizen to refuse to obey the law? The same cities and towns which will not go along with following a certain time, saying that they will do other than what the state has suggested, yet will have a man arrested because he parks where the city or town says he should not. Maybe he wants to park there; but the city or town says no. For the common good, the citizen obeys the law of his community. For the common good, the whole state of Indiana ought to obey the law, whether it is written or unwritten.

One thing that seems to be forgotten in the whole argument - there HAS to be a dividing time-line SOMEWHERE.

Here Is a Rarity

In these days, frankness on the part of a political figure is practically a non-existent quality. The following news release on the wires of United Press is, therefore, somewhat refreshing:

"Republican Malcolm Forbes is campaigning for the governorship of New Jersey without any double talk to the leaders of organized labor in that heavily industrialized state.

"Forbes appeared last month before the state council of the CIO in Newark and told the assembled union officials:

" 'I am not your man.'

"He also told them he rated as a phoney their invitation to him to appear before them preliminary to the CIO's public endorsement of a gubernatorial candidate. He said the choice already had been made.

" 'The invitation to me to be present,' Forbes said, 'is merely intended as a bit of window dressing to imply that the decision of some of your leaders was reached with an open mind after due deliberation.'

"However that may be, the CIO heard Forbes and thereupon formally endorsed his Democratic opponent, Gov. Robert B. Meyner.

"Forbes says he nevertheless expects a lot of labor votes in November.

"His blunt challenge to New Jersey's labor elite was in the tradition of the late Robert A. Taft who based his last election campaign on related political theories:

"—That stay-at-home Republican or semi-conservative voters could and would win elections if they had someone for whom to vote if they did go to the polls.

"—That labor leaders could not deliver the labor vote.

"—That no votes could be had by trimming and compromising principles into bait for independents already committed to the other fellow.

"From that general strategical position, Taft mowed down the opposition in Ohio's 1950 senatorial election.

"Ohio and New Jersey are about equally industrial and Republican states. New Jersey returns next month may suggest to Republicans elsewhere a new approach to the perplexing problem of how to cope with the coalition of the leaders of organized labor and of the Democratic Party."

"MONDAY SCHOOL"

This morning (Tuesday) we dropped our twins and some neighborhood children off at the school entrance. Our "ten-year-old," who had walked with some friends, gave us a vigorous wave as we drove up and our two high-schoolers were already a part of the "whirlpool" of young humanity caused by converging streams from various directions.

These young "citizens of tomorrow," with freshly scrubbed faces shining with anticipation, were coming to "Monday School" literally by the hundreds.

I could not help but contrast or compare this with Sunday School: it was only 8:15 or 8:30 .... and they were all able to get around for "Monday School." Most Sunday Schools don't start before 9:30 .... a whole hour later. Even if they had somewhat "gotten out of the habit" there was no question of them "getting back into the habit" this morning! "Monday School" is not shoved around or ignored for picnics, reunions, or just plain indifference!

Why should "sleeping in" or "the weather" affect Sunday School any more than "Monday School"? Sunday School is so mighty important because the time is so short! Less than an hour per week as compared with the thirty hours in the public schools! Every adult, too, should be in a live, instructive Bible class each Sunday. There's no question about attending "Monday School" .... how about Sunday School if you and your child are to be equipped to live in the "todays" of this life as well as the "tomorrows" of eternity!

—J. W. Mellick, Pastor, Wellington, Ohio.

SWEDEN'S WELFARE STATE

(Glenn A. Greene, Associate Director of the National Education Program, is doing research in Sweden. Following are some of the findings he has made in that "model Socialist State".)

We have heard and read so much in America about the Swedish "Middle Way," her famed Welfare State, and "The People's Home" (as Swedish Socialist planners themselves call it) that I was expecting to observe a living standard here about equal to ours in America. I can now report that measured by all the accepted yardsticks it is not half as good, and when significant additional factors are considered Sweden's special brand of Socialism loses even more of it widely advertised glamor.

My first introduction to its ramifications came from a Swedish housewife who sat chatting with me as our big SAS (Scandinavan Airlines System) DC7 plane flew down the Thames estuary from London and out across the North Sea toward Oslo. The purser had just announced on the plane's PA system that photographing the land area of Norway and Sweden from the plane was prohibited by the Governments of the two countries.

"My, my," she said in excellent English. "It has got so one must almost consult a book of Government rules before doing anything in Scandinavia." As I reluctantly put away my cameras I told her of the nature of my visits in Norway and Sweden - studying the Welfare States. We instantly became friends and I proceeded to interview her. As her story unfolded I classified her family as in the upper middle-income group. Her husband is the Stockholm agent for an insurance firm; she keeps a full-time maid in her home, and for the family of four (plus maid) the food budget is $250 a month, about 1300 Swedish crowns.

She ticked off some of the things she didn't like about Sweden's Welfare State, first instituted by the Socialist-Labor Government (Social Democrats) 25 years ago. "My husband says there is absolutely no future for Sweden," she said finally. "We both feel that we should take our two children and establish a home in some other country. He strongly thinks the Socialists are ruining Sweden forever for capable, ambitious people."

"Will you leave Sweden?" I asked. She sat quietly a moment gazing down upon the calm sea so far below. I wondered if she had heard me or understood. Then she turned and said: "I think not. After all, Sweden is our home. We have ties there. I don't think we could leave. Maybe a miracle will happen. Maybe the people will wake up." As we neared Oslo, she gave me her name and an invitation to visit their home. Upon reaching Stockholm, after a week in Norway, I learned that her family indeed does have ties in Sweden. For generations it has been one of the biggest names in Swedish commerce. Yet her small brood, in 1957, lives on a standard no higher than our American upper middle-income group.

As this dispatch is written I have just come from the home of a family considerably lower on the economic ladder. Prior to this visit, I had spent a half-day on a grain, potato and hay farm 30 miles north of Stockholm, talking to farmer Nils Anderson, having tea in his home, walking over the farm and watching the farm youngsters at play.

And on the day I arrived in Stockholm I interviewed Per Osterberg, international secretary of the powerful Confederation of Swedish Trade Unions (with 1,405,000 members) and one of the top Socialist Party leaders in Sweden; and, later, Curt Steffan Giesecke, director of the National Confederation of Swedish Employers (15,500 employer members). In addition, I have talked with leaders of KF, the big nationwide Cooperative combine, have visited its stores and factories; and I have a date coming up with one of Sweden's top private enterprise industrialists at his huge Stockholm plant.

Perhaps of still greater importance in getting the story of Sweden, I have watched thousands of Swedes working and playing - in residential neighborhoods, in the industrial areas, out in the small communities. There are other contacts and observations to make, but in the next dispatch I will report on something in Sweden that will give every American, young and old, a crystal clear picture of the living in the Swedish Welfare State - an animated and, I think, dramatic picture that mere statistics could not possibly convey.

—Dr. George S. Benson, Director, National Education Program, Searcy, Arkansas.

AUTUMN

The good old summer time will soon come to a close,
And we'll begin to shiver and hunt up more clothes.
That good old furnace will soon start to run,
And we'll be more content with some indoor fun.
But the fall is the prettiest time of the year.
With the frost on the pumpkins and corn in the ear:
The leaves on the trees are so pretty and gay,
But soon will turn brown and then blow away.
The fruits of field and garden are on the table these days.
And before we eat, we should thank God, always.
We sit down to a table with a nice plate of ham.
Cabbage slaw, mashed potatoes, bread, butter and jam.
We have roasting ears (from our freezer close by).
And to top of all the meal, a piece of mom's pumpkin pie.
Why shouldn't we be happy? with this kind of weather.
With mom and dad, and we children together.

—Merwin J. Place

PUPILS MAY 'HATE' THEIR INSTRUCTOR BUT CONTINUE TO IMPROVE IN STUDIES

This may surprise you, but children do not need to like their teachers in order to learn.

Some very careful studies have been made about learning and the attitude of pupils toward teachers, and these studies show that children can learn even though they "hate" their teachers. On the other hand, pupils can fail to learn from a teacher they claim to like very much.

Grades are too often used by parents as the sole basis of their attitude toward a teacher. Parents should try to discover whether good grades reflect a real improvement in the child or are merely a good-will gesture by the teacher.

I know, for example, of a high school English teacher who enjoyed considerable popularity (she gave high grades) until former students came back from college complaining about their high school English preparation.

Many parents and teachers believe all is well if children like their teacher. Some teachers allow children to do as they please in order to avoid conflict and thus gain the children's affection.

These teachers give higher grades than children earn, allow the children to avoid tedious details or to quit if something seems difficult, and always make complimentary remarks about the children, both to them and to their parents. Does such a policy really pay off?

Liking and respect are not synonymous. Most colleges warn future teachers that they must do what is necessary (even if this requires sternness and unsmiling firmness) to gain control of their pupils at the very outset. Then, as control is gained, they can relax and be more pleasant and informal.

Children, however, must learn to respect authorty, learning, good study habits, etc., and teachers who create this respect eventually will be respected as individuals.

Do children and parents really pay as much attention to "liking the teacher" as some teachers seem to think? I doubt if all do, yet one can find examples of teachers who get by, year after year, with "soft-soaping" the parents and the children.

I know a first grade teacher who for four years has fooled the parents. The principal of the school and all the other teachers (particularly those who get her children) know that children learn first very little in her room, for she believes "it is foolish to teach first grade children anything; they just forget it. I just enjoy my children and they enjoy me."

One would think that when parents found that their children were way behind other children their ages, they would be angry. So far, however, these parents blame the upper grade teachers for their children's failure.

I really believe children would learn more if we could sell parents on the idea that the "best-liked" teacher may not be the best teacher. Teaching is not (or should not be) a popularity contest. I suppose all teachers want children to like them, but if this affection must be secured by watered down control and less effective learning, then it is something too dearly bought. Generally speaking, we all retain the most admiration for teachers who demanded our best efforts.

In the school year that follows, parents could be a great help to good teachers and to their children if they became more interested in why children like or do not like certain teachers.

It takes a lot of courage for a teacher to remain firm and insistent in the face of parental pressures for high grades and an easy life at school. Teachers who have this courage need to be supported by parents who place respect for learning above temporary whims and sugar-coating.

DEDICATION CEREMONY TO BE HELD SEPT. 29

Donald Foust, pastor of the Cedar Creek Church of Christ, announced this week that dedication of the congregation's house of worship will be held on Sunday, September 29, at 2:00 p.m.

A ground-breaking service was held August 5, 1956, to mark the beginning of what is now a ranch-type structure, 74 x30 feet, with a full basement. The building is located one-half mile north of Leo on the Amstutz Road and serves as both a house of worship and residence for the minister.

Though incomplete, the sanctuary has been used for worship services since May 19 of this year. It has been nearly completed during the summer by members of the congregation and generous friends.

The dedication will include a carry-in dinner at noon. Thomas W. Overton of the Boulevard Church of Christ, Toledo, Ohio, will be the dedicatory speaker at the 2 p.m. service.

A cordial invitation is extended to the public to come and worship, share in the carry-in dinner and enjoy the special dedication service.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

BY DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

Background Scripture: Daniel 1—6.

Devotional Reading: I Peter 5:6-11.

DARING DANIEL

Lesson for September 22, 1957

"Dare to be a Daniel" was the name of a song that used to be sung in Sunday schools all over America. Maybe people read the stories of Daniel then more often than they do now. Any one who thinks the tales about this man are exaggerated and sound more like legend than history might ask himself this question: What sort of man must Daniel have been, what kind of reputation did he leave behind him, to have such stories attach themselves to his name and memory? No meek little yes-man was he. On the contrary his very name is a symbol of courage against odds.

Two Kinds of Courage

There are two kinds of courage: physical and moral. Physical courage means keeping on doing what you know you ought to do, even when you are being terribly hurt, or about to be hurt. A scoutmaster in a boat with some small boys got into some heavy waves, the boat overturned and everybody climbed on top if the upside-down craft. Then it became evident that there were too many for the boat in that position. So the scoutmaster, after pulling the last boy out of the water, swam alongside for a while, and when he could swim no longer, quietly sank . . . dying to save a boy's life. That took courage. Then there is also moral courage, which means doing or saying what you believe to be right, in spite of ridicule or powerful contrary opinions.

Against Orders

Courage always is against something - danger, public opinion, pain. Daniel's courage sometimes was of the rare and risky sort, courage to defy orders from his official superiors. Daniel's salary was paid by the royal court, and like many salaried men, when ordered to do something against his conscience and religion, might have shrugged it off: "Well, I hate to do it, it goes against the grain. But this is my job and who am I to talk back to my employer? I've gotta play ball if I stay on the payroll." Daniel was made of stouter stuff. When he knew that God said one thing and his boss said another, even if the boss was a king with powers of life and death, Daniel saw no choice but to obey God rather than men.

Against Custom

Daniel "bucked" not only an old-fashioned, oriental dictator, all dressed up in crown and gown, but something that is just as tyrannical: public opinion and long-standing customs. If he had had the public on his side, he might not have been reported (for example) in the incident of the prayers at the open window. Back home in Palestine many would have known that he was right; here in Persia almost no one agreed with him. To go against "what everybody does" - usually meaning by "everybody" the more important people of a community - takes nerve. It can be wrong, too, for very often public opinion is just about right. One ought to think very carefully before flying the opposite course to every one else. But when Daniel knew he was right, he knew that fifty thousand Medes and Persians could be wrong; and he acted accordingly.

Against Personal Interests

Many people take the easiest way. All they ask is, "What does this get me? Where does it get me? Will this bring me more prestige, will it end in my promotion, will it help me up the ladder?" If the answer is Yes, then they go ahead. They don't dare do anything contrary to their own interests. But Daniel dared. More than once he had the courage to do something or to say something when it looked as if by doing saying it he would put an end to his career. But the king always kept him on, though for a while he might turn against him. Men admire courage of all sorts, especially Daniel's kind. The king and everybody else knew that here was a man who could be counted on to say and to do what he was convinced was right, even if it hurt him - even if it killed him. Here was a man who could not be threatened, could not be bought. Such men were not plentiful then, they are not thick as blackberries now. But they are God's men always.

New Atomic 'Ghost Town'

Odd Shapes Rise In Nevada Desert

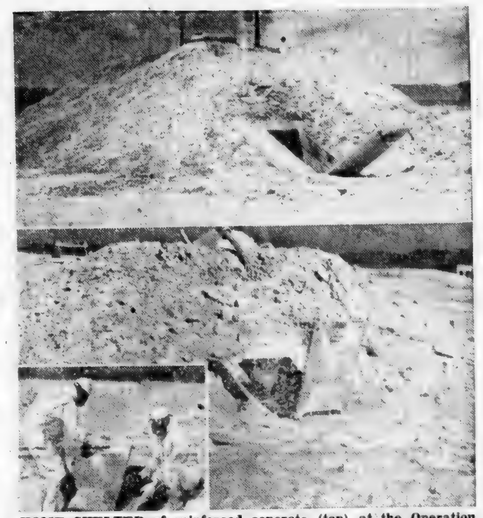
The Nevada desert, site of many an abandoned settlement, has sired a 20th century "ghost town."

No one lives there. And yet it is a town of the present and future—complete with modern underground parking garages without cars, huge doors leading to nowhere, and futuristic domes emerging from a landscape almost as barren as the moon.

This is "Survival Town" — a community dedicated to its own destruction as a test site for atomic blast effects on various shelter-type structures.

Constructed by the Federal Civil Defense Administration in cooperation with the Atomic Energy Commission and other private and public agencies, "Survival Town" includes underground home shelters and large urban shelters, new dome-type shelters being considered because they are easily built and cost relatively little, a small, blast-resistant "school" building, various types of doors and valves to close shelter openings against a nuclear blast wave, and even a complete bank vault.

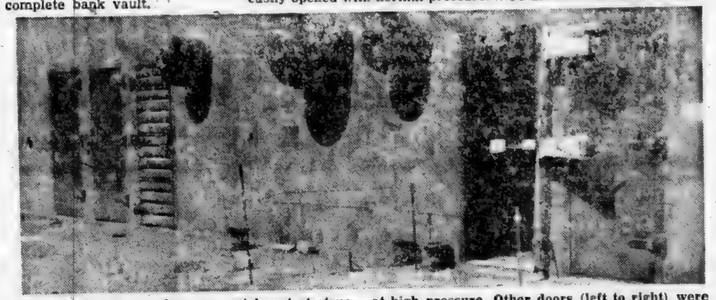
ATOMIC BLAST churns the Nevada desert and rises skyward as "Priscilla" shot of Operation "Plumbbob," the current series of atomic tests, hurls tremendous forces against a new "ghost town" of shelter structures built as possible prototypes for future blast-resistant buildings and shelters in the more vital target areas. (NTO Lookout Mountain Lab Photo)



HOME SHELTER of reinforced concrete (top) at the Operation Plumbbob atomic tests in Nevada withstood a blast pressure of some 65 pounds per square inch (bottom) with damage only to vent pipes (the average house can withstand a pressure of about one pound per square inch). The shelter, which could accommodate about six persons, was covered with 5½ feet of earth for near-complete protection against initial radiation in blast areas. When specially-dressed radiological monitors (inset) entered the area after the A-blast, they found the steel plate door undamaged and easily opened with normal pressure. (NTO Lookout Mountain Lab Photo)

AUTO ENTRANCE ramp burrows incongruously into the desert as it leads down to a dual-purpose underground shelter and garage at the Operation Plumbbob atomic tests in Nevada. Lower photo shows how the A-bomb blast crumbled part of the concrete retaining wall but failed to block the entrance. To the right of the crumbled wall is the entrance, closed by a 100-ton, four-feet-thick reinforced concrete blast door (inset), which was undamaged. (NTO Lookout Mountain Lab Photo)

EFFECTS OF STEEL reinforcement are shown clearly in these wall panels tested under high pressure during the current atomic tests in Nevada. The eight-inch brick wall at left was unreinforced, while the other brick and tile walls of the same thickness were reinforced with quarter-inch steel rods, and survived the atomic blast intact. A 26 x 32-foot windowless brick structure, adaptable as a school or utility shelter, also was undamaged even though it was exposed to blast pressures five times those for which a house is normally built. (NTO Lookout Mountain Lab Photo)



FIVE DOORS to nowhere are set in a test structure at the Nevada atomic test site to measure the blast resistance of various kinds of common building materials. Only the hollow plywood door (second from right) was blasted from its frame at high pressure. Other doors (left to right) were made of solid plywood, wood planking, and two kinds of steel shapes. Circular objects on the wall are anti-blast valves for automatically closing ventilation openings in case of a nuclear blast. (NTO Lookout Mountain Lab Photo)

DOME SHELTERS, a new design whose low cost and easy construction would adapt it to mass production, were tested at the Operation Plumbbob atomic tests in Nevada at pressures from 20 to 70 times those which a house is normally built to withstand. The 50-foot-diameter shelters may be seen before the blast in the upper photo. The lower photo shows one of the domes which was deliberately tested at a pressure so great that it would fall, so its weaker points could be studied. (NTO Lookout Mountain Lab Photo)

PATRIOT IN ACTION

Lesson for September 29, 1957

There is no closed season for patriotism. You might think there was, for there is a rash of patriotic speeches and editorials along about the 4th of July, and on Washington's Birthday and similar occasions. This time of year people seem to be thinking more about the hunting season, and school openings, than about our wonderful country. Now, let us admit that patriotic speeches the year around would be a dreadful bore. Fireworks and oratory every night are not called for. Nevertheless, it is true: there is no closed season for patriotism. There is a daily need for patriots.

Counterfeit Patriotism

Patriotism is not noise, not speeches. The patriot is not the man who brags about his country the most. Travelers abroad from America know the nuisance type of tourist who is forever complaining, wherever he is, about nearly everything, loudly telling the world that "we have it better in the States." Such a man is not doing America any good. Hanging out the flag on important days is a good practice, but a man's patriotism is not to be measured by the regularity of his flag displays. Furthermore, a true patriot is not one who thinks of his own stock as the true Americans, and all others as not quite it. A man like this will think of descendants of earlier immigrants as antiquated, out of touch with life; and the descendants of those immigrants who came later he thinks are "really" Europeans or something, never quite Americans.

Initiative

Many patriots' portraits are to be found in the Bible; Nehemiah is one of these. He was a governor of Jerusalem, under the Persian Empire, more than a hundred years after Jerusalem's freedom had been lost. Jerusalem had had a string of governors before; but not one of them, or all of them together, accomplished for that city and its people what Nehemiah did in his term of office. He was a true patriot, one whose services really benefit his country, one who renders services without asking payment in return; or if he is a man on salary, as Nehemiah seems to have been, he goes beyond what he is paid to do. Nehemiah never had to be pushed or prodded. He was out in front, seeing what had to be done and starting to do it, while other men slept.

Leadership

There have been patriots without much power or gift of leadership; but surely a better type of patriot is a man or woman who can stir other people to serve their country too. This Nehemiah is famous for building a wall; but he may never have laid a brick, personally. He did something far more miraculous than that; for the first time in 140 years, he got the people if Jerusalem hard at work at what they should have been doing long before;; getting a wall built around their little city. The people "had a mind to work," but it was their governor who inspired this ambition in them. The great patriots of every nation's history - David, Sciplo, Henry V, Geogre Washington, Syngman Rhee, and all the rest, have been men from whom as from a dynamo electric current flowed to vast numbers of their countrymen. Under their leadership, weak men were brave, discouraged men full of hope.

Religion

Religion, in any nation, is not like an auxiliary water tank, for the use of the fire department—something that can be tapped in an emergency and then turned off again when the trouble is over. Religion if it is worth anything is more important than patriotism, just as God is more important than any country. Nevertheless, though God refuses to be used as a political ally, as Hitler and others have tried to use him, other things being equal the man with the most vital religion makes the best patriot. For religion is first and last a reliance upon God, as supreme Helper and as final Judge. Nehemiah's religion comes out in many ways, but it is plain that he was no once-a-week believer. His faith in God was woven into all his actions. He never spent long hours in prayer; but there was no corner of his life shut off from it.

Riverdale schools will operate on standard time beginning Monday morning. School will convene at 9 a.m. daylight time and 8 a.m. standard time. Closing time will be 4 p.m. daylight time and 3 p.m. standard time. That makes school time one-half hour later than it has been - provided you stay on daylight time. Of course, if you're going on standard time, it makes school a half hour earlier - that is if you've been on standard time all summer. But we haven't so @—&?-@&!b!?!b&@?!?!!.

Band Director To Meet With New Prospects

The first step in a program of rebuilding the music department of the Riverdale schools will be taken next Tuesday evening, October 8, when a meeting will be held for young people interested in playing in the school band and their parents. Mr. Robert Lowry, new band and chorus director of Riverdale High School, has arranged for the meeting so that students in grades 5, 6, 7 and 8 and high school may find out what steps are to be taken to begin working for active participation in the band.

Mr. Harold McCabe, representative of the Tom Berry Music Company of Fort Wayne, will be present with a display of musical instruments. The students and parents may inspect the instruments and ask questions concerning band work and the instruments of either Mr. Lowry or Mr. McCabe. The experience of the two men should prove profitable for music-minded youngsters in this area; Mr. Lowry having previous band directing experience, playing now with the Fort Wayne Philharmonic Orchestra and giving private lessons, while Mr. McCabe has a background of 17 years as a sales representative for the company he represents. He also has had several years' experience playing with orchestras in the Fort Wayne area.

Instruments shown at the meeting will be available on a trial-rental plan which will be explained Tuesday evening. Prices and other information will also be available.

Mr. Lowry recently gave tests to Riverdale students to determine to a certain extent the musical adaptability of the individual students. This, plus an informal talk with parents and students at the meeting, will be used to decide which instrument is to be recommended for each individual student.

The music department has already shown signs of renewed interest, the director has stated, with many students now participating in the chorus. The meeting next week is designed to further the department's growth by promoting interest in the band. At the present time there are but 18 band members; a school the size of Riverdale could and should have approximately 40 active band members, Mr. Lowry said.

Parents of students in the grades mentioned above are urged and invited to attend the meeting and bring their children; others interested in the band's progress are also invited. The meeting will be held at 7:00 p.m. CST or 8:00 p.m. DST at the high school gym in St. Joe.

The Band Moves Forward

An encouraging step will be taken next week in promoting the growth of the high school band. That step is in the form of a meeting to be held so that young people interested in playing in the band may see the instruments, find out which one or ones they are most suited to play, the prices of the instruments and other details concerning participation in the school band.

It has been somewhat discouraging in the past two years to see the music department slowly become a minor activity in the school. The local P.T.A., after spending hundreds of dollars for uniforms and instruments, saw the band membership drop continually until it now stands at but 18 members. Part of the drop in interest may be due to the fact that the entire music program in the schools fell on the shoulders of one person, whereas our music department is now divided between the band and chorus director for the upper grades and a county music instructor for the lower grades. Part of the drop in interest may also be due to a lack of promotion.

Next Tuesday night a step in the right direction will be taken. The bands of the future years will be started as the young boys and girls, particularly those in the 5th and 6th grades, find the opportunity to begin learning to play an instrument. It generally is too late to build a band when the students begin learning as they enter high school or even junior high. The program of teaching grade school students the fundamentals of music is as reasonable as the training of the younger boys in athletics, particularly basketball in the Hoosier state, for their high school athletic careers.

We urge parents to investigate the possibilities of their youngsters' taking part in the band activities. Musical education of this sort is rewarding in two ways, it is fun while in school and promotes an understanding in later years of the music which is a part of the entire world.

Pay As You Go - And How!

Have you taken a ride on the toll road?

One could be sarcastic and put quotes around the word "ride" to give the question two meanings. We say this because of the restaurant facilities which are available to the public on the Indana toll road. We have had the pleasure (?) twice of patronizing the eating establishments on the toll road and have found them to be unsatisfactory in two ways - one, the service is terrible, two, the prices are unreasonable.

One of the reasons for using the toll road is the time-saving factor. With no cities or towns to go through it is possible to maintain an average highway speed which exceeds that possible on the public tax supported roadways. That reason will hold up provided you don't stop for a bite to eat. One experience this summer proved that it takes 45 minutes to get a roll and cup of coffee. Another experience proved that it takes an hour to get sandwiches, dessert and drink, even with counter service.

There is one thing to be said, however, in favor of this time-consuming stop at one of the restaurants. Those who have a heavy foot on the accelerator by habit will not be recognized when they leave the toll road, their 75 or 80 mile-an-hour speed covered up by the stop at the restaurant on the way. Their only concern need be for the patrol cars that travel the highway.

Since there are no other restaurants other than the chain which has the exclusive right to operate on the toll road, it is possible to charge whatever is wanted, it appears. This explains the price of 15 cents for a small glass of milk (about six or seven ounces) or 20 cents for a glass of chocolate milk, the same size. A steak sandwich with a few french fries and a slice of tomato on the side brings exactly one dollar - and the glass of milk costs extra. Prices of dinners run proportionately higher when compared with other eating establishments.

It might not be so bad - might not - if the service was even average. But when the customer must ask for his first glass of water, ask for a fork or spoon so that the pie or ice cream dessert may be eaten, keep the waitress straight as to who ordered what, etc., the whole toll road becomes just what it always will be, a lousy way to provide public transportation and service facilities in "the land of the free."

It's Easier This Way

St. Joe'ers find themselves lawbreakers, not by choice but by expediency.

With the state of Indiana divided in its observance of central standard or daylight saving time since last Sunday, our position in this area was "on the fence", until it came time to live with the law. Those who may have wished to be law-abiding citizens have found that with Fort Wayne, Auburn and Butler yet on daylight time, it's just a little difficult and confusing to stay within the law on standard time.

Ordinarily expediency is a poor excuse for one's actions, particularly when it comes to obeying the law. But under the circumstances, until such time that we in St. Joe can travel 10 to 25 miles to the cities in which many of us work and in which many of our business connections are made and can do it without getting into a mix-up over the time, we had better be expedient and go along with the small crowd around us on daylight time.

—But it ain't right.

FARMERS

My daddy was a farmer,
And I am a farmer too,
And many things I have done,
He taught me how to do.

But you know, since that day,
Farming has changed a lot;
Instead of the horse and plow,
Big tractors we have got.

Now we get on and ride,
But then we had to walk;
And while resting at the end,
With our neighbors we would talk.

Or while the horses rested,
Beneath some shade trees,
We listened to the song of birds,
Or the murmuring of the bees.

Now we don't have time to visit,
Our tractors go around and around;
We can't hear the birds singing,
Or the bees' buzzing sound.

We miss a lot of nature,
That the job of farming brings;
We hustle and we bustle,
Just to buy a lot of "things".

—Merwin J. Place

(Afterthought to the above, by the Editor):

And God, up in His High Place,
Must think we humans funny:
His children, all, heeding not His Word,
But needing only "money".

MT. PLEASANT CHURCH HOLDS GROUND-BREAKING SERVICE

Shown above is a part of the crowd that met with the Mt. Pleasant church on September 15 for the ground-breaking service for the new addition to be built onto the church. Plans for the new addition call for a new sanctuary extending to the north, using part of the old church for educational facilities along with a number of new class rooms in the basement. There will also be included a new heating plant, new kitchen and rest room facilities. Present plans call for the basement addition to be added yet this fall.

On this date, September 15, there were 168 present in the morning services. Rev. Swenson taught the Sunday School and Bishop Showers of Dayton was speaker for the morning and afternoon services. Included in the day's activities were a basket dinner at noon at which there were enough families participating that the present basement could not accommodate the group. The public is invited to come and worship and visit with this growing church in a country community.

Someone once said, "We expected much, and got much more."

Recent experiences in our furniture store have proven to us that people do expect much and we find that we are usually able to meet those expectations.

For example: just last week we can cite you two of our customers to show you what we mean. The first of these customers shopped all of the furniture stores from Three Rivers (about 90 miles) all the way down to Garrett (on their way to the Big City). Upon arrival they were amazed at the wide range of styles in living room, bedroom and dining room furniture, all of which they wanted.

Instead of eliminating all as they had in the other stores they had to decide between many styles and fabrics, all of which they liked. (They never got to the big city!)

The second customer had shopped the area for furniture suitable for a newly built home. Let it suffice to say that they also were able to make selections between several styles that they liked. Their remark was, 'How can you have so many more desirable and beautiful selections than the other stores."

We're just lucky, I guess!

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
International Uniform Sunday School Lessons
BY DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

Background Scripture: I Corinthians 1—4.

Devotional Reading: I Corinthians 3:11-23.

IDEAL AND REAL
Lesson for October 6, 1557

Paul was not the fly-by-night sort of preacher who passes through a town, stirs up a meeting and moves on, so to speak, without looking back. He was not the kind of missionary who preaches to the natives gathered on the river bank, starts his engine and cruises on down the river confident that the gospel has been brought to the people. Paul being a statesman as well as a saint, a psychologist as well as a theologian, stayed long enough - whenever they would let him - in every place he visited, to found a church, a going, active fellowship of believers. Then after he left, he would take time from his more than busy life to write back. He knew that churches, like new Christians, like new babies, need pastoral care. It is not safe to bring them into the world and just leave them.

Called to be Saints

No church gave Paul more trouble than the one at Corinth. That city was a boom-town, most of the Corinthian church members had had no background of experience in the high religion of the Jews, but came in from raw paganism. Few of them were persons of great culture. At the time Paul wrote to them first, none of them had been Christians long. And yet Paul writes to them as the "sanctified in Christ Jesus, called to be saints." As J. B. Phillips translates Paul's Greek, these Corinthians are "those whom Christ has made holy, who are called to be God's men and women." Almost every one of Paul's letters to Christian churches begins on this same high note. To the Ephesian Christians he writes that they have been "stamped with the promised Holy Spirit as a guarantee of purchase" (Phillips). The Colossians he calls "saints and faithful brethren." Theologians and others have often discussed the question: Is the church human or divine? If we take Saint Paul seriously, we have to say, at least, that the church is made of persons who have been touched and are being transformed by the divine.

"There Is Quarreling. . ."

The ink is hardly dry on the high words Paul has used to describe his "brothers" in the Corinthian church, when he begins to write in a quite different key. "It has been reported," he says, "that there is quarreling among you." The reader who pushes on through this and the second letter to the Corinthians may be shocked by what he sees. These people are unspiritual (3:1), they are babies (3:2), there is jealousy and strife among them (3:3). Gross sin goes on among them unrebuked (5:1,2). They have lawsuits against one another (6:1). They have to be warned against prostitution (6:15, 16). Some of them come drunk to communion, or get drunk there (11:21). Paul is afraid that when he next visits them he may find "selfishness, slander, gossip, conceit and disorder" (II Cor. 12:20). How can he say such things to people who have been "sanctified" and are "called to be saints"? The truth is, Paul sees the Corinthians, as he saw all his converts and all his churches, in two lights. He sees the ideal church, what it ought to be, and what in the mind of God it already is, or more precisely what it is destined to be.

The Answer

Now the church moves from where it is to where it is to be. But by what power? What is the secret of the church's transformation from what it is to what it is destined to become, from the real to the ideal? The answer is - in one word - Christ. Paul calls him the "power of God and the wisdom of God." In other words, as Christ comes to live in the hearts of these raw, imperfect, quarreling Christians-by-intention, they will become changed, as time goes on, more and more into his likeness. As they face their many problems, they will learn to face the solution as they learn more and more what the spirit of Christ really is. If Christ lives in his church, the church will not be tempted to confuse what it is with what it ought to be. It will not mistake the real church for the ideal one; but on the other hand, if He lives in the church, no one has a right to be discouraged, and fear that the ideal will never come true.

When you meet up with a disagreeable person, never allow yourself to be upset by him. Say to yourself, "If a dowdy like that can stand himself all his life, surely I can stand him for a few minutes."

Please excuse us if we sound like a broken record but so many have taken advantage of our repeated invitation to come in and look around that we are anxious for the rest of you to come in, too.

Just today, a lady came in, said she was having her car serviced and wanted to look round until it was ready. We let her alone, told her to call to one of us if she wanted to ask any questions. She seemed to have a good time, asked a few questions about the merchandise, then left to get her car.

If it were nearer Dec. 1, instead of only the first part of September we'd tell you that we are all ready for the holiday season. Many of our customers are finding that out, however, and are liesurely making gift selections now! May we see you?

VOLUME LXXII — ST. JOE, (DeKalb Co.), IND. — Thursday, October 10, 1957 — NUMBER 41

Local News

The Riverdale P.T.A. will hold its October meeting next Tuesday evening, October 15, at the high school gym. Time of the meeting is 7:30 p.m. D-ST. The program includes an educational film and talks by teachers from the Riverdale grade school and entertainment by the 4th and 10th grades of the local school. An invitation is extended to the community to attend this meeting, especially to parents of children who have not yet entered school; the film is of particular interest to them.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Inlow and family of Louisville were recent visitors in the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Inlow. Other callers in the Inlow home during their visit were Mrs. John Arrants and children of Butler, Mrs. Paul Inlow and daughters of Hicksville and Mrs. Alice Inlow and sons and her mother, Mrs. Edith Flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. John Crothers and Miss Elizabeth Hart spent the week end at Wellington, O., guests of J. W. Mellick and family. Mr. Mellick is a former pastor of Coburn Corners Church of Christ. The church at Wellington has quite a historical background, having been dedicated by President James A. Garfield, and has been served as pastor by the son of the man who painted the celebrated painting "Spirit of '76." Sunday was the 104th birthday of the church, and a homecoming celebration was held. The afternoon speaker, pastor of the Church of Christ of Greenwich, O., gave an interesting talk of the work of missions in India, Germany and Denmark. He visited these countries last summer. The Crothers' report that the Mellicks are well and happy in their new work.

Mr. and Mrs. James R. Clauser and son, Gary Linn, of South Bend spent Thursday night and Friday with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Clauser.

Mrs. Harold Keller and son and Mrs. John Arrants and daughter of Butler were recent dinner guests of Mrs. William Hubbard.

The 8th annual reunion of the class of 1925, St. Joe High School, was held September 29 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Weldon Shafer (Evalyn Knight) of north of St. Joe. Guests present were Mr. Roy E. Maxwell, the class sponsor for the high school period; Mr. and Mrs. Cletus Weichart (Freda Martin), of Fort Wayne; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Zeigler (Bessie Layman) of Elkhart; Miss Verba Haner and Mr. Jess Rodebaugh of Waterloo; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hadsell and son, Richard, of Tecumser; Mr. and Mrs. Loyd Curie of Toledo and Leora and Sheldon Shafer. Everyone had a good time eating and visiting. The next meeting will be with Mr. and Mrs. Hadsell at Tecumseh, Michigan. One member of the class, Harcourt (Bud) Miser of Albion was not present.

Mrs. O. E. Inlow and Irene and Mrs. A. D. Inlow and two daughters called in the Cloyd Anderson home near Auburn last week.

Don Keller and Fred Ulm got first prize of $5 for the largest watermelon, weighing 48 lbs., and first prize for the largest muskmelon, for $5 in merchandise, shown at Butler's "Farmers' Day" Friday and Saturday.

Concord Methodist Church is having Rally Day Sunday, October 13. Worship service will be held at 9:15 a.m. with Sunday school at 10:00. A basket dinner will be served at noon. Rev. Stolte will be the afternoon speaker.

Mrs. Harold Furnish and three daughters were supper guests Tuesday evening of last week of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Inlow.

Illness in the community, in part designated as "Asiatic flu", but a great part also to be credited to just plain old sore throats, colds, fever, intestinal flu, etc., has been the cause of a big drop in attendance at the local schools. The absentee list stood at around 30 at the beginning of last week and swelled to a whopping 202 on Tuesday of this week. Of that 202 total, 124 were grade school absentees and 78 were junior high and high school absentees. Teachers have also been struck by illness in the past two weeks. Student absenteeism on Tuesday represented 1-3 of the total enrollment.

Enrollment for the DeKalb County Better Farming and Better Living program is now being accepted at the county agricultural office. This part of the extension program is designed to help every landowner and farm operator to strengthen his farming operation.

Leon Kees and Harvey Hull attended the 4th District American Legion meeting Albion last Thursday night and brought home the prize money for having the largest percentage in posts up to 100 quota, also for having the largest percentage of membership in the district, 92.72 per cent, in the membership campaign.

Mrs. Andrew Ward was hostess to the Rural Housewives Club October 1, with 8 members present. In the absence of the president, the secretary, Bernice Wilder, called the meeting to order. Winifred Hart gave the opening number. Roll call was "Halloween Memories." After the business meeting, all enjoyed a social hour. A remembrance card was sent to Mrs. Inez Hadsell. The hostess served dainty refreshments. The November meeting is scheduled to be held at the home of Mrs. John Crothers.

Driver license suspensions include those of Kenneth W. Edsell, Roger Paul Ayers, John M. Baxter and Carl A. Keller of Auburn and Paul James Bloom of Garrett.

Background Scripture. I Corinthians 5—6; 13.

Devotional Reading: Romans 6:12-23.

A MORAL CHURCH
Lesson for October 13, 1957

The letter of Paul to the church at Corinth shows us, so to speak, a church with the lid off. These letters were plainly not intended for publication - that is - they were not sent out broadcast over the church at large. They were sent to the church concerned, one of Paul's problem churches. If Christians today sometimes think that their church would be free from its faults if only they could get the right preacher, they should remember the Apostle Paul. Even he had problem churches - almost "nothing else but".

Last week we noticed how highly Paul speaks of the church as an ideal, and yet how dark the reality sometimes was. One illustration of this was the crime at Corinth. For crime it was, right in the church, the crime of incest. The case seems to have been well known. Paul does not need to mention names. But the church had done not one thing about it. None of them had had the nerve even to speak out about this. (Were they too squeamish to mention it, or were the sinners perhaps prominent people?)

The Church Talks Morality

The church at Corinth is dead and gone long since. But we ask questions about the church of today. Is it moral? It certainly should be; the aim for every one of its members is nothing less than to be like Jesus. The church certainly talks morality. At least half an hour every week is spent listening to a serious talk which, in spite of what rambling there may be, does hold up high ideals. The Ten Commandments are posted on the wall of the Sunday school hall. Every Sunday school class is in favor of morality. You couldn't get a vote against morality in the whole place.

But DOES the church talk morality? Does it teach social responsibility? Does it hold up the same standards for the rich and the strong as for the poor and weak? Is the church putting its finger on the sins of our time or does it spend more energy denouncing a few simple sins than some of the bigger ones? Does the church talk morality on any higher level than (say) a luncheon club? Does the church LEAD the moral progress of the time, or does it do no better than to follow prevailing trends?

The Church Understands Morality

The church can see into morality, what it really means, too. The church today, at any rate - just any church on any corner or country road knows, or at least it has heard dozens of times, that immortal 13th chapter of I Corinthians, " - greatest of these is Love." The church knows, or has often enough been told, that love is the fulfulling of the law (Romans 13:10). Ask almost any church member what is the most important quality in the Christian life, and he will usually say "Love".

But DOES the church understand this? On the one hand it understands that all the law of God comes down to and is focused in just those two commands, love God and love your neighbor. But has the church often struggled with the question, HOW DOES LOVE WORK OUT, in business, in education, in race and industrial relations, in any of the complex areas of today's puzzling, pushing life? Is the church's understanding of love something of words more than of works?

The Church Upholds Morality

The church upholds and insists on moral standards, too. Active in civic reforms always is the Ministerial Association. But what ministers and churches do in their own circles may be something else again. In how many congregations will the church tolerate a minister if he persists in pointing out and condemning, in God's name, sins and wrongs committed generally by the members of that church? Don't congregations often muzzle their ministers, as good as telling him he must not preach about this or that "controversial" theme? And, most painful question of all: when there is known to be wrong-doing in a congregation, what are the members likely to do about it? Do they, like the Corinthians, shut their eyes and pretend not to see it? Can a church be said to uphold morality if it never does a thing to, about or with those who drag morality down?

VOLUME LXXII | ST. JOE, (DeKalb Co.), IND. | Thursday, October 17, 1957 | NUMBER 42

Indiana State Library

Around the Town

With the Editor

Way back in 1906, when the horse was a pretty important part of the farm family, Mrs. Emma Coburn Hart wrote a poem at the passing of "Old Barney." The poem is contributed by Mrs. Jay Hart, daughter-in-law of its author.

Obituary

Poor Old Barney is dead and laid in the grave.
He took the colic, his life we couldn't save
We thought, any longer, so Jay took his gun,
Put him out of his suffering. His labors are done.
Pa, Jay and John dug a grave long and deep.
Roscoe helped place him in, there in peace to sleep.
He did his work as faithful as any horse could.
His grave is in sight, they buried him good.
The last trip he made away from his home,
Was with you, Ma, and the children to Mira's home.
His life was a lesson to us and to all,
Let our work be well done, we'll be ready for the call.
If there is a heaven for horses in a place of rest,
Old Barney will surely be among the blessed.

Speaking of poems, two weeks ago I was doing some wash - yeah, thats what I said - while Esther was in the hospital and I had the radio tuned in to WOWO at ncon. Jay Gould was on and from the kitchen it sounded like he said "St. Joe News". So I bounded into the living room and, sure enough, that's what he had said. He was reading Merwin Place's poem, "The Farmer," which was in this paper recently.

Speaking of the hospital, Esther was lying on the couch downstairs on the Monday she came home when the boys arrived home from school. You know how it is, all quiet and peaceful and then, suddenly everything is alive with three boys barging in. Dave came breezing in the door, stopped short when he saw Esther lying there (I had brought her home while they were in school), astonished her with, "Hi, Mom - - - where's the baby! - - " and breezed on into the kitchen.

—You just never know.

Seniors Present Play Next Week

"Seventeenth Summer", a warm, wistful and realistic comedy-romance will be presented by the Riverdale High School Senior Class on the St. Joe stage on Friday and Saturday, October 25-26, at 7:30 p.m. CST. Originally scheduled for this coming week end, the play has been postponed to the above dates due to the recent spate of illnesses in the cast.

Adapted to the stage by Anne Coulter Martens from Maureen Daly's tremendously successful novel of young romance, "Seventeenth Summer" is described by its director, Mr. Hubert L Stackhouse, as "a refreshing, realistic and satisfying look into the feelings of a teen-aged girl. The play has no frills, no artifical laughgetters; but it does offer a wholesome two hours of entertainment of a quiet kind."

Playing the "romantic" leads as a shy, 17 year old girl, Angie, and the star of the local football team, Jack, will be Reta Gerig and Wallace Sherritt. Angie's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Morrow, are Robert Wilder and Dorothy Bry. Providing contrasting romances to Angie's are the settled and happy older sister, Margaret, and the unsure and unhappy Lorraine, being played by Mary Baker and Marylan Cogan. Miss Cogan assumes the role on a very short notice following the illness of Bonnie Waters, who was originally cast as Lorraine.

The family is completed by the fourth daughter, the 13-year old Kitty, a confirmed boy-hater. Kitty will be played by Miss Nancy Brown, who is on loan to the Senior Class from the Freshman Class.

The trouble makers who provide the obstacles to Angie's romance are Jane and Margie, played by Delores Davis and Judy Miller. Romantic interests of the various ladies are: Art, played by Don Noragon; Martin Keefe, a snob, played by Roger Ransom; Tony Randall, played by Don Donat; and Fitz, played by Bob Griggs.

Assisting the cast in the production are: Maxine Walters, prompting; Mrs. Carold Pugsley, make-up; and the Senior Class and sponsors, Miss Bonnie Woodruff and Mr. Gene Buzzard, business arrangements.

Curtain time will be 7:30 p.m. CST, and tickets are on sale by members of the Senior Class and will be on sale at the door. All reserved seats will be 60 cents; all bleacher seats 40 cents.

Fire Destroys House Roof

Fire departments from three communities, Spencerville, St. Joe and Grabill, were called Saturday morning to extinguish a blaze which finally destroyed the roof of the Glenn Moore residence at Spencerville. The Spencerville department was the first at the scene of the fire with the St. Joe and Grabill trucks arriving later. However, the Grabill truck was called immediately to another fire near Georgetown and was able to assist by leaving a tank truck to furnish water to fight the fire. Additional water was supplied by means of a bucket brigade from a cistern on the Dan Ransom property just south of the Moore residence.

Household furnishings were removed from the lower floor by volunteers from the crowd that gathered thus helping to keep the total loss at a minimum. The roof on the main section of the house burned out but there was a comparatively small amount of smoke which also helped to keep the loss down.

The fire was reported to be the result of defective wiring in an upstairs three-way light switch.

SISTERS OF THE SKILLET HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB

The Sisters of the Skillet Home Demonstration Club held their September meeting at the home of Mary Ellen Beaty. The president opened the meeting by having the members read the club collect.

Devotions were given by Connie Hollabaugh with a short Bible quiz. The history and song of the month were given by Paula Roberts. The club sand the song, "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean."

Roll call was answered by 18 members (100 per cent attendance) and one guest, Mrs. Doris Yeiser.

Secretary's report was read and a lesson on patterns and materials was given by Gladys Akey, Arden Dwyer and Doris Yeiser.

Election of officers was held with the following results:

Effiebel McCann, president.
Lois Akey, vice president.
Maxine Harter, secretary.
Mary Ellen Beaty, treasurer.
Dorothy Chrisman, song leader.
Sharon Bowser, news reporter.

The club prayer was sung and the meeting adjourned.

A delicious lunch of confetti cake, ice cream and coffee was served by the hostess.

Services Held For Leroy Zimmerman

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at 2 p.m. for Leroy Zimmerman, 76, a resident of St. Joe for 30 years. Mr. Zimmerman died Monday at 3:45 a.m. in Hicksville Community Hospital. He had been a patient there for 11 days after an illness of one month.

The deceased, a retired farmer, was born June 27, 1881, at Leo, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Zimmerman. He and Lillian McClure were married in Elkhart in 1902. The family formerly resided in Garrett many years ago.

Survivors include the widow; a daughter, Mrs. Ellen Mooney of St. Joe; two sons, Charles of Leo and Melvin of Butler; 31 grandchildren and 26 great-grandchildren.

Services were conducted by Rev. Keith Davis of the Garrett Methodist Church. Burial was in White City Cemetery at Spencerville. Mr. Zimmerman attended the Methodist Church in Spencerville.

ST. JOE VALLEY HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB

The St. Joe Valley Home Demonstration Club met Friday, September 20, at the home of Laura Washler.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Doris Yeiser. The club collect was repeated in unison. History of the song of the month was read by Elizabeth Shull, then all joined in singing the song, "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean."

The lesson on selecting patterns in materials was given by Doris Yeiser. The response to roll call was school day memories.

During the business session officers for next year were elected. They are:

Cora Funk, president.
Nancy Coburn, first vice president.
Elizabeth Shull, second vice president.
Laura Washler, secretary.
Hazel Leonhart, treasurer.
Melba Chapman, news reporter.
Elizabeth Shull, song leader.

The meeting closed with the singing of the prayer song.

There were 18 members and 2 children present. Lunch was served by the hostess assisted by co-hostess Cora Curie.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Emma Trenary on October 18.

We'll Get There

That little gimmick the Russians have thrown into outer space is certainly causing much worry in these United States - perhaps too much worry.

It seems rather strange that a nation composed of people who pride themselves on being more appreciative of higher aspirations than that of possessing great worldly power and wealth are so disturbed because they didn't get to launch a space satellite before anyone else did and therefore seem to have lost ground in the race for worldly power. It is true that there is something to be proud of when a "first" is accomplished, first to cross the ocean, first to fly around the world, first to perfect a vaccine, etc. These firsts are somewhat different, however, from the "first" involved in the so-called conquest of outer space. This Russian satellite may be the first to reach a specific altitude, but it is not the first exploration of outer space nor the first to reach some height which is almost incomprehensible to the human being. What comes of the information and data derived from this Russian satellite's journey is more important than the fact that it was first to get up that high.

And we don't believe that our nation is that far behind that we must begin fretting about the awful consequences to be faced because the Russians did it first. We have enough confidence in American scientific knowledge to believe that our scientists are getting almost as much information from the flight of the Russian satellite as the Russians themselves are getting, except, perhaps, for the "coded" mesages reported being sent from the small space-explorer. And we have our scientists reporting that this country is preparing to launch a space ship itself in the next several months.

Naturally, with the world thinking in terms of war rather than peace, it is disturbing to have one's "enemy" doing something ahead of all others. We now are told that our air power is practically useless in light of the tremendous speed with which these spaceships can be propelled. And we naturally fear that maybe one or a great number of these space ships may be used to carry an atom or hydrogen bomb over here and destroy part of our civilization. There are fools in the world, naturally, and maybe there are fools in Russia, for instance, who are considering such tactics. But any destruction that might be wrought here would be retaliated for in kind by our forces of destructive power. It is a bleak outlook but a point of comfort that to start a war on a scale represented by the use of space ships would be "asking for it". There probably would be little left in manpower or physical resources to exercise power over if full scale rocket and atomic war were to be declared. You can't be a boss if there isn't anything left to boss.

Perhaps we take too complacent an attitude with regard to the Russian satellite. But it appears that there is so much to learn yet about the universe that the launching of one space ship, small as it is or big as it might be, is not the most important consideration. What is done with the knowledge gained from these scientific explorations is the important thing.

—And we can yet be the first to get to the moon!

When we were in school and raced from the class room for recess for the daily softball scrimmaging, it always seemed better to be third or fourth or fifth batter rather than the first or second. Because if you were first up and made out, you probably stood in the field the remainder of the recess and didn't get another time at bat; and batting was the most important part of the game. But being third or fourth or fifth left something to be looked forward to, there was a bit of field work before the fun of batting, which seemed to be the preparation for the purpose of the game.

We like to look upon man's new field of exploration in space as being somewhat like those school softball scrimmages. Somebody else can be first, but our turn is coming and when it does, we'll be ready.

A Printer's Calendar

Everyone is interested in making things easier for themselves, and making it easier for one's self often involves the element of time. Ralph Sechler passes on the following suggestion for making it easier on printers and their customers, said suggestion coming from a card distributed by Gorny-Winzeler Printers and Stationers of Ohio.

Proposed Printers' Calendar

Neg.	Fri.	Fri.	Thu.	Wed.	Tue.	Mon.
8	7	6	5	4	3	2
16	15	14	13	12	11	9
23	22	21	20	19	18	17
31	30	29	28	27	26	24
38	37	36	35	34	33	32

We propose this Printer's Calendar as we know it will be a solution to many problems in the printing industry. We believe our present calendar should be revised for present day use. Write your Congressman today!

Here is what the proposed calendar will do for the printers of America and their customers:

1. Every job is in a rush. Everyone wants his printing yesterday. With this calendar, a customer can order his work on the 7th and have it delivered on the 3rd.

2. All customers want their jobs on Friday —so there are two Fridays in every week.

3. There are seven extra days at the end of the month for those end-of-the-month rushes.

4. There will be no "first-of-the-month" bills to be paid as there isn't any "first". The "tenth" and "twenty-fifth" have also been omitted in case you have been asked to pay them on one of those days.

5. There are no bothersome non-productive Saturdays and Sundays. No time and a half or double time to pay.

6. There's a new day each week called Negotiation-day. Contracts may then be reopened each week.

THE BIG EXPLOSION

What a mess we farmers get in,
When at making inventions we begin.
A farmer with an antifreeze can,
Invented a torch, and his troubles began.
When he touched a match to that can's spout,
Everything on the inside came right out.
Was there an explosion? Well, I'll say!
He landed in a hospital miles away.
Where nurses came to doctor his burn,
When one got tired, another took a turn.
I don't know, but I am just guessin',
While making torches, he learned a lesson.

—Merwin J. Place

(The above poem was written for Karl Hart when he was in the hospital last fall. It is published herewith with his permission. And as Merwin says, "Mebbe people will realize their antifreeze cans are explosive.")

THE WORRY CLINIC
by Doctor George W. Crane

Case V-391: Tommy L., 13, is a 7th grader.

"Dr. Crane, Tommy used to be an 'A' student," his worried mother told me when I addressed the PTA at Brentwood, Pa., recently.

"But something has happened. He now seems to think it is sissy to be a bright pupil. He abhors the idea of being a 'brain', and now purposely tries to get lower grades.

"Maybe it is because Tommy is short and wants to be included in the sports of the bigger boys. They seem to sneer at the bright students. Is this uncommon?"

You kids better wise up to reality. The payoff in life is seldom based on a strong back or football and other athletic prowess at school.

No siree! What counts in this modern age is a trained brain.

Labor saving machinery has now made it possible for a woman to handle all the hardest factory jobs. And women can operate all the machinery on a farm.

So don't become idolatrous in your worship of a big athletic figure. The smart little guys in your class will probably be the employers 25 years hence.

The social lions, who are now the athletes, will be begging those smart former classmates for good jobs later on, for that's the way of this world.

If you think I am kidding, then look at the figures that Dr. Paul C. Glick reveals from his analysis of our U.S. Census data.

A boy who graduates from high school earns an average of $49,000 more the rest of his life than does the big bruiser who quit after the 8th grade.

And each year of college leads to an additional $25,000 in later earnings!

So smart boys and girls realize they must graduate from high school and take a year or more of college.

Otherwise they are cheating their future wives and children. But you can't expect to make passing marks in college unless you are a good student in junior and senior high school.

Even the professional baseball players and football stars are now being recruited from smart college athletes, so you will have little chance in those professional sports unless you are a college man.

And the competition will be much keener in another 10 years. Indeed, the colleges are predicted to have double their present enrollments in 1970, which is just 13 years ahead.

Meanwhile, don't try to affect disinterest in grades! Instead dig in and raise your marks as high as possible. Build up a good school pedigree!

GOOD TO THE LAST BITE

A young scientist once made a practice of walking around a university campus with a two-year-old hamburger in his coat pocket.

Strangely enough, the aged package of chopped meat was odorless, pink-fresh and in tip-top eating condition. The secret? It had been bombarded with gamma rays and vacuum-packed in a plastic envelope.

This scientist's little experiment emphasized one of the biggest potentials in the search for ways to save food from spoilage - peaceful use of atomic energy discoveries - sterilizing with gamma rays which preserves food indefinitely without refrigeration. For as ways are constantly sought to increase food production to feed an increasingly crowded world, it is a sad fact that a terribly high percentage of edibles are spoiled before they can be used.

Even in this technically advanced, air-conditioned and refrigerated country as much as twenty per cent of all fresh foods are spoiled between the farm and the kitchen. An even higher percentage becomes inedible after lingering in the kitchen a few days. A staggering example is poultry which spoils into losses as high as ten million dollars a month to producers and consumers.

Better times are promised. It will be possible some day soon to sit down to a dinner of meat, vegetables and fruit that have been on the pantry shelf for months, unrefrigerated, yet served as fresh as the day they were packaged.

New methods of food preservation will help redistribute the world's supplies, breaking the shackles of seasons, geographical distances and customs. There will be more food all year round, in greater variety and amount, in fresher and better tasting condition than it is possible to envision now.

A group of scientists a few years ago was invited to a dinner in New York for an experiment. Before each diner was a plate with two seemingly identical steaks. The men of science fell to with knife and fork, but it soon became apparent that one of the steaks was tough, tasteless and inedible. The other was a gourmet's delight.

The host, a famous chemist, explained that both steaks had come from the same steer - an aged, tough specimen - and were a month old. One had been refrigerated in the best tradition of finest cuisine. This was the untouchable steak. The other had never seen an icebox, had instead reposed, unprotected, on a kitchen shelf and was the one that had been devoured by the guests.

What had made the difference? The tasty steak had been impregnated with aureomycin. Not only did it preserve the meat perfectly, but it had made it juicier, tastier and butter-soft to the knife.

Modern scence has vastly improved on the age-old food-preserving methods of drying, salting, pickling, smoking, cooling and canning. Scientists not only use the bacteria-killing nuclear rays, ultrasonic waves, dehydrofreezing, but also the new groups of "miracle" drugs.

When early man churned milk into butter and cheese, he was actually preserving food just as when he turned fresh grapes into raisins, fruit juices into wines and brandy and fresh fruit into the dried variety. He quickly took nature's own method and dried cereals, nuts, fish and meat. He had learned that substances with less than ten per cent moisture make poor hosts for bacteria. Dried milk and powdered eggs can last for many months in this condition. In the same way, salting and pickling (mostly of fish and pork) have similiar effects.

In Colonial days salted meat was the only kind available the year round. Every farm had its barrel of brine for pickling the hocks and pork. Those early settlers who lived along the coasts got their salt from evaporated sea-water by a patient and complex process. Salt was important also to the pioneer who moved west. It is no accident that many of our present cities were situated originally near salt licks and mines.

These methods, however, only retarded bacterial growth. When it was first discovered that few bacteria survive 176 degrees heat, sterilization (which aims at total bacterial destruction) and canning came into vogue.

As soon as man realized that ice helped to preserve food for quite a long time, he decided to go nature one better. He began to save winter ice for later summer use. As far back as 1000 B.C., the Chinese built ice cellars and insulated ice containers. The Romans and Greeks stored compressed snow in grass, earth and sawdust. For many years, countries with long, cold winters built a thriving natural ice business. Cutters chopped lake ice into chunks to be stored under pine sawdust and later shipped hundreds of miles to warmer climates.

This ice was expensive, of course. Then Dr. John Gorrie of Florida, in 1851, invented a machine using compressed air and brine as refrigerants to make artifical ice. When the Civil War cut off the South's ice supply the Confederates applied a French ice-making machine using ammonia and water. This foreshadowed the beginning of the end of the wide use of transported natural ice.

Soon no household was considered complete without an icebox to store ice bought from a local ice-making plant. By 1924, ice-manufacturing was a billion dollar American industry. In the 20's athletes delivered ice to keep in football trim, carrying big chunks into kitchens on a daily schedule. Today, with domestic refrigeration in millions of homes the iceman has disappeared. He could very well be called "the iceman who cometh not", for he is no longer needed.

By 1957, few old-fashioned iceboxes remained and the refrigerator was omnipresent. Yet as late as 1919, a group of engineers at a convention almost unanimously agreed that the domestic refrigerator would never find popular use.

From early clumsy models that clunked loudly and leaked often, refrigerators evolved into indispensible, sleek, white self-defrosting appliances capable of holding great quantities of food at varying temperatures. Operating on the principle of heat absorption from the food compartment through the physical change of its refrigerant medium, these kitchen necessities, electrically or gas powered, became so popular that in 1947 alone almost 4,000,000 units were sold to a post-war appliance-hungry nation.

Cooling makes bacteria sluggish, but freezing keeps them dormant. On this idea, two German scientists, in 1916, experimented with quick-freezing and, a year later, Clarence Birdseye produced the first commercial quick-frozen product. It took two wars, numberless experiments and vast amounts of money to develop the present quick-frozen method.

This new process soon led to a sharp increase in the use of deep freezers which are capable of storing a month's supply of various frozen foods, includng pre-cooked complete dinners. A multi-million dollar industry of frozen products continues to expand at an astonishing rate.

Dehydrofreezing, or DF, a more advanced freezing technique, removes 80 per cent of the food's moisture before quick-freezing. In this way, orange juice can now be crystallized, packed and quick-frozen, occupying very little refrigerator space. Adding water to the crystals returns them to the original fresh orange juice.

There is a definite taste and vitamin advantage in quick-frozen foods. Corn or peas, for example, begin to deteriorate from the moment they are picked. Sugar turns to starch and by the time the corncob or serving of peas reaches your plate it may have been off the farm several days. Packers today freeze these products moments after they are picked, right on the field, preserving the fresh, sweet quality and vitamin content. Nevertheless, we have yet to devise a method to quick freeze such juicy fruits as tomatoes or melons. Lettuce loses its crispness on freezing.

When it comes to variety and number, nothing beats our use of chemicals in food for improving taste and for preserving. Some pundit once suggested that modern man has so infiltrated his food with chemicals that he has become a walking laboratory. There are 704 chemicals used directly or indirectly in our food supply.

The number of chemicals we consume daily is really astounding. An average dinner of meat, vegetables, bread and dessert may contain as many as fifty different kinds. Simply reading bottle and package labels will astonish you in this respect.

Even though we may stuff our foods with these chemicals and drugs and bombard them with atoms and ultrasonic waves, refrigeration for another purpose will always be with us. For who can resist a cold, delightful, flavorful beverage or a mouth-watering chilled piece of melon on a hot, sultry, summer day?

Letters to the Editor

Sept. 17, 1957

Dear Sir:

Some of my "old" St. Joe friends might be interested in the enclosed clipping from last night's Wash. News. I was slightly misquoted as I assure you I do not get up "in the middle of the night" to work these puzles - but I do wait until my 4 are in bed and John is all through with "his" paper. The morning paper belongs to the children and me, you see!

Also I assure you "Ma" will have some new fall duds out of her winnings. And I'll be glad to donate a share to Uncle Sam!

Mother (Mrs. Mabelle Thornton) sends me issues of the St. Joe News when she has finished and I enjoy keeping up with the news of our friends of yesteryears. In fact, the 18th of August I and a friend, Mrs. Coral Platter, formerly of St. Joe, called on the Foltz's, Mrs. Buckingham, Mrs. Anna Baker, Mrs. Pearl Simanton and Violet Kline.

Mother and I moved to Wash. in 1934 right after I graduated from St. Joe High. And my brother joined us 2 years later.

Regards to all our friends, and if any of them ever come east, would be glad to hear from them. I'm in the D. C. phone book.

Sincerely,
(Mrs.) Geraldine (Thornton) Hoskins
5402 Tilden Road
Bladensburg, Md.

The newspaper clipping dated September 16, 1957, includes the information that there were nearly 20,000 entries in the word-puzzle contest won by Mrs. Hoskins. A photograph accompanying the article shows daughter Peggy, 6, and Mom with the winning entry which won $312.50.

The article states that Mrs. Hoskins "got up in the middle of the night" to work the puzzle, which she points out as being a misquote.

Thanks for your letter. Good fortune is good news. —Ed.

Ted Haberkorn
The St. Joe News
St. Joe, Indiana

Dear Mr. Haberkorn:

Greetings from the land of 10,000 lakes!

This morning I lapsed into another one of my "homesick" moods and began wondering what all the good people back in St. Joe and Spencerville are doing. Home seems so far away up here in Minneapolis, where, by the way, it's just like winter already, so I have decided to stop "wondering" and take some action. (It seems all my friends and relatives back home have broken arms or else insufficient funds for a 3-cent stamp!)

The "action" is this: Please add the F. L. Romero's to your list of subscribers of The St. Joe News and start shooting the news up our way just as soon as you can get the postman on his way. Our address is 1425 Vincent Avenue, North, Minneapolis 11, Minnesota. If you'll bill us for a year's subscription with the first copy, we'll send you a check post haste.

Thanks much and best regards to all. Minesota is a wonderful state, there's no doubting that, but Indiana is, and always will be, home to us.

Sincerely,
Nancy Romero
Mrs. Frederic L. Romero

P.S. I doubt that the name Romero rings a bell with you, so to clarify matters, I am Nancy Vendrely Romero, daughter of those terrific people down in Spencerville, the Erving R. Vendrely's!

Shucks, Nancy, we knew it was you all the time.

And we're happy to add your name to the list of News readers. —Ed.

Hi Ted,

I don't know really where to start this. I know its been sometime since I last wrote to you. I'm sorry for that.

But I noticed in the St. Joe News that you have sent me since I have been in the Army all the other fellows seem to enjoy writing you a short timers letter before they get out.

I finally get out the first week in October, so thought I had better get mine in. Ha. I always liked the ones the other fellows wrote. For us I guess its really a way to have a little fun with the fellows that still in the service from around home, since we know they all get your paper to.

But just remember fellows your day will get here to. Your lucky you are not in the same company we are!

Lloyd (Dixon) and the rest of the fellows that get out when we do (there is 35 of us that get out within a week) have plenty of long timers to kid.

Just this pass Saturday about 200 trainees came back off leave. They all took there first 8 weeks training in our company. Most of them will stay for there second 8, then go to Germany when the Regiment goes over seas the first part of 1958.

Even though we have a lot of fun teasing them we are also glad they are here. Besides being our replacements, for there 16 weeks here, they also pulled all the K.P. and guard. Ha.Ha. That was the best part.

Sure missed them while they were home for two weeks leave. I had both K.P. and guard twice. Things are back to normal now. Very few of us had anything to do with there training during the first 8 weeks. About all we have been doing for some time is the different details for Regiment.

During the summer for a couple of months the company had a softball team, and I didn't do much but play on that in the afternoons. We finished with a 7-1 record.

In April we had post guard. We had to walk guard at night for one week. Then a month or so later we had prison chase. We guarded the guys thats in the stockade as they did different jobs around the post.

Then these trainees came the first part of July, so we really haven't been doing to much. Not that I care, I found out that its not always how hard the work is, that makes a job you like or not. Its other things to.

I've gotten to know quit a few real nice fellows in these last two years to.

Most of them live in the Tri-State area, so I hope to see them from time to time after I get out. This month has been going faster than I thought it would for me.

Usually there isn't much to do on the week ends. But with so many of us getting out soon we have been having some pretty good parties among ourselves. Ha. Couple weeks ago several of us went to the Topeka Fall Fair. Had a lot of fun there. It was about the size of the Auburn fair. I wish I could be home for that but will miss it by a few days.

I can about guess how cool it will get then. It hasn't been much warmer here lately. Mostly I think because we got a lot of rain last week.

And I think that only came then because we had a big division parade on Wednesday. Seems like when we have one of those it always works out about the same as after you wash and wax your car.

Well Ted I guess thats about it.

Will be seeing you.
Sammy (Morr)

P.S. Thanks a lot for sending me the News this past 2 years. We all like reading it.

Sammy enclosed a "Notice of Departure" similar to the letter sent in by Albert McMaken several months ago, the general thought of which you can't miss - "I'm getting out and am I glad!"

We've taken off a few names from the mailing list lately, what with the boys returning home after their hitch. Are there any others still in who would like to get their "hometown paper"??? —Ed.

to St. Joe News
St. Joe, Indiana

HELLO!

I am typing to you in hopes that you may tell me if there is some of the COBURNS. or Ackleys still in DeKalb County.

In 1926 I received an invitation to attend a reunion of the COBURN clan to be held two miles from St. Joe on August 8. I did not get to attend and have not heard from any of them since.

I am the son of Mary Almeda (ACKLEY) Johnson. She was the daughter of Roxana (Coburn) Ackley. Mary Almeda Ackley was married to DeWitt Sullivan Johnson of Mt. Pleasant, Michigan.

Roxana Coburn was married to Harvey Ackley. He died in Georgia in 1863 of over heat and sickness on a forced march during the civil war.

On May 28, 1957 I wrote to the postmaster in St. Joe but have not received an answer.

The children of Roxana Coburn and Harvey Ackley were Hannah Ester, b. April 18, 1849; d. Feb. 4, 1885.

Ignatius Lionel, b. Aug. 27, 1852; d. May 1927.

Mary Almeda, b. March 21, 1856; d. Oct. 1914.

Almira Minerva, b. Oct. 31, 1857; d. 1921.

Edna Belle, b. Aug. 8, 1861; d.

When Roxana (Coburn) Ackley was about 32 years old she was left a widow with five children to support owing to the death of her husband in the Ohio volunteers during a forced march in Georgia.

She was a short, stout woman with snapping black eyes and dark skin. She had a somewhat cynical mouth that turned down at the corners, and was a determined, uncompromising mouth. A very excellent house keeper as all of her house was spotless. Everything had to be neat and in its place. She was always neatly dressed in a close fitting basque and gored skirt usually black.

She lived in the little town of Newville in a white house with trees all around, some fruit trees, and flowers.

The house was of a two story construction. A front room carpeted with home made rag rugs (Roxana made rugs for herself and to sell). Back of the front room was a bed room. From the front door was a stairway leading to the upper rooms and closepress where spare bedding was kept, also spare clothing. In the front room was the ever present rocking chair as well as other chairs and a table with a sewing machine and a highly polished heater. The kitchen was large with a large pantry where cookies were kept which were the delight of her grand children.

Her first pension was $8.00 a month but later she received what was called a bounty of about $300.00 or so.

Roxana's mother was a doctor (not as we to day we know as a doctor) but many were her cures for snake bites and other ills. She saved Roxana from death from snake bite. Roxana was partially blind especially during hot weather, presumeably from the snake bite.

Roxana had a brother and a sister. The sister Phoebe married a man by the name of Jake Dermott. Phoebe and Jake had two children Evans and Mary. Mary married a man by the name of Stevens.

Would like to know more of the history of the Coburn and Ackley clans.

Perhaps in your "Morgue" you might have some item on the Coburn reunion, or you might be able to direct me to some one of the members of the Coburn family that I could get some information from as to the fore fathers of the Coburns and Ackleys.

I thank you for any information that you might be able to send me.

In 1926 Estel Coburn was president and Alva Coburn was secretary of the Coburn reunion.

I was born at Brower, Multnomah County, Oregon, October 7, 1890 named Benjamin Harrison Johnson.

B. Harry Johnson

We're going to indulge in some buck-passing here and ask some of the many Coburns in the area (or anyone else, for that matter) to pass along what information they can to Mr. Johnson. Help! Help! —Ed.

Dear Mr. Haberkorn:

I think now is the opportune time for Saint Joe to make history! Now is the time for Saint Joe to be the "first-est there with the mostest". With the Russian satellite whirling around over head, demanding as I see it a great deal more attention than it deserves, it is high time that we of the U.S.A. begin giving some serious thought to the poor "Man In the Moon". Knowing the ruthlessness of the Russian leaders as we do, we should start a fund, so we are prepared when Russia invades the moon to offer political asylum to the poor guy up there. He's been a pretty sweet guy to us earth bound mortals, giving a halo of glory to our dark nights, and smiling down on romantic lovers giving us the ebb and flow of the ocean tide. Can we of Saint Joe sit idly by and see such a grand guy lose his freedom to the Russian dictators? I hear a lot of "no's", so here is our chance. Little 'ol Saint Joe will get the ball rolling, starting a fund that will spread over the nation, and we will be prepared when Russia invades the moon to give the man up there what Russia will never give him, "Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness", through political asylum in the U.S.A.

Sincerely,
Gertrude Borthwick

MINISTER

Lesson for October 20, 1957

The man has various titles. He may himself prefer to be called by the simple democratic "Mister". But he is also Pastor John Doe, and the Reverend John Doe, and maybe Doctor, Doe, besides. Some call him the preacher, But the title that binds him closest, perhaps, to the Lord Jesus, is the word "Minister". Jesus said: "The Son of man came not to be served but to serve." The Latin word for "serve" in that verse (Mark 10:45) is the word from which our English word "minister" is derived. It is the most inclusive of all the titles; it means in general one who is of service to others, and in particular one who serves in the name of Christ.

The Minister's Call

Consider three points about ministers which the people in the pews often overlook. One is the minister's call. What he does is a "calling" rather than a "position". How does a minister come to be pastor of a particular church? That varies from one denomination to another, though not very much. But how does the minister come to be one in the first place? That is always the same, whether he is a Roman Catholic priest or a Protestant minister: he is a minister of Christ because he believes he was called by the Lord to do and be just that. Could he be mistaken? Indeed he can. There are men in the ministry who have no business there. The problem of how to be sure about one's call to the ministry is a problem for ministers, not for most of the people who read these lines. What we need to do, when we "call" a minister, is to be sure we get a man who among other strong points has this: he is God's man first of all; ours only because he was God's first.

The Minister's Salary

Some churches do not have salaried ministers. Most of the churches in America, however, do have salaried ministers. One thing that many church members do not realize is that the salary of a minister is positively not the same thing as a weekly wage paid to a farm hand, or a business man's return on an investment in stocks, or a fee paid to a lawyer. If you hire a man, he is your man. If you don't like what he is doing, you can fire him. But the minister is not a hired hand. He is God's man, at your service, but not under your thumb. The business man wants to get rich, or richer, his income builds up his fortune. But the minister's salary never grows to a fortune. The lawyer has a stated set of fees, and if he is like some lawyers, he charges what the traffic will bear, i.e. he charges the wealthy more than the poor. In the Protestant church there is no scale of fees; most of what the minister does is free. Progressive ministers are today doing away with the wedding fee, for example, marrying only their own people and doing this as a part of the church's service to its people. Furthermore, and this is most important, the minister's salary, unlike professional fees, is NOT payment for services rendered. If the minister is any account, his services are beyond price. (How much is it worth, in cash, to be comforted in sorrow, strengthened in temptation, illumined in spirit?) The salary is a subsidy enabling him to work WITHOUT a salary!

The Minister's Ambition

Paul made it clear that he had a right to a salary; though he preferred not to use that right but to earn a living as he went along. But even if he had been "paid", the salary could never have been the main thing with him. "That I may WIN some people"—not to build a kind of private empire, not to win people for himself, but for Christ. Only God saves men; but he saves men through men. And what price can be named which is a fair "payment" for saving a man's soul?

All dedicated men set the doing of their work above the paycheck in importance. Their real heart's ambition is not for more pay. Their ambition is greater effectiveness - a closer approach to perfection, whether their work is art, teaching, bridge-building or whatever else it may be. So the true minister's secret ambition is not a bigger congregation, more salary, more prestige: it is more souls won.

Among the guests at a dinner party given by a prominent family were a Rabbi and a Catholic priest. When the party sat down to dinner, they were confronted with one of those seemingly insurmountable moments - who was going to say grace?

Everyone looked meekly down at his plate; the host and hostess gulped for words. At the crest of the terrible moment the priest looked around the table and said, 'If you don't mind, I'd like to say an old Jewish prayer." They all bowed their heads, and the priest said grace - in Hebrew.

That dilemma may soon be matched by ours at our uptown store. You may come downtown one of these days and find a false front built around our jewelry store entrance. If you do, don't turn away for we'll be right inside doing business as usual. You may even have to get into the jewelry store thru the furniture store.

The reason for all that commotion will be a new type of front for the jewelry store; it'll all be nice when finished and we are sure that you will like it as much as we.

New Men's Church Group Organized

The first meeting of a newly organized group of church men in this area will be held on Wednesday, October 23, at Zion Lutheran Church. The organization is made up of men from seven United Lutheran churches in this area and is called Lutheran Men of Northeastern Indiana. Participating churches include those of St. Joe, Spencerville, Butler, Auburn (Mt. Pleasant, Albion and Zion.

Speaker at the inaugural meeting will be Dr. H. Grady Davis, since 1937 professor of Functional Theology at Chicago Lutheran Seminary in Maywood, Ill. He is a graduate of the Lutheran Theological Seminary at Philadelphia, 1916, and received his doctor's degree from Wittenberg College at Springfield, O., in 1938.

Dr. Davis is author of "Design For Preaching," a homiletica textbook soon to be published, and "The Ministry In the New Testament," a monograph published in the Seminary Record in July of 1952.

The Lutheran Men of Northeastern Indiana was conceived by Dr. Allan Hauck, pastor of St. Mark's Lutheran Church of Auburn. Under his direction in the past several months, the formation of the group was promoted and, with the assistance of other pastors and the laymen of the churches, complete organization was recently fulfilled.

The board of directors is composed of two delegates from each participating church which serves as a guide for the group's activities. Election of officers was held two weeks ago which included the naming of Frank Sechler, member of St. Mark's at St. Joe, as secretary of the group. Other officers include L. K. Mason, president; James Tombow, vice president; and Richard McKenzie, treasurer.

Three meetings are planned for the coming season, those coming on October 23, January 15 and April 16.

Around the Town

With the Editor

"To what do you attribute your great age?" the visitor asked Jess Loftus.

"I can't say yet," answered Jess. "They's several of them testimonial fellers adickerin' with me."

The trouble with being an editor is you can't get sick. Or - you can but you aren't supposed to. Everybody wants the paper and their printing so editors and printers should consider themselves immune.

Sometimes we are. But occasionally, you know, you like to be considered normal like other people and have a day off just to be sociable - and sick. I had to take off Wednesday afternoon this week. I felt like all the strength had been drained from my body. And all I wanted to do was lay down.

But like I say, people want the paper and printing, so it's back to work again Thursday morning.

Don't you feel sorry for me? —Thanks.

Leon Kees has a solution to this flu and sickness business. He says he's immune. All he has to do is keep on smoking those five-cent cigars and nobody will get close enough to him to give him the flu bug.

That might work - if you don't get sick on cigars.

A Scotchman who had just got aboard the water wagon was asked by a friend: "If you were standing in a lake of whiskey up to your knees, wouldn't you bend over a wee bit?"

"No, sir," said Sandy righteously.

"But if it was up to your chin - real Scotch whiskey - wouldn't you even sip it " his friend asked again.

Sandy gulped and replied: "Well, I'm not saying I would, d'ye mind, but I might make a wee ripple with me hand."

CONCORD JR. HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB

The Concord Jr. Home Demonstration Club met at the home of Norma Diederich on October 7. The meeting was called to order by the president, Ellen Fetters, with the members repeating the club creed.

The song of the month was led by Katy Crow. Devotions were given by Gertrude Reinhart. Thirteen members and two visitors were present.

Marvella Dilley gave a very interesting report on her trip to Norman Beaty Hospital. Reports were given by special leaders.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Phyllis Uehlein November 4 at 8 p.m.

Halloween Parties Planned For Thursday

Folks, young and old, will have an opportunity to doll up next Thursday evening, though for a diferent purpose than the usual "dressing up" for an evening's outing. Next Thursday's dressing up will be for Halloween parties to be held at St. Joe and Spencerville.

The party at the gym in St. Joe will be preceded by the usual parade starting in the business district at 7:30 p. m. Adults as well as children are invited to participate in the parade as well as the party at the gym.

The party, annually sponsored by the St. Joe Volunteer Fire Department, will then bring prizes, treats and entertainment at the gym. The Riverdale P.T.A. will have a refreshment stand at the party as in past years.

At Spencerville the Community Club is sponsoring the party for that community to be held in the communjty building. Prizes will be awarded for oustanding costumes and there will be entertainment and refreshments.

SPENCER TWP. HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB

The Spencer Township Home Demonstration Club met October 16 at Chaney's Restaurant with Lois Fisher and Hazel Washler as hostesses.

The meeting was called to order by Nellie Allen. Thirteen members answered roll call with "my pet peeve."

The club creed was led by Marie Ward. Grace Laub gave devotions. She used as her there, "Happy State of the Godly," taken from Psalm 91.

All sang Indiana Our Indiana led by Valda Brown. The president gave a report on the council meeting she attended.

The following officers were elected for 1958:

Nellie Allen, 1st vice president.

Lois Fisher, 2nd vice president.

Alice Kagey, 3rd vice president.

Berniece Wilder, secretary.

Marjie Dwyer, reporter.

Eleanor Crothers, treasurer.

The meeting closed with the club prayer.

After the meeting the third quarterly birthday surtion was held. Marie Ward was auctioneer.

Delicious refreshments were served by the committee.

John Koch Takes Own Life

Despondency over the death of his wife last July 17 apparently led John C. Koch, 76, of Spencerville to take his life last Thursday morning. He died of a self-inflicted shotgun wound in the chest. The trigger guard had been removed from a double barrel 12 gauge shot gun. Mr. Koch loaded it with a single shell, removed his right boot and used his toes to depress the trigger as he held the open barrel of the gun against his chest.

The body was found at 4:45 p.m. Thursday by a son, Virgil, who was returning clothing laundered by his wife for the elder Koch. When the son arrived at the home he found the house locked but checked the garage when he noticed his father's car parked inside the double garage. He found the body of his father in the garage.

Funeral services were conducted Sunday in the Spencerville Methodist Church where Mr. Koch had served as Sunday school superintendent for 40 years until 1956. Rev. Henry Weber officiated at the services and burial was in White City Cemetery.

Survivors include two sons, Virgil of Spencerville and Otis of Fort Wayne, 7 grandchildren and 4 great-grandchildren. Mr. Koch was preceded in death by his wife last July and a sister, Mrs. Gertrude Smith, of Allen County.

To Dedicate School On Oct. 27

Dedication of the Wee Haven School For Retarded Children will be held on Sunday, October 27, at Garrett it has been announced. The dedication program will begin at 1:30 p. m. CST or 2:30 DST.

Guest speaker will be Mr. E. C. Gullion, vice president of Wabash College. Rev. Peter Soudah will lead prayer and read Scripture and Rev. Edward Roswog will give the closing prayer and benediction. Music will be presented by the school choir and by Mr. Robert Cocherille, guest soloist.

History of the school reveals that in November of 1954, 18 men and women met in the basement room of the Garrett Public Library, 11 of whom were parents of mentally retarded children. Some had taken their children daily to the school for retarded children in Fort Wayne.

This meeting was addressed by Mr. McConnel of Elkhart. It is likely from subsequent events that his listeners forgot most of what was said except one sentence. This was, "If you are going to start a school, start it now and do not even wait to form an organization."

Acting on this advice and with the offer of the parents to pay $5.00 per week tuition, a teacher was employed and the school began on December 6, 1954. Rooms were offered for use by the Veterans of Foreign Wars on the second floor of their building. Societies, organizations and individuals responded so well that all expenses were met each month and year.

In February of 1955 the DeKalb County Association for Retarded Children was incorporated as a non-profit organization under the laws of the State of Indiana. In this short period organizational meetings had been held and rules adopted and officers elected. Membership fee was set at $1.50 per year.

No child who could benefit by the services would be refused admission to the school, regardless of race, creed or color. No child whose parents could not pay the tuition would be refused admission. The Association with the help of the community would meet their expense.

Children from neighboring counties would be welcomed to the school, and membership in the Association would be open to people of neighboring counties until such time as these counties would form their own association.

The community response was both immediate and liberal. Interest grew so fast that by the early spring of 1956 plans were under way to build a school for the purpose.

The building to be dedicated on October 27 is the result of this community response. It can be added to as the school grows and more facilities are needed.

Services Held For Lloyd Goldsmith

A native and life-long resident of Jackson Township, Lloyd Grover Goldsmith, 72, died at his home west of Spencerville at 10 p.m. Friday.

Mr. Goldsmith had been in ill health since he suffered a stroke of paralysis on September 18, 1936. A coronary occlusion caused his death.

Mr. Goldsmith was born April 10, 1885, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Goldsmith of Jackson Township. He and Edna Grubb were married February 12, 1914.

Survivors include the widow; a sister, Mrs. Alda Pervine of Auburn; and a nephew, Merle Wayne Goldsmith, of Spencer Township.

A brother, John Goldsmith, of Spencer Township died January 1 this year and a sister, Pearl Goldsmith, of Auburn died May 29 of this year.

Funeral services were conducted at the Baidinger-Walter Funeral Home Monday afternoon. Burial was at Auburn,

OUR MINISTER

At the pulpit of our little church,
Our local minister stands;
The 'word of God' comes from his mouth,
And he gestures with his hands.

He bears with us our burdens,
And tells us of our sin;
Then he encourages us,
A new life to begin.

On prayer meeting evening,
A lesson we always get;
Then there are prayers for others,
Who have not received 'Him' yet.

May God bless our minister.
And bless our people too;
May we live for others,
As God would have us do.

Letters to the Editor

14 October 1957

Hi Ted,

Well I have been aboard my ship just about a month now, and I like it. It is a big ship, a repair ship. We are about always in port, except we go out to sea about every four months and that is so we can earn sea pay. We are suppose to go out the middle of November, and I think we are going to Jacksonville, Florida for a week or so. When we do go to sea, we only go to Jacksonville, Boston, New York and places like that.

I have got a easy racket here on this ship. I am a yeoman on the Staff of the Commander Service Squadron Four. But I guess next week or so they the going to make me Staff Driver. All I will be doing is driving the Officers where they want to go. That will be a better racket than I have now.

The main reason I am writing is because I received the St. Joe News today and it had my address wrong. It didn't have my division, which is Staff division. So my correct address is as follows:

Donald Baker, S.N. 456-09-25
Staff Division
USS Vulcan (AR-5)
c-o FPO, Norfolk, Virginia

I will sure appreciate it if you will let the folks around home know my correct address Ted. Because this is a big ship and they wouldn't know which division to give the mail to if my division wasn't on it, and it sure helps to here from home.

Well I guess that is about all I have to say for now, except that I ran into Larry Emenhiser and Tom Hollabaugh last week for the first time since we joined the Navy. It sure was good to see them again. I got to go for now.

As ever,
Don Baker

The late John M. Schribner, a prominent member of the New York bar, was as bald as an onion. He was speaking to Mr. Josepr H. Choate about the approaching marriage of one of the Vanderbilts to a foreign nobleman.

"It would be absurd to give a costly gift," he said. "I should like to find something not intrinsically valuable, but interesting because it is rare."

"Nothing easier, John," Mr. Choate said. "Just send her a lock of your hair."

Well now, since we are somewhat scarce, or should we say short, on hair ourselves, we have selected many, many gifts from all over the world for our and your giving. All of these are at our uptown store.

You may remember that a few weeks ago we told you that we had built some new shelving for our gifts. It has developed that the shelving was not enough so we have added 102 feet of new shelving this week. Do come in and look over our gift items. You may not need any gift items right now, but you can acquaint yourself with our stock for your future shopping.

CHRISTIAN FREEDOM

Lesson for October 27, 1957

Life would be simpler if it were all in clear black-and-white. There is no mistaking one for the other. Daylight and dark can't be confused. But twilight is confused and confusing. There are some actions, some ways of living, which are evidently and undeniably good; there are others which are just as plainly bad. (Quoting again from Billy Sunday: "If a man starts arguing with you that stealing isn't a sin, don't argue with him - search him!") But there are many problems in living which can't be solved by simple rule. There are many actions about which sincere Christians may differ, some saying Do, others saying Don't.

Twilight Zone

In the twilight zone are many actions, or proposed actions, which are really unprecedented. The Bible says nothing about them, even the state's legal code may not mention them. One day a woman threw a whiskey bottle at the door of England's prime minister. She was arrested and fined. But she said to the judge, "I'll be back with another bottle. The government is throwing hydrogen bombs, and throwing bottles is nothing near so wicked as that. This is my protest against the wickedness of the H-bomb." Well, it is certainly against the law to throw bottles. It's not against the law to experiment with H-bombs. But many people would feel the woman was right, no carload of glass bottles can do a small part of the harm that one H-bomb can do. But it's in the twilight zone. More simple, personal matters are also in the twilight zone. Is it right or wrong for a Christian to attend the theater, to read a book of fiction, to use tobacco, to drink wine, beer, whiskey, gin? Christians are not unanimous in their verdicts.

Abusing Freedom

We can get a good deal of light on at least part of the twilight zone, by reading Paul, and the Gospels. Paul gives us a guiding line which can appeal only to Christians; but for Christians it is a strong directive. At Corinth, for example, there was a peculiar sort of twilight zone problem, the question of meat that had been offered to idols. In every Greek butcher shop there were cuts of beef, veal, lamb and so forth, just as in our super markets, only of course much less sanitary. When the 20th century housekeeper goes shopping for a steak, she does not inquire how the cow died. Presumably it was killed by some one paid for doing such things. But there is nothing religious about a slaughter house. In Corinth, in the first century, on the contrary, the cow from whose dead body the steak was taken very likely had died in a religious ceremony, killed in sacrifice on altars dark with blood and black with fire and smoke. After the ceremony in the temple, most of the dead animal would be taken and sold in the market place - and so find its way to the tables of the ladies of Corinth.

The problem was: could a Christian eat steaks and chops from animals slaughtered in heathen religious rites? It was a twilight zone question. Many Corinthians were saying, "Certainly, I can eat without sin. Idolatry is bad, but if a cow breathed her last in an idol's temple, that doesn't infect the roast beef with sin!"

Using Freedom

Wait a minute, Paul says in effect, when they ask him about this. You are free, to be sure. This particular twilight zone thing is not a sin. Eating such meat is not an approval of idolatry at all. But suppose some weaker brother knows what you are doing, and concludes that you are approving idol-worship? Then what? Then the question is not any longer, is this particular act right or wrong? The question for you is, what will be the effect ON MY BROTHER if I do this thing that I am free to do? This brother may be weak, he may even be stupid; but Christ died for him. Are you going to drive back into sin this man for whom Christ died? So it is with many twilight zone acts today. You may be strong, and free; doing them will not hurt you at all. But what about other people? I am never so free, if I am a Christian, that I have a right to abuse my freedom by leading some one else into what for him is sin.

what makes a house A Home?

Your new home is finished, and you have the keys to a shiny new lock. All the appliances have been installed, and you're ready to move in. But there's one more thing that has to be done before your house can really come to life—make sure there will always be adequate electricity and dependable service.

Only when this is done can you begin enjoying life in your new home. It takes this for Mom to bake the family's favorite pie on that shiny new electric range . . . to wash and dry the family's clothes in the electric washer and dryer . . . to adjust the electric heat in the baby's room to the exact temperature . . . for Dad to relax in his workshop or watch his favorite "Western" on TV.

Turning a house into a home requires a simple electrical conection, but it's one that is important to modern living. It's a connection that is backed by I&M's dependable sources of power and skilled employees. It's the one thing that makes it possible for you to . . .

A man lost a valuable dog and advertised in a newspaper offering five hundred dollars for it, but got no replies. He called at the office. "I want to see the advertising manager," he said. "He's out," said the office boy. "Well, how about the assistant?" "He's out too, sir." "Then I'll see the editor." "He's out, sir." "Goodness, is every body out?" "Yes, they're all out hunting your dog."

That ad really got some action, didn't it? I read most of the ads in about seven newspapers. I read about special savings on bedroom suites, living room suites, refrigerators, washers, dryers, dinettes, etc.

We haven't rushed right out to make purchases at these various places because, do you know, we have better buys than any that we have seen advertised!
